Big St. Ry. Receipts But Deficit Claimed

The biggest agitation during the year 1920 was over the street railway service—whether or not Weymouth should appropriate money to meet any deficit in the operating expenses of the street railway in Weymouth.

As the result of a special town meeting it will be remembered the sum of $28,000.00 was appropriated to meet any deficit for the year ending June 1, 1921.

Reference to the report of Town Accountant Dizer in the Town Book shows that the town had expended Dec. 31, 1920 but $400, which was the balance of the 1919 appropriation, leaving the $28,000 intact in the town treasury.

Had the voters known that none of this sum would have been expended in 1920, a reduction of $2.00 in the tax rate would have been possible.

Reference to the report of the Weymouth Committee on Transportation, pages 181 and 182 of the Town Book, shows that some of this balance of $28,000 may be expended in 1921, as the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company CLAIM that there was a deficit of $27,531.63 for the seven months ending Nov. 30, 1920. The Gazette quotes from the report of the Weymouth committee, of which A. C. Heald's chairman:

"According to latest report of the Comptroller of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company showing statement of Weymouth Subdivision Operations for the seven months ending November 30, 1920—a copy of which is appended hereto—the deficit is $27,531.63, one-half of which amount, $13,765.81, will have to be assumed by the Town, leaving an unexpended balance of $14,234.19. Detailed report of operations and copy of agreement under which we are operating have been filed with the Clerk of the Selectmen."

Doubtless many will take exceptions to some of the items in the statement of the comptroller for the seven months which is given in full below. The income was $57,696.98, and a local company could have made a big profit on that sum if they were the sole owners and operators. The question might well be asked, what is the proper capitalization of the Weymouth division of the street railway?

C. M. A. MEN'S CLUB

Some 70 men enjoyed the dinner and talk on Siberia at the Men's Club of the Clapp Memorial Association on Wednesday evening. Coach Fabian and his good looking corps of white coated young men saw to it that all present were promptly and bountifully served to a roast beef dinner with baked potatoes and green peas. Salad and a dessert of ice cream, cake and chocolate.

Opening remarks were by President William J. Holbrook of the club, who reminded those present that few realized the important position Russia holds in present day discussions; the solution of whose difficulties is very vital to the world at large.

It was with pleasure he introduced the speaker of the evening, Col. Hugh J. Gallagher, U. S. A., with Northeastern Department. It is our good fortune to hear from one who thru personal touch can tell of Siberia.

The Colonel opened his address by describing several pictures that were thrown on the screen of Vladivostok, where he was stationed for a time. It was a port having one of the finest harbors in the world, was very picturesque and meeting place of ships from all countries.

The American troops were quartered in good brick barracks, due to fact here was stationed before the great war, the largest Russian garrison.

Another picture showed the side door Pullman, so termed by the Yankee from his experience in foreign box cars. A camp of the A. E. F.

some 2000 miles east of Vladivostok, prettily located in a pine grove.

The speaker wondered if many realized the immense size of Siberia, a country over 7000 miles from East to West, or twice the distance across our country.

The duties of the A. E. F. was to guard the railroad, keeping all roads open for communications and transfer of supplies to the interior, a good size job, but well done by the Americans.

The big question today is what will the outcome in Russia be. It probably will never return to the absolute monarchy and yet it needs a strong guiding hand. Kerensky, a young idealist, failed because he did not understand the people, any more than the rich now understand the peasant. His first and fatal mistake was to remove rank in the Army, caused no discipline, and the latter became easily swayed.

Then Lenine, aided by the Germans, crossed the Swiss border concealed in a box car and became the popular hero.

With no army, practically no government or control, and with considerable propaganda dropped from German air planes, all was far from peaceful. A real Russian patriot was helpless.

And it will take a long time to again build up a stable government.

Also the Russians are led to believe that it is the desire of the Allies to divide and separate their country.

This is the doctrine preached by Lenine and Trotsky and make them popular among the people, until they learn otherwise. Former President

Weymouth Bill Signed by Gov. Cox

On Monday Gov. Cox signed the Act in favor of limited town meetings in the Town of Weymouth, which will not become operative until accepted by the voters.

It provides for a new division of the town into precincts, limited town meetings, town meeting members, a referendum, and an annual moderator, and is known as Chapter 61, Acts of 1921.

Before passage Section 8 of the bill was amended on motion of Representative Tirrell, by striking out the first sentence and inserting in place thereof the following: "No measure passed at any representative town meeting, except a vote to adjourn or a measure appropriating or borrowing money for emergency purposes which shall contain a preamble specifying the facts constituting the emergency and requiring for its passage a separate vote of two thirds of the town meeting members present and voting thereon, shall become operative until after the expiration of five days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, from the dissolution of the meeting."

Thru kindness of Representative Tirrell the Gazette has received a copy of the new chapter, but too late to use this week, but it will be published in Gazette next week.

THE TOWN MEETING

But little talk is heard concerning the articles in the warrant for the Annual Town Meeting next Monday evening, although there are several calling for large appropriations and new departures.

North Weymouth wants additional school accommodations, which seems to be needed, when the building boom starts two new buildings may be required instead of one. Certainly a lot should be purchased.

One article calls for an appropriation of $5000 for a town history, which has been in preparation for some time. A revenue will be derived from the sale of books, but it is usually less than estimated.

Among the wants of the street department are: $3500 for permanent sidewalks; $2000 for tearing up street railway on Pleasant and Pond streets and rebuilding the streets; $15,000 for macadam pavement; and $20,000 for asphalt macadam roads.

One article asks for an appropriation to connect with the Metropolitan Water System, which might involve several hundred thousand dollars. The department also asks for $87,112.50, of which $10,000 would be for extensions.

An appropriation is wanted to purchase an estate for an almshouse.

Firemen are interested in the article to provide for the appointment of Fire Chief by the Selectmen, also in other appropriations for the department.

The article for the Police department is brief, but may cause discussion.

There are 74 articles in the warrant. Whether the half will accommodate all the voters who wish to attend, is very doubtful.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Organized Labor Defies United States Government in Matter of Injunctions.

IS READY FOR BIG FIGHT

"Bill of Rights" and Legislative Demands Issued—Harding Completes His Cabinet—America Protests Japanese Rule Over Yap—Near East Conference in London.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Organized labor of America has been down before its "enemies" the past few days. The United States government is apparently included among those "enemies" and is boldly defied to enforce judicial injunctions in industrial disputes.

Under the leadership of Samuel Gompers the representatives of the national and international unions are announcing a defiance of the government and the courts. There is much besides the injunction matter, but that is perhaps the most important. A statement prepared by Mr. Gompers was issued in which the injunction as now used is denounced as unconstitutional and a pure usurpation of power and authority. The only remedy in the hands of the workers, continues the statement, "lies in a flat refusal on the part of labor to recognize or abide by the terms of injunctions which seek to prohibit the doing of acts which the workers have a lawful and guaranteed right to do or which seek to compel workers to do those things which they have a lawful and guaranteed right to refuse to do."

"This is the only immediate course through which labor can find relief, and this course it purposes to pursue. Labor realizes fully the consequences of such a course, but in the defense of American freedom and of American institutions it is compelled to adopt this course, be the consequences what they may."

Of course if this threat is carried out the result will be the arrest of great numbers of working men for violations of injunctions; and, presuming that the courts and government do not yield and that union labor brings into action all its resources, something little short of a state of rebellion will follow. Union labor thinks that its very existence as such is threatened by present tendencies and conditions. Other citizens must see that the threat is directed against the peace of the nation and all that that involves. Nor will the informed and thinking American accept as the truth the statement of Gompers, that only the Federation of Labor is saving the country from Bolshevism. The Reds have done and can do much mischief in America, but there is no real danger of their gaining control here or upsetting our government.

Public support and recognition is asked by the labor leaders for these propositions, comprising their "bill of rights":

The right of the working people to organize into trade unions for the protection of their rights and interests.

The right to, and practice of, collective bargaining by trade unions, through representatives of their own choosing.

The right to work, and to cease work, collectively.

The right collectively to bestow or withhold patronage.

The right to the exercise of collective activities in furtherance of the welfare of labor.

Their legislative program is summarized thus:

"Enactment by congress of legislation to protect the workers in their organized capacity against the concept that there is a property right in human labor."

"No application of the use of injunctions in industrial disputes where they would not apply in the absence of such disputes."

"Prohibition of immigration for not less than two years."

"More general application of the initiative and referendum in the political affairs of the United States and of the states."

"Removal by congress of the usurped power of courts to declare unconstitutional laws enacted by congress."

"Election of judges."

"Immediate restoration of exemption from, or the repeal of, all anti-combination and so-called conspiracy laws."

"Restoration of an adequate federal employment service."

"Administration of credit as a public trust in the interest of all the people."

"Repeal by the states of all industrial court laws and all restrictive and coercive laws, including the so-called open port law of Texas, and freedom from decisions of courts holding trade unions, and individual members thereof, liable in damages for the unlawful acts of others."

"Enactment by congress of a law declaring that labor organizations are not co-partnerships and shall not be so treated in law or equity."

"Investigation by congress of the activities of so-called private detective agencies and of industrial spies."

The completed cabinet may not have caused any loud cheers of enthusiasm, but it was received with quiet satisfaction and confidence by a large part of the public. Though the list of names does not include those of a number of towering eminence, it is a list of most Republicans. At least, the members of the new cabinet are men with ideas and opinions and they will be actually the advisers of the chief executive. The only real change among the appointments was Edwin Danby of Michigan as secretary of the navy. Not that he was well equipped to fill the position, but he was barely mentioned in the portfolio of commerce was given to the public, and that of Mr. Davis for secretary of labor pleased most of the organized labor forces of the country, though he is no longer directly connected with their activities.

Frank Lowden, having declined appointment, Illinois received no place in the cabinet. But many persons are hoping that Mr. Harding will persuade Charles Daves of Chicago to accept the chairmanship of the commission he will name to reorganize the executive machinery of the government. This position, Mr. Harding holds, will be almost if not quite as important as a place in the cabinet.

The two great agencies of the allies—the supreme council and the council of the League of Nations—began sessions last week, the former in London and the latter in Paris. The league council first took up the matter of amendments to the covenant, and, because the attitude of the incoming administration in America was in doubt, the question was referred to a committee which will not report before April. This gives Mr. Harding time to define his position on the league. Then the mandates were brought up for consideration, and again the United States, though not officially represented, made its influence felt. Ambassador Wallace sent word that our State department wished to present its views, and action was halted until the note from Washington arrived. This note, in substance, called attention to the fact that the United States has never given its consent that the island of Yap be included in the territories subjected to the mandate of Japan, and declares the government cannot regard itself as bound by the terms of that mandate. It asked the council to submit the question to a new investigation.

Secretary Colby also claimed for the United States an equal concern and interest with the other principal allied and associated powers in the disposition of the overseas possessions of Germany.

The net result of this writing, is a decision to delay all mandate action until the May meeting of the league.

The conference in London dealt with the problem of the Near East and the possibility of revising the Sevres treaty. Turkish delegations representing both the Constantinople and the Angora governments were present and the first part of the week was wasted in their efforts to get together and present a detailed statement of their desires. They finally agreed on demands that Thrace, Smyrna and the Dardanelles be restored to Turkey, and objections to the political, economic and financial control exercised by the allies. However, Rechad Pasha speaking for both groups, assured the conferees that both sections would accept the decision of the allies. The demand that the custody of the Dardanelles be resigned again to the Turks caused much surprise and unfavorable comment, even among the French delegates, who have been generally on the side of Turkey in the present controversy. The Greeks remain uncompromising in their demand that the treaty of Sevres stand virtually unaltered, and it was considered possible the great powers might permit them to try to hold their positions in Turkey, though without assistance from the allies.

According to advices from Constantinople, the Bolsheviks in the Caucasus region have begun work against the republic of Georgia. They already have occupied considerable territory. First dispatches said the Reds, under command of Budenny, had captured Tiflis, the capital, but later it was reported they had been driven back from the city by the hastily gathered Georgian troops. There is little doubt of the ability of the Bolsheviks to overrun Georgia and reach Erzerum, there establishing contact with the forces of Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

Another Red drive took place in Persia and resulted in the capture of Teheran, the capital, and of the shah himself. This exploit was carried out by several thousands of Persian Cossacks under Reza Khan, who landed on the south shore of the Caspian sea and marched to Kasbin and thence to Teheran. Notwithstanding these movements in the east, the great bulk of the Russian Bolshevik army is on the west border preparing for the big spring drive there.

From German news sources comes the information that Montenegro, which has never ceased to protest against the loss of her identity in the formation of the new Jugo-Slavian state, has declared a holy war against Serbia. The message said two Serbian regiments had occupied Cetinje, the Montenegrin capital, and that the situation was considered serious.

While the "war" in Ireland was being carried on with renewed vigor by both sides, the house of commons last week engaged in long and exciting debates on the Irish question. At one time, in rejecting an opposition amendment by a vote of 257 to 88 the house placed its seal of approval on the government's Irish policy. Lord Robert Cecil made his debut as whip of the opposition party in an effective speech in which he demanded that an impartial investigation of the alleged atrocities in Ireland. Sir Hamar Greenwood warned the house that the conspiracy of the Sinn Fein was now directed against England; and he told of a captured document which showed an appropriation of £30,000 a month for the "republican army," most of which money, he asserted, came from Irish-Americans.

Justice Cohalan of the Supreme court of New York, one of the most obnoxious of the anti-English Irishmen in this country, made himself more ridiculous than usual last week by voicing, in a public address, the opinion that the United States should demand of Great Britain that she make Canada free and forever remove the British flag from this continent.

A notable achievement in aviation was the carrying of mail from San Francisco to Mineola, L. I., in 33 hours and 20 minutes. Four planes, two from each coast, started, but only one finished. It was driven by several different pilots.

CAP and BELLS

A HUMANE CONSTABLE.

The constable of a little country village was a man of exceeding good nature. One day, however, he found it necessary to lock up three tramps who had strayed into his jurisdiction.

Shortly after the arrest he was met by the mayor of the village, who, observing the constable hurrying down the main street, asked:

"Where are you going, constable?" "Oh," explained P. C. 40, "the three tramps I've just locked up want to play whist, and I'm out hunting for a fourth."—London Answers.

Far From Independent. "You are a fortunate man," said the automobile tourist.

"How's that?" asked the farmer. "You are monarch of all you survey."

"I guess you are wrong, stranger. I still owe nine instalments on that tractor you see, my hired man won't pay any attention to what I say, and there's a mortgage on the old home place."

MEASURING THE CHANCES. Neverwed: C'mon. Just another round of larks. If you go now you will have all the more time for the next lot.

Neverwed: Nope. If I beat it now I'll catch her before she's had time to rehearse a long sustained effort.

Secret of Genius. To win success with tongue or pen, the best plan seems to be, To say the old things o'er again But say them differently.

Influential Utterances. "Did your campaign speeches have any real influence?" "I won't say they changed the minds of many auditors," admitted Senator Sorghum. "But I am depending on them to give me the benefit of a favorable impression on the minds of the incoming officials."

Accounting for It. "I hear Mayme Goldie's friends were positively electrified by her vaudeville success."

"Probably it was because she made a short circuit."

Harsh Comment. "Miss Polly Oldgirl was saying the other evening she felt as young as she ever did in her life."

"I don't doubt it; she's getting near her second childhood."

ONE OF THE OTHER.

Mr. B.—Do you think you'll be able to keep up with your neighbors?

Mrs. B.—If we can't, my dear, we'll move.

Jealous Spouse. Bob's wife's cognomen fits her. It surely was no botch; Her given name is "Crystal" And she's always on the watch.

Always Something. "The stovepipe joke seems to have gone out of bus business."

"True, but we have plenty of radiator jokes."

Looking Ahead.

Mr. Multitox—I can't promise you a very merry life as my wife. Me, as an old man, with one foot in the grave, Miss Mainchance—Oh, that's all right. I'll make up for it when your other foot slips.

Substitution.

The Editor—This line won't do: He, cowardly villain, hissed Harold. Harold couldn't hiss those words.

The Author—That's so. Let's make "Expire, spiritless scoundrel."

STREET APPAREL FOR SPRINGTIME

HERE are two youthful followers of the mode outfitted for Easter—and afterward—with new suits, new hats and new footwear. As they are experts in the art of dressing tastefully and as each has made her selections different from the others, it is worth while to study the details of their quiet, springtime apparel for the street. Their suits are widely different, but equally good style, their hats agree only in being small, but in the matter of footwear each has chosen plain silk stockings and low shoes—to be worn with spats when the weather is cool.

The extremes of the box-coat style begin with the jacket at one end and end with the finger-length flaring model at the other. In the youthful, spring-like suit at the left of the picture, there is a short, loosely adjusted jacket with flaring sleeves, a plaited skirt, somewhat longer than the passing styles, and a sash of brightly striped ribbon finished with knot and tassel at the ends. The hat of silk and cellophane braid has a narrow brim and the shoes are plain kid pumps with baby French heels.

The suit at the right is a dignified model, which might be worn by an older woman. Its coat has bands of crepe ribbon as a decoration on collar and skirt, which is quite full; it owns allegiance to the coat-sleeve and is one of the few models having a wide belt that definitely defines the waist line. The skirt is a little longer than the average and quite plain; the turban is of deep blue Batavia cloth and cellophane braid and the smart shoes of suede with strap over the instep and the fashionable baby French heel.

Thin the Walls of Home

IN THE realm of special privilege—that is within the four walls of home—all sorts of negligees blossom out, as varied and unlike each other as flowers in a garden. Here splendor-loving women can go as far as they like, drawing inspiration from all quarters of the earth and of other lands; and this is what they do. If anything odd or beautiful happens to be overlooked by them, some kind genius among costumers is sure to bring the neglected treasure to their notice in an alluring form, to his gain and theirs.

Considering everything the two negligees shown in the picture above are quite unpretentious. One of them in rose and blue georgette is a lovely and fragile looking affair in which old blue in a soft shade is posed over rose color, the blue over-garment showing a wide embroidered border at the bottom and narrow embroidered bands on the bodice. The underslip provides the brief kimono sleeves, and narrow satin ribbon the loose, long girdle weighted with beads and ornaments at the ends.

The loose, straight hanging coat of satin at the right, resembles a kimono more than anything else, but an ingenious fancy has introduced an odd drapery at each side supporting a long silk tassel. Instead of a hem at the bottom a corded edge is draped up and tacked in irregular folds. This is the type of negligee that is enjoying the favor of woman-kind at present, and it is made oftentimes in changeable taffetas that furnish as beautiful colors as georgette can boast. As a rule boudoir coats are shorter than the negligee pictured, and cut on more definite lines with set-in sleeves. They are often made with a long body having a deep flounce set on to form the skirt, and provided with pockets that are ornamental. Frills and ruffles made of the taffeta—especially when their edges are frayed—make the prettiest trimmings.

MENUS ARRANGED FOR USING RICE

This Easily Digested and Mild-Flavored Cereal Deserves Popularity.

IS RELATIVELY CHEAP FOOD

Combines Exceptionally Well With Meat, Cheese and Fruit and Vegetables—Supplies as Much Food as Do Other Cereals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

American rice is as good as that grown anywhere in the world; and with last year's crop about a fourth larger than ever before the housewife should plan to use more rice in the family meals, advise specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Except in the South, rice has never been so popular in this country as it deserves to be. It is relatively cheap, easily digested, so mild in flavor that it combines exceptionally well with meat, cheese, and fruits and vegetables of pronounced flavor. Pound for pound it supplies as much fuel for the body as does white flour, cornmeal and most of the other cereals. Moreover, rice can be served in so many ways that no family need grow tired of it.

Good Served Hot or Cold.

As a breakfast cereal, rice is good served either hot or cold with milk or cream or with fruit. If the rice is cooked in milk in a double boiler (one quart milk to one cupful dry rice), it is especially nutritious and has a richer flavor than when boiled in water.

As a starchy food to eat with meat some persons prefer rice to potatoes, and many others would like it if it were always flaky and well-seasoned. Boiled rice is not sticky when washed thoroughly, cooked in plenty of water, and drained as soon as the grains become soft. Overcooking and using too little salt are common mistakes that have prejudiced many persons against rice as a part of the meat course.

Rice and Fruit Make a Good Salad.

For use in soups, rice is one of the best of all the cereals. It may be cooked in the soup stock, or left-overs of cooked rice may be added just before the soup is served. Soups or gravies may also be thickened with the water in which rice has been boiled.

As a basis for scalloped and stewed dishes substantial enough to be used as the main course of a meal, rice is excellent. Relatively small amounts of some of the higher-priced foods can in this way be made to go further.

Many attractive salads can be made by combining cooked rice with left-over portions of fish, meat, or vegetables.

Rice desserts have long been stand-bys in the American household, but new ones are constantly being added to the list. Some of the simplest rice desserts are best, and are particularly good for children. For example, either hot or cold boiled rice is very good served with jelly, jam, or marmalade, maple syrup, or cinnamon and sugar, or a sauce of fresh, crushed fruits.

The following recipes for cooking rice have been tested in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Boiled Rice.

1 cupful rice. 4 or 5 quarts boiling water. 1 teaspoonful salt.

Wash the rice through several waters, until all the loose starch is removed, and drain it. Have the boiling water—salted—ready in a deep saucepan; slowly drop in the rice, and allow it to boil rapidly for about 15 or 20 minutes or until a grain pressed between the thumb and finger is entirely soft. In order to prevent it from sticking to the pan, lift the rice, if necessary, from time to time with a fork, but do not stir it, for stirring is likely to break the grains. When sufficiently cooked, turn the rice into a colander or sieve, and after the water has drained off, cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the stove or in the oven; or turn the rice into a shallow pan, cover with a lid, and place it in a warm oven for a short time. Treated in this way the grains swell and are kept separate.

Cream of Celery Soup With Rice.

1/2 pound celery or asparagus. 1/2 cupful rice. 1 quart cold water. 2 tablespoonfuls butter, drippings, or other preferred fat. 1 tablespoonful 1 quart milk.

Cut the celery or asparagus in half-inch pieces. Cook the rice and celery or asparagus in the water until both are tender. Press them through a colander and add the fat, the seasonings, and the milk, and reheat. This will make five or six average servings.

Oysters Scalloped With Rice.

3 cupfuls cooked rice. 1 pint fresh oysters. 1 cupful chopped celery. 2 tablespoonfuls butter or other fat. 1/2 cupful milk. 1/2 teaspoonful salt. 1/4 teaspoonful pepper.

Place alternate layers of rice, oysters, and celery in a baking dish and pour over them a smooth white sauce made by melting the butter and stirring in the milk, the flour, the salt, and the pepper. Bake for 20 minutes. This will make eight or ten average servings.

Savory Rice Omelette.

3 eggs. 1/2 cupful cooked rice. 1/2 cupful milk. 1 tablespoonful butter or other fat. 1/2 teaspoonful salt. 1/4 teaspoonful pepper.

Beat the whites and the yolks of the eggs separately. Mix all the ingredients, folding in the whites of eggs last. Pour the mixture into a hot, well-greased frying pan, and when it is brown, fold it over with a flexible-bladed knife. Turn the omelette out on a warm platter and serve immediately.

Rice and Tuna Fish or Salmon Salad.

Remove the bones and skin from a can of salmon or tuna fish, and mince it finely. Add an equal quantity of cold boiled rice, and season the mixture with salt, pepper, and vinegar. Stir in enough boiled salad dressing to moisten it and set it away for a while in a cool place. When ready to serve, add a little crisp celery finely cut, and shape the salad in molds moistened with cold water.

VEGETABLE CHOWDER RECIPE

Best to Learn the Type of Dish and Not Be Confined to Any Definite Formula.

Vegetable chowders offer a good way of using up vegetables and skim milk. It is best to learn the type of dish and not be confined to any definite recipe, say food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, for materials are often wasted thereby which should be used. The following typical recipe is a good one and suggestive of the kind of dish one can easily make:

1/2 pound salt pork or bacon. 1 onion. 1 medium-sized potato. 1 medium-sized tomato. 1 pint stewed tomatoes. 1 green pepper. 4 medium-sized potatoes. 2 cupfuls of skim milk. 2 tablespoonfuls of flour. 2 teaspoonfuls salt.

Put the bacon or pork, onion and pepper through the meat chopper and cook carefully about five minutes. Add the water and tomatoes and cook until the vegetables are tender. Cut the potatoes and carrots into small pieces and cook in water until tender; drain and add with the skim milk to the other ingredients. Thicken with the flour mixed with a little cold milk.

REFRESHMENT FOR CHILDREN

Danger of Overeating Lessened If Food Is Served at Time to Take Place of Regular Meal.

Children's parties present special problems because they give the mother the responsibility for feeding other people's children. One danger of such occasions—that of overeating—will be lessened if the refreshments are served at such a time as to take the place of one of the regular meals of the day. The same care should be taken in selecting foods as in the case of the ordinary meals.

No hard, tough, rich, or highly seasoned foods should be served, say food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Cocoa or some other milk drink, fruit, sandwiches, ice cream or a gelatin dessert, plain frosted cake, and simple candies make a good bill of fare.

TRY OMELET WITH CROUTONS

Recipe Given for Making Dish That Will Tempt Appetites of Great Many People.

A well-made omelet or soufflé is a dish that tempts most people. Try this omelet with croutons for variety. Make croutons by cutting stale bread into one-third-inch cubes; fry in butter until crisp and well browned. Beat five eggs slightly, add four tablespoonfuls of cream or milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, and the browned croutons. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot omelet pan, and when the butter is melted and hot turn in the mixture. As it cooks prick and pick up with a fork until the whole is of a uniform, creamy consistency. Increase the heat and brown quickly underneath, then fold and turn on a hot platter; garnish with sprigs of parsley and serve.

Attractive Skirts for Summer

ON A SUMMER'S day nothing could be more refreshing and attractive to look at than the new separate skirts that are now on display in the shop in anticipation of warm weather. Separate skirts are particularly interesting to the home seamstress because it is easy to make them and the addition of needlework for decorating plain materials adds much to the price of ready-made garments. There are many crepe-de-chine and other crepe weaves in silks as well as baronet and other satins among the newest skirts and they are ornamented with fine tucks, cross-bar tucking, hemstitching, plaited bands, with a few entirely plain models among them.

Casino crepe, canton crepe, crepe de chine and other silk crepes with new and inspiring names, together with heavy satins, are shown in both plain and plaited models. The skirt at the left of the two pictured must be imagined in a medium shade of gray satin, very lustrous and supple. It is the new length which Paris sponsors, a reaction from very short skirts and much more graceful. Its only decoration is a pointed strap of the satin having a row of satin-covered buttons set on it.

Light wool or heavy cotton fabrics, in cross-bar or striped patterns, are usually plaited. The skirt at the right of the two pictured is made of light-weight wool material with two double-box plaits for a front panel and deep side plaits for the sides and back. It is a cool-looking affair in gray and white with triangular pieces at each side of the front plaits, ornamented with pearl buttons and suggesting pockets. Few skirts make much of pockets this season, providing instead trimming in place of them or, at most, very small pockets, ingeniously made.

Laces and Silks Again United

AS IN the past, lace and taffeta go their ways together this season, happily united in dresses for afternoon and evening. They make the prettiest frocks, dressy enough and not too dressy, so that they serve many purposes. Their rivals are made of lace and satin, for lace is an accommodating thing, easily adapted to many other materials.

In the illustration above, black chantilly is shown in combination with taffeta at the right and draped over satin in the dress at the left of the picture. To appreciate the good points of the sprightly model at the right it must be imagined with a plaited skirt of old blue crepe-de-chine having a wide border of black taffeta at the bottom and a bodice of the crepe-de-chine with lace sleeves. The skirt is veiled with an over-skirt of lace and the bodice almost lost sight of under a slip-over sleeveless blouse of black taffeta. There is a girdle of heavy two-toned ribbon, black on one side and blue on the other. When this frock is required to spend the evening in company with others made especially for that purpose, a wreath of little flowers or a handsome corsage may be added to the girdle.

The dignified dress at the left is all black, with short-sleeved under-slip of black satin and draped over-dress of chantilly. Its long tunic is scalloped at the bottom, bound with satin and draped about the hips. Satin binding finishes the neck and short draped sleeves of the over-blouse. A color note is introduced in the model by a soft girdle of metallic ribbon, but if one wished to add to the formality of this gown, it might be replaced by a wide girdle of handsome brocade or by one of the many very rich and elaborate girdles made of ribbon for this very purpose.

Wilson's advice is good, let the Allies keep hands off, and let restoration come from within; some good educated leader will rise and more quickly will the Russian learn to read and write. The speaker thought a Republic was hardly feasible, but felt a few good land laws, plus education and a little free speech, or the right to think, the Russians will work off their difficulties.

The Allies owed a great deal to Russia, she fought well for them, engaging the Germans on the Eastern Front to the relief of the latter's members on Western Front.

Its up to the Allies to keep the friendship and good will of all Russian people. The Colonel felt there could be no peace in the world until there was peace in Russia.

A hearty vote of thanks was given for the very instructive talk. Before adjournment it was stated it was hoped to have Governor Cox at the next meeting of the club.

Rapid Fire of Questions At the Public Forum

In a very striking address Sunday night before the Open Forum at the Union church Prof. Clarence R. Skinner of Tufts College presented the subject: "The Declaration of Independence in Industry." For nearly an hour he held the audience at rapt attention and then for another hour maintained his ground under the rapid fire of questions from the audience.

Dr. Skinner said in part: "In framing the Declaration of Independence our forefathers were thinking in terms of political life. Take for instance the famous expression: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.'"

At the time the country was agricultural; in the year 1920 America passed the mark of being 50% an urban population. Now if we are to be safe we must secure the application of these principles to industrial and social relationships. But so far America, as well as France, England and Germany has made a failure in applying these principles to economic relationships."

The speaker instanced the conditions existing in the West Virginia coal fields where the officers of the law were in the pay of the mine owners; and the United States Steel Corporation, where the paid police represented private interest and freedom of speech, and of the press were constantly abridged. "The press of the United States is in a conspiracy of silence in regard to the steel strike," the speaker declared. "The same condition existed in Lawrence where I sat as a member of the Board of Conciliation. There very often the police themselves incited to riot. People were arrested for reading the Declaration of Independence, parts of the Constitution of the United States and a minister for reading in public the Sermon on the Mount. Thus have we abrogated our freedom."

Professor Skinner said that already there were signs of a new day in the younger men going into industry and applying the democratic ideas to the management of factories and mills. He advocated the application of the Golden Rule in industry, saying that when the men were given responsibility there was increased efficiency, the creative capacity of men rises to meet the increased trust that is placed in them. "The time has arrived for us to believe in men and make the principles of our forefathers effective in all life today."

J. Herbert Walsh, president of the Union Men's club, presided during the meeting; and Harold T. South sang two tenor solos. At the next Forum, on March 20 Charles Kroll of the Kroll Mfg. Co. will speak on: "Labor From a Progressive Employer's Point of View."

How Fires Were Handled Years Ago

JACKSON SQUARE 1850 to 1860

Shortly before the new store was completed the old store caught fire after midnight the week before Thanksgiving and of course was burned flat, as there was no fire department and but one engine in town the Washington, housed on "Burying Hill," North Weymouth, about half way between Norton street and the left-hand cemetery gate, which got there too late to be of much service. The "Little Adams" (so-called) an old hand truck owned by the Weymouth Iron Co. was credited with saving the Bicknell woodshed. This engine might have been and perhaps was the first fire engine ever built, without ornament or paint, and with no suction hose, just a tank, and with two pumps worked by brakes at the end like a "Hunneke" throwing for about two minutes unless constantly replenished from buckets, a stream of 40 feet more or less. The day following the fire the boys were allowed to use it, and all day long we dragged it back and forth from the herring brook. The stream above the new cement bridge was then much wider and shallower, teams being driven through to let the horses drink. Here with buckets we filled the tank and helped by John P. Lovell's old horse "Bob Logie" we drew it up the hill and emptied it upon the ruins. Ben Lovell because of "Bob Logie" of course was our foreman. That was indeed an eventful day, but even better days were to come. After the ruins had somewhat cooled we spent most of our time out of school digging in the ashes. Our most valuable finds were big copper cents in all stages of disfigurement and these we scraped, soaked in vinegar and those that faintly resembled their former state went over the counter of their former owner. There must have been hundreds of them. They got at last to be a nuisance to Mr. Loud and his clerks. After a while they went out of circulation and later it was said that they were held back as they came in and finally buried in the meadow back of the store.

During the fire an incident occurred that made a lot of fun for all us boys, except one "Blummux" Burrell. Among the thousand and one things in stock was a quantity of gunpowder and many feared the result of its explosion. "Blummux" heard the talk and though he had never heard of "Safety First" he acted on the principle, going up to the corner of Station street to await the explosion. Probably didn't hear one, but he surely heard from us the next day. "Blummux" denied it of course, but it didn't go and it was long before he heard the last of it.

Mr. Loud prospered for many years in his new location. Those were the best days of the Weymouth Iron Co. and most of their workmen bought about everything at his store, and he drew nearly all the wages on the monthly pay day at the office in the stone building near the car barn.

Then came a change, first competition, then after struggling for years "The Co." with other New England iron works was forced into bankruptcy by the competition of the Pennsylvania iron works, with coal at their door and iron ore hundreds of miles nearer.

Mr. Loud, always ready to give credit even to strangers, continued to do so for men already owing him hundreds of dollars and when at last forced out of business had accounts footing many thousands of dollars on his books, much of it outlawed and the balance worthless. Mr. Loud outlived all his contemporaries and most of his friends, dying when over 90 a poor man, but those of us who knew him in his prime have not forgotten him. A small part of that owed him by many whom he had befriended and trusted would have kept him in comfort to the end.

O. L. DUNN.

Note—These articles are just the rambling recollections of a period of life, the events of which the mind retains when greater things of later years are forgotten.

WELL DESIGNED HOME FOR FARM

Comfortable Frame House With Stucco Foundation.

WILL KEEP YOUNG AT HOME

Attractive Home Shown Below Contains All the Modern Conveniences of a City Home—Fitted With Labor-Saving Devices.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 137 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

"What can I put into the house that will make it as comfortable and attractive as any home in the city?" That is the question the progressive farmer asks when he starts to build a home. That is the question that should come to the mind of every farmer. If it did we would hear a great deal less about "back to the farm" movements, "keep the boys on the farm" agitation, etc., because there would be no need for any such propaganda. Comfortable farm homes would be the most effective propaganda that could be devised.

It goes without saying that much of the movement to large cities is due to this one cause, poor home conditions. The farm home has in many cases been subordinated to the dairy barn, even the hoghouse or granary. What is the inevitable result? The wife is overburdened with work in dismal surroundings, the children become disgusted and leave for the cities where comforts are available. Happily to say, however, these old notions are gradually disappearing and farm homes are now being built in the most modern style with all the convenience of houses in the city. By these we mean running-water bathrooms, electric light, electric appliances, etc.

Take a look at the attractive house shown here. This is an example of how farm homes are being built today. This is not a mere shelter consisting of four walls and roof, but is a "homey" home, well-designed and arranged and fitted with many conveniences and labor-saving devices that lift much of the burden from the shoulders of the housewife.

Much of the charm of a house lies in the appearance of the exterior, although it is not as important as the inside. Here we have a large front porch, the kind that is needed on the farm, because there are children who need a suitable recreation place on rainy and disagreeable days. In this case the front porch has been screened in, making a delightful sunporch. The house proper is built of frame with shingles above the first floor. It is what is familiarly known as the story-and-a-half type.

First Floor Plan.

The low, wide, sloping roof is covered with prepared roofing and is broken up by a roof dormer in front and rear. The foundation walls which are concrete have been covered with stucco above the building line. The large brick chimney on the right side indicates a fireplace, which is built in the living room. This room is reached directly from the front porch

6 by 18 feet. To the left is a bedroom, 12 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, convenient for the hired help. In case this bedroom is not needed the partition can be taken out and the entire front of the house made into one large living room.

Identical in size and shape with the living room, and directly in rear of it, connected by an open doorway is the dining room which is lighted by a half-bay window on one side. It opens into a small hall on one side and into the kitchen at the rear. The kitchen is small in keeping with the trend in modern homebuilding and adjoins a washroom, one of the essential features of the real farm home. This extra room is provided for the men coming in from the fields and keeps them out of the kitchen, which the wife needs for preparing the meals. A small lavatory is also located on the lower floor.

The upper floor, or half-story, is divided up in bedrooms, bath and storage room. The latter can be very easily converted into an additional bedroom by the use of some wall-board and a few hours' work. Otherwise it is very convenient for storing clothes out of season. There are two bedrooms on this floor, one 13 feet 6 inches by 14 feet, the other 13 by 12 feet.

There is every reason in the world to believe that this home will help in keeping the farm family together. More of them are being built every day.

NO SNAKE QUITE HARMLESS

French Biologists, Through Experiments, Have Proved That Blood and Saliva Produce Toxic Effects.

Only snakes with poison fangs have been regarded as dangerous, but certain French biologists, especially Dr. C. and Madame Marie Phisalix, have found reasons for believing that the blood and saliva of all serpents may produce toxic effects. The venomous action has been demonstrated by experiments on birds, guinea pigs, rodents, and lizards, with the secretion of the parotid glands of certain colubers, common and so-called harmless snakes, and with the blood of snakes of this order that do not have parotid glands. The effects were analogous to those from the secretion of the poison glands of cobras, vipers and rattlesnakes. In batrachians two kinds of venom are found. Mucous venom, from the mucous glands existing chiefly on the abdomen, exerts a paralyzing action, and when injected into the veins produces stupor, with a sudden stopping of respiration. Two rabbits were killed by water in which a common edible green frog had been washed. Granular venom, from the larger granular glands existing only on the back, is a very active poison in some species, and gives rise to such symptoms as terror, hallucination, vomiting and convulsions.

Dreaming of Hair.

For a man to dream his hair is long like that of a woman signifies a weak mind and a cowardly nature, also deception will be practiced of which he will be the victim. To dream you have short black curly hair is a sign of secret sorrow. To have red hair is an evil omen to all except barbers and hair dressers, to whom it promises an increase in business. White hair, honor and wealth. To dream your hair falls out is a sign of approaching evil, loss of a friend. Smooth, well-combed hair foretells happiness and the ending of an old misunderstanding between friends. Disordered, tangled hair signifies deep grief. To dream the hair is longer and darker than usual, increase of wealth.

POULTRY

CAUSE HENS TO LAY BETTER

Matter of Feeding During Cold Weather Entails Use of Large Amount of Common Sense.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On the feeding of the flock depends to a large extent not only the general health of the birds, but also the economy which promotes success. It is a subject, however, which should be studied with a large amount of common sense, for there are no hard and fast rules which can be laid down as applying to every case. The price of feeds and the general environment should be considered in determining the right rations, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

For the largest profit a good proportion of the eggs should be secured during the winter. If two extra eggs a week can be obtained from each hen a good profit will be made, while if the product is increased by only one egg a week in winter, this one egg will pay for all the feed the hen eats. To obtain this greater production not only should the fowls be young and of a good laying breed, but the feeder should have full knowledge of the proper feed and its preparation.

The nutriment in the feed of laying hens serves a twofold purpose—to repair waste and furnish heat to the body and to supply the egg-making materials. As only the surplus over what is needed for the body is available for egg production, the proper feeds should be fed in sufficient quantities to induce this production.

In supplying feed to fowls there are three kinds of constituents which should be present in certain fairly well-fixed proportions if the desired results are to be obtained most economically. These constituents are mineral, nitrogenous and carbonaceous; all which are contained in corn, wheat, oats and barley, but not in the right proportions to give the greatest egg yield. In addition some animal feed and green feed should be supplied.

Green Feed Is Quite Essential to the Production of Eggs in Winter.

In feeding poultry a valuable lesson may be learned from nature. In spring the production of eggs on the farm is an easy matter. Fowls at liberty to roam find an abundance of green and animal feed on their range, which with grain furnishes a perfect ration for laying hens. In addition to this they get plenty of exercise and fresh air. So far as lies within his power, then, the feeder should aim to make the winter conditions springlike.

RED MITES VERY INJURIOUS

Insects Lower Vitality, Produce Anemia, Reduce Egg Production and Annoy Fowls.

Red mites are blood-sucking insects that live in the houses, in the cracks about the nests, droppings, boards, and perches during the day and crawl onto the bodies of the birds at night, doing serious injury. Red mites lower vitality, produce anemia, lower egg production and greatly annoy the hens. They can be easily gotten rid of by painting the infested places in the house with gas tar, diluted with equal parts with kerosene, or by carbolineum, or one of many good commercial perch paints. It should be kept in mind that the place to fight the mites is the house and not the birds themselves.

CURE FOR EGG-EATING HABIT

Owner Should Make Good Use of Ax on Hen That Has Acquired Depraved Appetite.

The hen that eats her own eggs and those of other hens has formed a habit that cannot be broken. Cut off her head with an ax. A depraved appetite may be acquired by seeing some other hen eat an egg, as one hog learns from another to eat chickens. A lack of food or of grit, especially of meat scrap, may be a contributing factor.

PROPER SHELTER FOR SHEEP

Animals Do Not Require Expensive Buildings but Must Have Protection in Wet Seasons.

Sheep do not require expensive buildings, but should have some protection from wet weather. A shed open to the south with a well-drained yard is excellent quarters in which to use sheep.

NEW TYPE MAIL BOX

By means of this new type mail box, made without lid or covering of any kind, attached to street cars operating in Washington, between Georgetown and Rockville, letters can be placed in the hands of the postman several hours earlier than by the street box. Letters may be dropped into the top while cars are in motion. The plan is receiving its official test on this line and may later be installed on all interurban cars. The postman is shown receiving the mail at the end of the line.

"YOU, YOU HUZZY!"

Synopsis.—Lonely and friendless, Tonnibel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley, Utah Devon, Tony's father, announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Utah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. She finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to a Doctor Pendlehaven. With the Pendlehavens, a family of wealth, live Mrs. Curtis, a cousin, her daughter and son, Katherine Curtis and Reginald Brown. Katherine is in love with Philip MacCauley. Tonnibel returns the picture to Doctor John, and learns it belongs to his brother, Dr. Paul Pendlehaven. It is a portrait of Doctor Paul's daughter, stolen in infancy. Doctor John goes with Tony to the canal boat. Mrs. Devon is deeply agitated and makes Tony swear she will never tell of Devon's brutality. The older Devons disappear and Tony is taken into the Pendlehaven house as a companion to Doctor Paul. Philip fights with Reginald on the boat and saves Tony. Utah appears, orders Philip off and looks up Tony. Philip again rescues her. They exchange love vows. Doctor Paul improves and the Curtises are furious over her presence. Philip and Tony unexpectedly meet in the Pendlehaven home.

CHAPTER X—Continued.

She went extremely pale and put out her hand to grasp something for support as if she were going to fall. She saw him rise up slowly, an expression of amazement and relief going across his face. She smiled, but what a weary little smile it was and how full of pleading, as if she were silently begging him to forgive her for some deed she'd done.

John Pendlehaven gazed at the two young people, and then he too got to his feet.

"Philip," he said abruptly, "this is Tonnibel Devon. She's Paul's companion. We have—"

Philip interrupted the speaker by his sudden bound around the table. "Tony Devon, little Tony," he cried. "I thought, oh, I thought you were dead. I thought I'd lost you forever."

A noise fell from Katherine's lips, and Mrs. Curtis stumbled to her feet.

"So you know her too, Philip," she snarled with a hasty glance at her pallid daughter. "I thought we'd kept her well out of your way. So you've played the sneak while eating bread and butter in my house, miss," she blurted at Tony. "Well, it's what one might have expected of you—you huzzy."

"Mother!" gasped Katherine, as Tonnibel snatched her hands from Philip. "Kathie, you needn't 'mother me!' cried Mrs. Curtis, blind with rage. "Either she goes away or I do. I won't stay in the house with a common sneak—a common—"

"Sarah, sit down," thundered John Pendlehaven. "Don't speak another such word or—"

Tony was at the doctor's side before he could finish his threat.

"I didn't sneak," she said, looking up at him. "Oh, please—please believe me."

"That she didn't," cried Philip, coming to her side. "Cousin John, I've known Tony Devon ages, and I didn't even know she was in this house." He turned his flashing eyes upon Mrs. Curtis, who was weeping hysterically. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, Cousin Sarah," he went on, "to use such language to a perfectly nice little girl. Why, you've just about broken her heart."

His voice had sunk to a passionate whisper. His eyes misted in a youthful struggle to control his joy, and—and at the sight of him, Katherine lost her wits entirely.

"Who and what have we been harboring in this house, Cousin John?" she shrieked in a high thin voice, struggling to her feet. "A gutter rat, a little snake, a loose girl—"

Each word, brought out with greater vehemence and passion than the one before, struck the listeners dumb. In shame-faced misery, Tonnibel sank to the floor, dropping her head into her hands.

"Oh, no, I'm not that," she wailed. "My mummy never lived in the gutter; she never did. I was poor, awful poor—"

"Poor!" exclaimed Katherine. "You're worse than poor. I suppose you've wheedled Philip the same way you have Cousin Paul."

"Katherine, I command you to be silent," shouted Pendlehaven. "If you say another word, I shall ask you to leave my house."

"Well, I never!" screamed Mrs. Curtis.

"And you too, Sarah," thrust in the doctor. "We don't know the truth of this thing, but I know very well that Tony Devon is not a bad girl."

"That she is not," interjected Philip. "Now I'll tell you all about it."

As John Pendlehaven raised her to her feet, Tonnibel lifted her head and fixed her tearful eyes on Captain MacCauley.

"You promised you'd never tell anybody," she murmured. Her mind was with the dead Edith Devon, and the words of her own serious reverent oath given in the presence of her wild-eyed mother would not allow her to consent that Philip should lift the stigma heaped upon her by the Curtis women.

"So I did," admitted Philip, soberly. "but you see now this has happened. You must release me from that promise."

"I can't," sighed Tony. Then turned her face to Pendlehaven.

"You'll trust us," she pleaded, waving her hand toward Philip. "Please trust him and me."

"Ha!" shrieked Mrs. Curtis. "Trust you—"

"Shut up, Cousin Sarah," snapped Philip at the angry woman. Then he addressed himself to the doctor. "I did promise her I wouldn't tell how we met. And I won't! In fact it isn't any one's business. Is it, Cousin John?"

"Not that I can see," came in rather drawing answer.

"I'll repeat what I said before," Philip took up hastily. "I didn't know she lived here."

"We're ready to believe that—nit," cried Katherine.

Captain MacCauley stared at her. Was this frowning angry girl the smiling, yielding Katherine he had known or thought he had known?

"You can believe it or not, Kathie," he told her savagely. "It makes no difference to me. But it's true, just the same."

"Wait here for me, Philip," said the doctor, in a low tone. "I'll be back in a moment."

Then he took Tony by the hand and they went out together.

For several tense moments a silence too dreadful to describe settled down upon the dining room. Katherine twisted her fork sulkily and Mrs. Curtis still sniffed in her handkerchief.

Philip looked from one to the other, wishing with all his heart he could say something that would clear the atmosphere.

"I'm sorry, Cousin Sarah," he said abruptly, trying to smile. "It certainly was awkward, wasn't it?"

"Awkward?" repeated Mrs. Curtis, wrinkling her face. "Awkward isn't the word, Philip. It was disgusting."

The gorge rose again in his throat. "Tonnibel Devon is the best girl I know," he asserted. "Poor little thing, I pity her with all my heart."

"Pity is akin to love, my dear Philip," sneered Mrs. Curtis.

"Mother," cried Katherine. "Philip wouldn't so far forget himself and his friends and position as to love—well—if you can't keep your tongue still, go upstairs."

This was a shock for Philip. That any girl could speak to her own mother in such a way was beyond his comprehension. The door opened just then and Dr. John walked in.

"She came down to tell me that Paul wanted me and forgot it," he said in a low tone. "The poor child is quite overcome."

Mrs. Curtis tossed her head and rose from the table, and Katherine, rising also, followed her mother out of the room.

There was very little said between the young man and his older friend after the ladies had taken their departure, but when Captain MacCauley was ready to leave, he looked anxiously at his companion.

"I'd like to kill her."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Problem at Present.

"Do people in society talk about one another?"

"Not as much as they used to," said Miss Cayenne. "They seem to be letting one another alone and talking about their servants."

"Cousin John," he murmured. "You won't let any one—"

"Indeed not," interrupted the doctor, anticipating the lad's plea. "Tony Devon is here to stay, Phil."

"Could I—could I see her, Cousin John, just a minute?" the boy faltered. "Not tonight, old fellow," replied the doctor, kindly. "Tomorrow, perhaps."

And Philip had to be content. That evening Katherine spent with her mother in hopeless misery.

"He acted just as if he loved her," she wailed at one time in their conversation. "I'd give anything to find out how long he's known her."

"So would I," said Mrs. Curtis. "Katherine, we've got to get her away by some means. She's bewitched John—she's brought Paul up from his grave—and there's no telling, she may usurp your place in their will."

"And now she's hoodwinked Philip," gulped Katherine. "Can't you think of some plan? Can't we claim she steals or something like that?"

"John wouldn't believe it, especially now that Reggie is coming home," was the answer. "His letter today said he'd be here very soon. Everything that happens in this house out of the ordinary is blamed on my poor boy."

And she began again to cry.

"Great Heavens, mother, don't do that," screamed Katherine. "Can't you see weeping doesn't do any good? You make me so nervous I could fly. We've got to make some plan to get her out of here. While you're sniveling all the time, you can't think."

Mrs. Curtis rose and walked to her bedroom door.

"My children have no sympathy for me at all," she shot back. "But you say I can't think while I cry? Well, watch me! I'll bet you five dollars Tony Devon is out of this house before another week is over."

The next morning when Reggie Brown came home, he went directly to his mother. Of course, as usual, she wept at the sight of him and began to upbraid him for his thoughtlessness. Why hadn't he let her know where he was? Why had he been gone so long?

Reggie laughed insolently. "Do I ever let you know where I go, mother?" he demanded, dropping into an easy chair. "No, I don't, and I won't! I've come for five hundred dollars I have to have. Now cough it up."

"I haven't that much money in the world," sobbed Mrs. Curtis.

"Then wheedle it out of Cousin John," he commanded. "I've simply got to have it!"

Paying no heed to his gruff command, Mrs. Curtis rocked to and fro in excess of agony.

"If Paul had died," she wept, "we'd have had a lot of money—"

"How do you know?" was Reggie's quick query.

"Because I know how his will's made," explained his mother. "and unless his Caroline is found, your Cousin John and I get all his money."

Reginald's eyes blazed into a flame of interest. Money was the only thing that attracted him.

"Why doesn't he die, then?" he asked, dropping back sulkily. "He's old enough and sick enough, isn't he?"

"Because he's getting well," replied his mother. "That girl—"

"What girl?" Reggie's voice asked the question in monotone.

"Some huzzy John picked up not long ago," was the reply. "She's brought Paul to life, and John is wild about her, and now—"

"Where is she?" interjected Reginald. "With your Cousin Paul. And Reggie, I'd give five hundred to get her out of the house."

The boy rose and stood gazing down at the tips of his highly polished boots.

"I'd give more than that," he replied solemnly. "to know Cousin Paul was in his grave."

"Then rid us of the girl, and he'll soon keel over," said the mother.

But Reginald wasn't interested in Cousin Paul's new companion. He wanted money and that was all, now that Tony Devon was dead.

"How about the five hundred for me?" he questioned, looking at her keenly.

"I've said I hadn't it, my son," said she. "Now run away and don't bother me any more."

Reggie did leave the room, but not the house. His mind was filled with many plans to get hold of the cash he needed. There were two things had to be done. Whoever the girl with Cousin Paul was, she had to go. It was enough that his mother didn't want her in the house; Reggie could abuse his own women folks; he could make them cry all he wanted to, but that any one, and a stranger too, could force his mother into a spell of hysterics, he wouldn't tolerate.

Then the other thing to which he had made up his mind almost brought his hair on end when he contemplated it. The world had to be relieved of Cousin Paul.

A little drop of something—Reggie rose to his feet and walked nervously up and down the room. "T'would be easy enough to get hold of, for Dr. John always had plenty of drugs on hand."

THE CARELESS CAMELS.

"It's very careless of you, Cousin Camel. Very careless of you, indeed. I'd be surprised at such carelessness only I know you haven't any brains or much brain power or a great many sensible ideas in your head. And so long as you're not so very clever I suppose one shouldn't scold you for being careless."

"Some careless people are clever, some clever people are careless," said Cousin Camel, moving his mouth from side to side and round and round in a funny circle.

"Some careless people are stupid, too; some stupid people are careless, also," he added. "But, Cousin Dromedary, I have a reason for my carelessness."

"Indeed?" asked Cousin Dromedary. "Pray tell it to me."

"Well," said Cousin Camel, as he continued to chew and move his mouth, "perhaps it's not much of a reason, but it is a reason."

"That is something. Not much—but something," and then Cousin Camel began to say in a sing-song voice:

To have a reason is something fine, I need say no more, but can end this line. Yet I might add that I chew all the time, And that that is the end of this, my rhyme.

Cousin Camel smiled at Cousin Dromedary and said, winking an eye: "Well, sir, what do you think of the camel poet?"

"I don't believe I'd better tell you," said Cousin Dromedary. "After all, we still want to be friends."

"True, true," grinned Cousin Camel, who saw nothing to object to in what Cousin Dromedary had just said.

"You aren't as big as I am," Cousin Camel went on, "and you are not so heavy in weight. You can get along more quickly, it is true. But you have two humps in life. One is that you only have one hump and the other is that you have no beautiful long hair as I have."

"That all depends on the point of view," said Cousin Dromedary. "I prefer having only one hump and I don't want to be bothered with long hair. My family like to be this way. We all are and we all do alike in our country, which, by the way, is the country of Africa."

"True," said Cousin Camel, "just as we all do alike in my country, which

NOT THE ONLY ONE
There are other Weymouth people similarly situated.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Weymouth residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

Benjamin W. Hewett, gardener, 191 Washington street, Weymouth, says: "At one time I was so bad with my back, I couldn't bend over to pick up anything from the floor. Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up and have always given good results when I have needed them."

Doan's always reliable.

Two years later, Mr. Hewett said: "I still use Doan's Kidney Pills when I have need of a kidney medicine. They always give me excellent relief and I recommend them whenever I get a chance."

LURE THAT TEMPTED MANY

Adventurers as Well as Dreamers Sought Vainly for the Fabled Fountain of Youth.

In that fabled, never-to-be-discovered country in that region which has shifted and changed just as men's minds alter and expand, in that mystic Bimini was thought to be the spring which, if tasted by mortals, would assure them immortal youth. On that island bubbled a fountain whose waters healed all manner of sickness.

The lure of the Fountain of Youth seized upon not only the dreamer, but caught the fancy of the bold adventurer, Ponce de Leon, and the redoubtable De Soto sought to taste of its life-giving fluid, and it is perhaps the mystery and wonder, coupled with desire, that brought about the discovery, not of the fountain, but of that part of our country known as Florida.

It was on the 27th day of March, 1513, that Ponce de Leon sighted land which he thought was an island. On April 8, which was Easter Sunday, he took possession of the country in the name of the king of Spain and called it Pascua Florida in honor of the day. He explored the country and was obliged to battle with the Indians, and after many adventures, which included another voyage in 1521 to found a colony, this intrepid navigator succumbed to a wound inflicted by a savage, and died while his vessel was making for the island of Porto Rico.

DANGER IN ELECTRIC CURRENT

Neither Fixtures Nor Appliances Should Ever Be Touched by Anything That Is Wet.

No electric appliances should ever be placed where a person in a bathtub can reach them. Such is the assertion of Dr. A. Zimmern in the Presse Medicale (Paris) in commenting on the death of a colleague. Electrocutation has taken place with a current of only 110 volts under such circumstances.

The reason is that the water on the hands and body provides exceptionally favorable conditions for conduction of the current. It is not safe to touch even an electric light, heater or bell when in the bath. Doctor Zimmern cites recent cases as follows:

A woman killed by holding an electric light in one wet hand while turning a water faucet with the other; a woman killed by wiping with a wet cloth the current distributing apparatus for an electric heater; a man receiving a severe shock by taking hold of a chandelier while holding an electric light suspended by a wire.

It is very dangerous to change an electric bulb when the hands are wet or the floor is wet; a slight defect in the insulation may cause a severe shock or even death.

Measuring Sludge.

An ingenious method of measuring the depth of sludge in deep sedimentation tanks is employed at the sewage disposal works of Fitchburg, Mass., says a Canadian writer. The measurements are made by means of a plunger pump, and 28 feet of 1-inch rubber hose, marked in 1-foot lengths. The pump is screwed to a 3-foot plank and attached to the hose by a union coupling. In making measurements the plank is placed across the top of a gas vent and the hose pushed into the tank until it is near the supposed sludge level. The hose is then lowered an inch at a time. Between each shift sufficient pumping is done to insure a complete change of water in hose. When the sludge level is reached, the pump will raise sludge. The length of the hose below the chimney top is then noted, and as the distance from top of chimney to bottom of tank is known it is an easy matter to estimate the depth of the sludge.

Mexicans Wary of Snow.

It is possible on almost any day in the year to see snowbanks from Mexico City, yet few of the natives there had ever touched snow until one day last winter, when there was quite a perceptible fall, the first in many years in the Valley of Mexico.

The mountain peaks of Popocatepetl and Iztaccihuatl, clearly visible from the capital, are always snowclad, but they are some sixty miles away.

Barefooted or lightly shod natives stepped gingerly into the strange element, and afterward spent most of the day huddled in their homes or in sheltering nooks and corners. The snow flurry was due to a sudden drop in temperature during a light rain.

His Predicament.

"What is the matter with old Riley Rezzidew?" asked the traveling salesman. "He does not seem to like himself."

"I'll tell you," returned the landlord of the Penitentiary tavern. "Uncle Riley has killed the peach crop for the coming season, got the League of Nations out of the way for the present, and nobody cares a hyper whether the climate of Mars is healthy or not, so he's kinda out of talking points for the present, and hasn't anything to argue about until he gets some new ones." —Kansas City Star.

Packing Cases for Rubber.

Before the war Japan used to supply most of the packing cases used for rubber sent out of Burma. Owing to the increased cost and the scarcity of shipping the Burma forest department took up the business, and now applies the boxes required, which yield a fair profit, besides benefiting an important local industry.

Boston College Committee Adopts Campaign Slogan

That is the slogan that won the first prize in the slogan contest conducted within the past several weeks by the Boston College fund raising campaign committee for use in its drive for a fund with which to construct and equip four new buildings at University Heights. The second prize was won by the slogan, "Invest in education; every dollar helps a scholar."

Arthur F. Meehan, chief clerk at the office of the National Trade Exchange, 27 Bech street, Boston, is the winner of the first prize. Miss Mary Haberlin, the daughter of a prominent Jamaica Plain family, won the second prize, and Miss Ethel A. Whalen of Medford, won the third prize.

George R. Canty, assistant secretary to Mayor Peters, and representing him, and Mrs. Edwin A. Shuman, chairman of the women's division and vice chairman of the general executive committee of the Boston College campaign committee, at the campaign headquarters, 166 Devonshire street, today presented the prize gifts to the winners. The prizes were checks for $25, first prize; $15, second prize; and $10, third prize.

For several days a numerous committee representing the committees of the press and the advertising men and the executive force of the office had been busily engaged in assorting the huge mass of slogan mail that came into the headquarters from all parts of New England. The selection of the winning slogans was made by sub-committees of the press and advertising men.

Arthur F. Meehan, the winner of the first prize, lives at 3911 Washington street, Forest Hills. He is an alumnus of Holy Cross College and a native of Worcester.

Miss Mary Haberlin is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Haberlin of 68 Prince street, Jamaica Plain and a sister of the Rev. P. J. Haberlin, D. D., secretary to Cardinal O'Connell. She is a graduate from Mt. St. Joseph's Academy, Brighton.

"A remedy is needed for the condition in the world today," said Miss Haberlin, in explaining the reasons that prompted the formation of her slogan, "and education is really the remedy. That is true education which includes not only intellectual development, but moral or character development."

A SANE SYSTEM

In these days of tinkering with the social machinery, it is refreshing to learn of one plan for the betterment of our daily lives that demands neither revolution nor evolution for the attainment of its objective.

Community Service is helping America do for itself in peace what, as War Camp Community Service, it aided a warring America to do. Just as in war the organization enabled communities to get the greatest value for the men in uniform from their recreational resources, so now it aims to stimulate communities to obtain for all the people the best results from leisure time opportunities. But, there is one great difference between the war work and the peace work—in the great struggle we were building for war and destruction; we are building now for peace and construction.

Community Service is getting together the finest elements in the nation's life—regard for our neighbors, affection for our homes, interest in the place where we dwell—and blending them into a force working, not for our soldiers at war, but for our soldiers come back from war, for the men and women at home, for everybody in each community. Mothers and fathers, sisters, sweethearts, brothers, can all unite in Community Service with the satisfying knowledge that their endeavors are going to be reflected in better, sweeter, brighter local conditions.

This, we take it, will meet with the approval of every American. During the war a new spirit of comradeship was born in city, town and hamlet; a spirit particularly conspicuous in those places uniting through War Camp Community Service to extend hospitality to the men in olive drab and blue. All who shared this spirit or came in contact with it hoped it might not be permitted to lapse with the coming of peace. In Community Service this fine product of war's tumultuous days finds its perpetuation.

which touches every emotion possible for the human being to experience, and which finishes with a smashing rob scene of tremendous power is "Passion," now at the Tremont Theatre. During the past week "Passion" drew capacity audiences at all performances, and so great is the appeal and the fascination of the screen play that seats have been reserved far in advance. Next week is positively the final week.
"Passion" introduces an actress new to Boston and to most of the United States. She is Pola Negri, the star whose beauty and wonderful dramatic ability have become famous in every city in Europe. New York theatergoers, who saw the film "Passion" acclaimed Pola Negri the greatest emotional actress ever seen on the screen in that city. The players who support Pola Negri in "Passion" are stars of almost the same capability as Mademoiselle Negri, and the great crowds, numbering 5000 persons, who appear in the mob scenes, are all wonderful screen players.

A knuckle of ham in soup gives a scent and flavor to the dish, but more than one serves only to spoil the get-

LET US CAN WHAT WE CAN.
T IS more essential this year than ever before to save every bit of food possible.
Fruit and vegetables which may be stored for winter use will be just that much to call upon when all such foods are scarce and high.
Olive Oil Pickles—Take a hundred medium-sized cucumbers, sliced thin, leaving the peeling on, add two large onions sliced, place in layers and let stand over night 1 one cupful of salt.
Drain and add one-fourth pound each of white mustard seed and black mustard seed, two tablespoonfuls of celery seed, a pint of olive oil and enough good vinegar to cover them well. Seal in fruit jars and keep in a cool place.
Beet Relish—Chop one quart of cooked beets, add a quart of chopped cabbage, two cupfuls of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper, half a teaspoonful of cayenne and a cupful of grated horseradish; add enough vinegar to make it of the right consistency and can at once.
To Can Corn Without Cooking—Take nine cupfuls of corn cut from the cob, fresh from the field, add one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of salt and one cupful of water. Mix and stand until the salt and sugar are well dissolved. Then can in sterile cans.
Freshen before using.
Mustard Pickles—For those who like a cucumber pickle with a slight flavor of mustard, the following will be enjoyed: Take a gallon of good vinegar, add to it a cupful of dry mustard mixed with half a cupful of salt.
Drop the cucumbers daily as they are picked into this mixture until the vinegar will not cover them. They will be ready to eat in a week.
Ripe Tomato Pickle—Take three pints of ripe, peeled and chopped to-matos, one cupful of chopped celery, four tablespoonfuls of chopped red pepper, four tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, four tablespoonfuls of salt, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, a half teaspoonful of clove and cinnamon, one teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, and two cupfuls of vinegar. Mix well and keep covered. It will keep for a year, and is ready to use, after mixing, in a week.

YOUNG GIRL FINDS RELIEF

Wants to Tell Other Girls All About It

Evansville, Ind.—"I am eighteen years old and have been bothered for several months with irregular periods. Every month my back would ache and I always had a cold and felt drowsy and sleepy. I work in a millinery shop and I went to work every day, but felt stupid and would have such cramps. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and had heard several women talk of it, so mother got me some. This Vegetable Compound is wonderful and it helped me very much, so that during my periods I am not now sick or drowsy. I have told many girls about your medicine and would be glad to help anyone who is troubled with similar ailments. You may use my testimonial as you like."—STELLA LUK-WILMA, 6 Second St., Evansville, Indiana.

Some girls lead lives of luxury, while others toil for their livelihood, but all are subject to the same physical laws and suffer in proportion to their violations. When such symptoms develop as irregularities, headaches, backaches, bearing-down sensations and "the blues," girls should profit by Miss Linx-will's experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

RUB OUT SORENESS

Sprains, Backache With Old St. Jacobs Oil.

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now, listen! That's lumbago, sciatica, or maybe from a strain, and you'll get blessed relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil!" Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on and out comes the pain. It is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store, and after using it just once you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years. Stop drug-ging kidneys! They don't cause backache, because they have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain.—Adv.

The Haunted House

By FREDERICK HART

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Pshaw! There's no such thing as a ghost!" Cordelia Davis' voice was defiant. "I think you're all silly to believe such stories. There's no more harm in that old house than there is in a chicken coop."

"But Cordelia, old Bates says—" "Oh, don't tell me what old Bates says! I wouldn't believe that old reprobate on a stack of bibles. He's always telling the most awful whoppers, and he tells them so often that he thinks they are true himself. Why, you've all heard his story about the catfish that was so big that they had to use a calf for bait! He's the worst liar in the county!"

The object of Cordelia's outburst of skepticism was a group of young people who were sitting around the fireplace in the Davis country house enjoying the heat of the flames; for though it was early October there was a chill in the air that made the crackling logs very comfortable.

The talk had drifted from golf and bridge to ouija boards and haunted houses and some one had mentioned the deserted house up the road, stating that it was haunted, and adducing the evidence of old Bates, the perpetually glib gardener of the Davis menage, as evidence in support.

A weird tale of moving lights and hollow groans had caused the company to sit a little closer around the fire—all except Cordelia. She shouted her derision at the idea, and overrode the objections of the company as she usually overrode anything that opposed itself to her sweet will.

"Why," she finished, as a sort of crusher to trample all opposition: "I wouldn't be afraid to spend the night in that old place any time. I'm not afraid of Bates' groans and lights. There never was a haunted house, and there never can be. I'll go there tonight!"

He Was Shaken for a Moment.

There was a chorus of protest, and even Cordelia saw the absurdity of the suggestion. But she was not to be so easily turned from her position. "Well, of course I couldn't stay all night," she amended. "Mother would have a fit—but I will do this—I'll go up to the house now and stay till midnight. Mother won't be in from the club till after ten and I can prove that I'm right just as well in two hours as all night. Now don't try to dissuade me, for I've made up my mind. I'm going, and what's more, I don't want any of you to follow me and put up a crazy joke by making a lot of noises. I'm going up to the house, and I'm going to stay there till I hear the village clock strike twelve. It isn't far off and I'll be perfectly safe. I just want to show you how foolish you are to believe in ghosts and all that rot. I'm going now—good-night!" And before anyone could protest she was out of the room. Looking out of the window they could see her in the early moonlight walking rapidly toward the path that led to the haunted house, with a shawl which she had caught up in her progress through the hall thrown over her head. The company returned to their seats by the fire a little sobered by the incident.

"I think Cordelia's very foolish to rush off like that," said Betty Sterne, a pretty blond girl who was one of the most popular of the guests. "She might meet a tramp or a dog or anything. Don't you think some one might go after her?"

"Whoever went after her would run an awful risk of being eaten alive, retorted Charles West, Betty's suitor of the moment. "Cordelia's made up her mind, and nothing we could do would change it. It's after ten now, anyway—she's only got about an hour and three-quarters. And, of course, no body thinks for a minute that there really is anything wrong with the house. Cordelia got one of her crazy impulses, and you know there's no doing anything with her till the mood passes. Let her go if she wants to. She'll come back about midnight and tell us all about it and everybody will be happy."

So the crowd continued its chatter, apparently forgetful of the obstinate Cordelia. But one man was moody and silent. This was Jimmy Westlake. He did not like the idea of Cordelia's being out alone, even though the ruined house was on her own property and there was nothing to be apprehended from tramps or other prowlers of the night. His solicitude was not entirely based on disinterestedness; Cordelia had long ago entangled him in the meshes of her attractiveness, but he was by nature a silent man, who did not show well in the company of the more brilliant, if shallower, group that surrounded Cordelia. So he had never spoken.

As the hour wore on toward half-past eleven, Jimmy's uneasiness increased. Finally he could bear it no longer, and with a word of excuse about going out to the garage to see about something he had forgotten to do to his car, he slipped from the room. Once outside he headed for the haunted house.

The broken edifice was ghostly enough in the pale moonlight, with its crumbling walls, glassless windows and shattered door. The weeds grew rank and unkempt all about it. He stole cautiously up the path to the doorway, and even as his foot touched the worn sill he heard a muffled shriek from within. Every nerve on fire he rushed through the littered hall and came to a door from behind which came sobs mingled with an unearthly clanking sound.

It was locked, but his shoulder sent it crashing inward and he found himself in a room dusty with the accumulations of years, in which the moonlight filtered dimly through dirty panes; in one corner a huddled heap of white which he knew to be Cordelia; and across the floor something black and shapeless was moving accompanied by that ghostly rattle!

Jimmy's nerve was good, but even he was shaken for a moment. Then reason reassured itself, and he kicked savagely at the thing; it leaped away with a snarl, and the moonlight fell on it—a small dog with a collar from which dangled a few feet of rusty chain!

In his relief Jimmy laughed aloud, and took two strides to where Cordelia crouched, her hands over her face. At the sound of his voice she looked up, then suddenly sprang to her feet and threw her arms around his neck, hiding her face on his shoulder.

"Oh, Jimmy, Jimmy! I'm so glad you came! I'm so glad! Oh, it was dreadful! Please, please take me away!"

Even when he explained that it was only a dog she refused to be comforted, shuddering against him and begging to be taken hence. He helped her outdoors, and in the open air she found relief in tears. Somehow Jimmy's shoulder seemed a good place as a repository for her grief, and she wept unrestrainedly with his good right arm—his right arm. And as she realized her need of him he felt surging through him his love for her, and then and there, on the path that led to her house he told her all that his heart had ached to express. Her tears ceased; but she did not draw away from his protecting arm. At the threshold of the house they paused. From within came sounds of laughter.

"And you were the only one to think of coming for me!" murmured Cordelia.

"I had to come—something made me. I had to come because—because—"

"Because what, Jimmy?" "Because of what I said before—because I love you and have always loved you. Cordelia dear, you do care, don't you?"

"Oh, Jimmy, I'm so glad I was foolish and willful and went to that horrible house! I might never have known—just think, I might never have found out that you love me, and that—and that I love you, Jimmy."

GREEKS HELD BEAUTY SACRED

No Sculptor of Repute Would Descend to Grotesqueness in Depicting the Human Form.

Many persons wonder why among all the hundreds of statues of ancient Greece there were no grotesque, ugly or comical bits. Very rare specimens have been found, but nearly always these have been miniatures and evidently the work of inferior artists. The reason is that the Greeks worshipped beauty of line and color so thoroughly that the creation of an ugly representation of a human being would have been looked upon as a profane and wicked act.

Among the few grotesque statues known is a little marble made in Athens over 2,000 years ago of a dwarf doing a dance that seems to resemble the movements of the cake-walk, once popular in the United States. The little woman wears a hobble skirt, and her head, looking back over her shoulder, is rather attractive. It is thought to be a statue of some well-known Roman dwarf cabaret artist made by a sculptor at the solicitation of a Roman friend, or else a satire on a larger and perhaps very fine dancing bit done by a rival and hated workman.

Not Always Common. "Common sense," remarked Jud Tunkins, "sometimes gets so scarce that it seems like one of the uncommonest things on earth."

The Needless Misery That Women Bear

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Barbara Bainbridge sometimes felt that she had two personalities, and whether the one adopted with the abbreviation of her name was her true personality, or the other of the dignified Miss Barbara, the girl herself, could not determine. It all came of being born into a wealthy, aristocratic family on your father's side, and one of sweet simplicity on your mother's side. So Babs decided the matter of her dual nature.

The Bainbridges left nothing undone that might further their granddaughter's natural advantage, while old Gran'ma Burnie instructed her in homely tasks and gave to her homely pleasures. Barbara's mother died at her child's birth, while the father, who had truly loved his young wife, passed most of his later years in one of the foreign offices connected with his vast business interest. Barbara in her girlhood had looked forward with secret joyful anticipation to the weeks of summer which would take her out to Gran'ma Burnie's farm. It was there, in ruffled pink gingham frocks, that she became immediately "Babs," leaving the cultured young person behind.

There was a little attic room at the farm cottage that Babs occupied, where a rambling rose peeped its fragrant head through the casement window, and where across sun-steeped meadows she could hear the first soft stirrings of early morning. Babs had loved to lie lazily awake in the lavender-scented bed, listening to these sounds and planning the freedom of her day. Usually, as she rested and as a part of the program awaited, came a boy's happy song:

"If a body, meet a body,
Coming through the rye,
If a body, kiss a body—
Need a body, cry?"

Sometimes the air was half-whistled, the whistler absorbed for the moment with the departure of unruly Holstein's from their directed path. And once, Babs looking down at the big boy from her rose-screened window, had dressed hurriedly, and in an adventurous spirit forestalled him upon his return. As though by mere chance she met him in the path that led through the meadow; she was busily picking buttercups and she daintily sang his song. And the boy, at her saucy smile bent suddenly and unbelievably, and turning back the pink ruffle of her sunbonnet, kissed her. Laughing, he had hummed back as he went on his way.

"Need a body cry?"

Babs had not cried; she had been angry. Oh! so very angry! And a summer passed thereafter, before the incident was forgotten.

To "Jim Evans' boy," Babs was Gran'ma Burnie's granddaughter, that was all; while to the girl, young Jim was the son of a departed and beloved country doctor, whom Gran'ma had known in his youth. Jim's mother was gone now, too, and the boy's ambitious planning seemed to have small foundation in his present, of "help" to an exacting uncle. But the time of Babs' presentation to society sounded, and the little sleeping princess of country lanes went back, with eyes opened to new duties. Miss Barbara Bainbridge proved a success socially; gratified, her grandparents realized that they were rewarded for their effort. She was lovely, too, with the sweet freshness of the deplored Burnie's, and with their true look in her eyes. Grandfather thought that Barbara should marry an earl. And so he sent her to join her father abroad, and though no earl offered his heart and hand, a young lordling and a good count did; and Miss Bainbridge refused both disdainfully.

If Carlton Lainsley was not an earl, he was at least the only son of a capitalist, and he was, and ever had been, in love with Barbara.

So she went quite alone out to old Gran'ma Burnie's. Gran'ma was embarrassed and apologetic concerning the attic bedroom, but Babs' again with a grateful sigh, placed her weary head on the lavender-scented pillow. And in the morning when the rambling tapped its summons at the casement window, Babs arose hurriedly, and with a thrill of excitement no foreign land had brought, she investigated the tiny closet for the old gingham frock that she knew Gran'ma's sentiment would keep there, and found it. The dress was still big enough for her petite figure and then—across the meadows, Babs saw him coming; the boy Jim, a man now big and fine, and yet recognizable in spite of his proper cut clothing. As Babs flew down the stair his old song came to her.

"If a body meet a body,
Coming through the rye,
If a body, kiss a body,
Need a body cry?"

She was in his pathway, the old saucy smile on her lips.

"Jim," she cried. "Oh! where have you been?"

And when James Evans could stop staring he answered her.

"Around the world civil engineering. And, always, everywhere, thinking of you Babs. For of course," he added sadly, "when I learned who you really were, there was no use in hoping for you."

"Jim," said Babs, shakily, "when you were a boy, you were much more daring than now, Jim dear—a body wouldn't cry—"

Then he kissed her.

Free Maintenance Service

Finding some of our consumers are unaware of our maintenance service, we give below a brief outline of this benefit to you.

Without charge, we will adjust or regulate any gas appliance upon request. This includes not only gas lights and gas ranges but also water heaters, room heaters, and in fact any gas burning appliance. In case any new parts are needed, the cost of this material alone will be charged.

Many of our customers have had their lights so long that they are now out of date. In many cases it will be cheaper to buy a new light than try to repair an old one. In order to give our customers an opportunity to secure more modern lights, we will allow 50c for your old light wherever a new light is purchased. Some of our consumers having other means of lighting, have allowed their gas lights to get in a condition where it would be impossible to use them when they are needed. We would like to make a suggestion that these gas lights be put in order and used regularly to insure being ready when needed.

Just explain what you need and it will receive immediate attention.

TOWN VS. CITY

Another town, Methuen, whose brief career as a city has caused somewhat of a tangle, has decided to stay a town, and has instructed its Selectmen to ask the Legislature to erect and constitute a limited or representative form of government and to provide for precinct voting. Thus the limited town government idea is spreading.

THE NEW CABINET

President Harding's new Cabinet will make a long trail from Massachusetts to California. Many states are represented as one takes up the trail in Massachusetts it passes to New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, jumping by way of New Mexico to California.

The country from all reports is to have a strong Cabinet of successful men, coming from several walks of life. All or individually should make splendid advisors to their able chief. And in this group our own Ex-Governor Coolidge will add grace and dignity.

SECRETARY TO CONGRESSMAN

The secretary of the new congressman from the 14th district, Louis A. Frothingham, whose appointment is now announced, is Karl Standish of Canton, a young man of considerable experience in such duties. He expects to leave for Washington the latter part of this month to take up his work and will be located in the House office building, where Mr. Frothingham has his offices. Already he is attending to a large amount of material in anticipation of the special session of the new Congress in April.

Mr. Standish was born in Stoughton, a part of this district, June 2, 1890, and his home town of Canton is also in the district. He was educated in the public schools and the Moses Brown school in Providence, R. I. He is married and has one son, Myles. For 10 years Mr. Standish has had excellent training for his secretarial duties in newspaper work.

When this nation entered the World War Mr. Standish was among the first to answer the call and enlisted in Battery A, 101st Field Artillery, Yankee Division, and served with the Y.D. for 19 months in France. He was advanced from private to corporal, and to regimental sergeant major. When Edward J. Beatty Post, No. 24, American Legion, of Canton, was formed Mr. Standish was chosen its first commander. He is a member of the Masons and Odd Fellows.

Large Appropriations At Town Meeting

Probably one of the quietest and perhaps the quickest of Town Meetings that has occurred in Weymouth under a system that has been in practice nearly 300 years, occurred Monday night at Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth.

The attendance was not as large as many had been led to believe or anticipate it would be. Perhaps many stayed at home, not wishing to get into a crowded hall; so that their seats for everybody and a few over for those that did attend.

A goodly number of ladies exercised their first privilege to sit and deliberate, if they so cared, with the other voters on any article in the warrant.

But none took advantage of this, which may prove to be their last chance in the old form of town government.

As the yeas and nays came on the warrant questions, one would often hear the soft feminine voices above the others, showing that the new voters were taking part in the voting.

Too much credit cannot be given to the presiding officer for the very prompt way, clear enunciation and impartial rulings as he discharged his duties in the smooth and pleasant way the meeting was conducted. It was a credit to the town and all its voters and perhaps a surprise or a little disappointment to the new voters who had heard many tales of long heated arguments, eloquent speeches and all that have made town meetings famous for length and excitement.

TOWN MEETING
The 295th town meeting of Weymouth was duly called to order at 7:30 Monday evening by Town Clerk Merchant. On the motion of Hon. George L. Barnes, duly seconded and carried the reading of all the Articles was dispensed with and the Town Clerk read only the closing statement, that the constable had duly notified all the voters of the date, time and place and nature of the business of those here assembled.

A motion by Prince Tirrell placed the name of George L. Barnes in nomination for Moderator, which was seconded and carried. Mr. Barnes then assumed the chair for the work of the evening, after being duly sworn by Town Clerk Merchant.

EFFECT ON TAX RATE

The bearing the Articles containing appropriations that were passed at the Town Meeting will have on the tax rate this year, shows that the town must raise the sum of $436,841.23 besides the $63,112.50, under the heading Water Department.

With only one exception all the recommendations of the Appropriation committee were accepted; the exception being in Article 42, which calls for $500 for Emerson street.

This means that unless there arises some extraordinary expenditure, or subsequent town meetings make additional appropriations the tax rate will be about the same as last year. This also depends on a fair amount of new building for the new year, for there is no place where any big increase in the present valuation can be made, except in new construction.

A Boston paper reports that only four women attended the Town Meeting, but in justice to the latter and their first town meeting, the poll check list shows there were three times the above number present.

As to the male voters Wards 2 and 6 were represented the best, with a few more in attendance from Ward 1 than from Wards 3, 4, and 5, where the honors were about even.

The total on the check list showed nearly 340 answering to their names.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

A brief meeting of the Board was held last Monday, followed by a longer session of the Overseers of the Poor. The Board does not generally meet election day, but in order to clear up unfinished business it will meet. Next week there will be a meeting of both old and new boards.

OTHER TOWN MEETINGS

Arlington had the greatest election yet held under the limited town meeting idea; 37 women are elected town meeting members.

NEW PASTOR

Rev. Dr. Charles H. Murch, who has accepted a call to become pastor of the Second Universalist church, preached his first sermon last Sunday morning. Mr. Murch was born in Boston, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Murch. He received his elementary education in the Rice school and attended Boston Latin and Penitent Seminary and upon graduating accepted a position as teacher in the Cook school at Havana, Cuba. In 1887 he entered Colgate College, N. Y., and graduated in 1891 as a Presbyterian and in 1893 he graduated from the Hamilton Theological Seminary. In 1895 he accepted the pastorate at Morningside, N. Y., of the First Presbyterian church, having after a period of two years, to preach in the Union Institutional church at Buffalo, N. Y., remaining there for three years when he resigned to take the Union church in Buffalo, where his Sunday school had an enrollment of 2500 pupils.

In 1910 Dr. Murch became a Universalist and conducted drives for charitable and educational institutions of that denomination, later filling pastorates in Hudson and Canton, N. Y. At the breaking out of the World War he left for overseas service with the Y. M. C. A. and was later transferred to the French lines, where he carried on welfare work until he was sent home as a casual, having been gassed and wounded. Since his recovery he has conducted drives for educational and hospital organizations in Toronto, Can.; Santonie, Texas; and Little Rock, Arkansas.

Dr. Murch is married and has three children, Mrs. C. E. S. Sandwald of New York, Miss Gladys Murch at home and Charles H. Murch Jr. of Rochester, N. Y.

The subject chosen by Dr. Murch, for his first sermon was "Man", and he was greeted by an unusually large audience; he said in part:

"If man, were to know himself he should be a student of anthropology, anatomy, physiology, psychology and history and to discard the frightful burden of fear that humanity has carried over for the last 500,000 years."

With the advent of a new pastor all the departments have showed a large gain with increased interest in their work. Several special meetings have been called and the Y. P. C. U. has announced a "Rally" and supper for the young people of South Weymouth and nearby towns to be held on Sunday night, March 20. The meeting is to be addressed by Dr. Murch.

To Vote "Yes" or "No" On Two Questions

But for the fact that two referendum questions are to be submitted to the voters, the Annual Town Meeting in Weymouth next Monday would almost go by default, for there is absolutely no contest for any of the town offices to be filled. This does not mean that we are to have no new town officers; for there will be a very important change in the Board of Selectmen. Two gentlemen, Bradford Hawes and George L. Newton, who have served faithfully for over 25 years, declined a reelection, and two new men have been nominated without opposition.

One referendum question calls for a vote on the liquor question in a new form—Shall licenses be granted for the sale of non-intoxicating liquors? There should be a large NO majority.

The other question is a very important one. For nearly 300 years ALL the voters of Weymouth have had a voice in the transaction of town business, particularly in the appropriation of money. Now it is proposed to deprive 97 percent of the voters of this privilege, and delegate the duties to 3 percent of the voters. Just when the women thought they were to have the privilege of voting in town affairs, they may lose it. Probably a few women will be elected as "town meeting members", but the total of men and women on this council will be less than 200.

The proposed Act as passed by the Legislature of 1921 should have been printed in full by the Selectmen, that men and women might carefully study its provisions before election day, and vote intelligently. Because of the absence of this information some are inclined to vote NO on acceptance of the Act. The Gazette-Transcript gives a synopsis of the Act.

REBEKAH VISITATION

A large gathering witnessed the visitation of District Deputy Mrs. Marion E. Thompson of Doverchester, with her, Marshall Mrs. Paine and suite Tuesday evening to Steadfast Rebekah lodge at Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth.

Many visitors were present from nearby lodges, representing Braintree, Brockton, Cohasset, Hingham and North Abington.

Supper was served to over 200 in the lower hall and then business of the evening consisted of working degrees upon over 20 candidates.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Allies, Rejecting the Counter-Proposal of the Germans, Issue an Ultimatum

WILL OCCUPY RHINE CITIES

Armed Force Will Be Applied Immediately—French Troops Ready to Move—President Harding's Inaugural Address Indicates His Attitude Toward League of Nations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.
"Kolossal," which used to be the favorite adjective of the Germans, may now be applied to their nerve as displayed in the counter proposals on the Rhine, submitted to the supreme council in London by Foreign Minister Simons and his colleagues. The world had expected from them something in the way of an offer, but the proposal was nothing of the kind. It was a demand, and it was a demand for the occupation of the Rhine by allied troops of the cities of Duisburg, Dusseldorf and Ruhrort; second, each allied country will place on German merchandise such a tax as it may deem proper; third, a customs boundary will be established along the Rhine under allied control. Germany, said Premier Lloyd George in his reply to the German proposal, would be permitted to suggest no modifications of the Paris decisions except as to conditions of payment.

Doctor Simons answered that the German position had been misunderstood, and that he would reply on Monday to the ultimatum.
Briefly stated, Simons proposed that Germany pay the allies as war reparations about 30,000,000,000 gold marks—approximately $7,500,000,000—which is about one-seventh of the sum demanded by the allies. Also, the offer was conditioned on two provisions, that Germany be accorded free commercial privileges throughout the world, and that Upper Silesia, where a plebiscite soon is to be held, shall remain German.
Especially impudent was the suggestion to capitalize Germany's reparation payments through an international loan to be divided among allied countries and held free from taxation in all countries. This meant that the Germans want the allies to furnish them the money to pay their debts by allowing the Germans to offer so attractive an investment that it would outshine other securities and be made still more attractive through the surrender of tax revenues by the allied governments.

Meanwhile the French, anticipating the outcome of the conference, were getting ready to enforce payment by Germany. Their plans for military action were prepared and submitted by Marshal Foch, and after prolonged discussion Lloyd George was persuaded to agree to Great Britain's participation in the use of armed force. A French officer in London said French long-range guns had already been moved forward to a position from which they commanded Essen where the Krupp works are located. Field artillery, cavalry and tank and armored car formations were held in readiness for the advance, and the air squadrons were awaiting the word to "take off." At Coblenz it was stated that the American troops, in the event of an allied advance, would merely continue to occupy the actual lines now held by them.
Belgium is ready to act with France and Britain in the Essen-Dusseldorf district. She had 13,000 troops on the Rhine and has sent two more divisions there. The French have 150,000 men in the occupation zone and 200,000 in reserve close by.

Among the interesting side-lights on the "poor mouth" presented by the Germans is the information afforded by a reliable American officer who has recently made a thousand-mile motor car trip through the chief agricultural and industrial districts of Germany. He says that Germany can pay the sums demanded; that he saw everywhere amazing evidence of productive labor and growing wealth.

All American eyes were turned toward Washington on Friday when Warren G. Harding was inaugurated President, and all American ears were open to hear what he had to say of the policies that shall control his administration. The ceremonies were simple and dignified, in conformity with the wishes of Mr. Harding. The new President, in his address, left no one in doubt as to his attitude toward the League of Nations as now constituted. Much of what he said was devoted to the general subject of international relations. He asserted that America had proved the wisdom of its inherited policy of non-involvement in old world affairs; that it can be a party to no permanent military alliance; that it can enter into no political commitments nor assume any economic obligations "which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority." At the same time, he said, America is ready to associate itself with all other nations for conference and counsel; to seek ways to bring about approximate disarmament; to promote mediation, conciliation and arbitration, and to establish a world court for the disposition of justiciable questions submitted by agreement.

To his fellow citizens President Harding made an eloquent plea for "the resumption of our onward, normal way" for "sane reconstruction after the devastation of war, for readjustment with care and courage without any wild experiments. Said he: "We must face a condition of grim reality, charge off our losses and start afresh." For his part, he promised administrative efficiency and economy, lightened tax burdens, adequate credit facilities, sympathetic concern for all agricultural problems, omission of unnecessary interference of government in business, and an end to government's experiment in business.

Among the interesting things which Mr. Harding hopes to bring about, according to unofficial announcement, is the creation of a "ministry of defense" under a cabinet officer, to control the national defenses on land, on sea and in the air. This, of course, would mean the consolidation of the War and Navy departments. It is said the plan meets the approval of both Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of the Navy Denby, and that both of them have agreed to give way if the plan is adopted.

In the last hours of its life the congress reached agreement on the army appropriation bill and it went through with provisions fixing the strength of the army for the next year at 156,000. The house had put the figure at 150,000 and the senate wanted 175,000, so the result is a compromise in which the upper house yielded most. The bitterest struggle was over the naval appropriation bill in the senate, the controversy being over the $100,000,000 added to it by the naval committee. This fight prevented the passage of a number of measures, among them the soldiers' bonus bill, against which Senator Thomas of Colorado threatened to filibuster.

Contrary to predictions, the house judiciary committee took the charges against Judge Landis in all seriousness, and presented a report recommending that they be fully investigated by the next congress. The report said that if it were true that Judge Landis had accepted the position of baseball arbiter while holding his judicial position—and of course that is true—his action was "at least inconsistent with the full and adequate performance of the duty of United States District judge, and that said act would constitute a serious impropriety on the part of the judge."

Judge Landis' reply to this was to refer to his statement of last December, when he said: "They will never impeach me. If both houses of congress by a majority vote pass a resolution expressing disappointment at my attempt to benefit 10,000,000 persons who have a whole-hearted interest in baseball, I will send my resignation as a federal judge to Washington by telegram."

John Skelton Williams retired Wednesday as comptroller of the currency, and in accepting his resignation President Wilson took occasion to comment on the "gross injustice" done Mr. Williams by the senate banking committee, which had prevented his confirmation. One of Mr. Williams' last official acts was to charge the United States Steel corporation with exacting excessive and unjustified prices for its iron and steel products. The accusation was vigorously denied by E. H. Gary, chairman of the corporation.

The house committee which investigated the doings of the shipping board made a report recommending the transfer of the functions of the board to an executive department because what is needed is more centralization of administrative authority than can be had with a large board. The committee found there had been waste, inefficiency and lack of coordination in the work of the board, but found no evidence "to prove that dishonest or fraudulent motives actuated any member of the shipping board of trustees of the Emergency Fleet corporation." Specifically, Charles M. Schwab and R. W. Bolling, brother-in-law of Mr. Wilson, were exonerated from charges of interested action. In general, the board was praised for "the most remarkable achievement in shipbuilding the world has ever seen."

A small side door in the temple of Janus has been thrown open in honor of Panama and Costa Rica, which small republics seem determined to go to war over Coto, a piece of territory which contains valuable oil deposits and which is claimed by both. Indeed, hostilities already have broken out, a "battle" has been fought and several soldiers have been killed. A small detachment of Costa Ricans that had occupied the disputed territory was attacked by a Panamanian force and defeated. The excitement in both countries is intense, and in the city of Panama a war-mad mob even attacked the presidential mansion because President Porras had declared himself in favor of a diplomat's settlement of the quarrel. At late reports Costa Rican forces were being rushed to the Coto district. It was believed some of them would be landed on the eastern shore of Burica point to cut off the Panamanians from their supplies. As this shore was given to Panama under the arbitration ruling of Chief Justice White in 1914, it was feared the United States might be involved, under the assumption that it is obligated to protect the territorial integrity of Panama.

Many stories, more or less detailed, of widespread revolt in Russia against the soviet rule have been coming to the outer world, usually by way of Finland. Hundreds of thousands of workmen, hungry, cold and without employment, were said to have opened war on the Bolshevik armies and rulers, and, especially in Petrograd, there were heavy casualties. These reports lacked confirmation, and were declared false by the soviet authorities. Recent dispatches from Helsinki said the soviet government had not lost control and that Lenin was promising the workmen all the relief in his power.

In the death of Champ Clark of Missouri, former speaker, the country lost a distinguished citizen and the Democratic party one of its strongest members. He never entirely recovered from his defeat for the presidential nomination in the Baltimore convention and of late years had been comparatively inactive, but his life record is one of earnest and at times eminent labor for his country.

"What are you doing?" said the manager of the hotel. "Do you want to asphyxiate yourself and die on our hands?"

"What's the matter with you?" "You've gone and blown out the gas."

"Nuthin' of the kind. I am entitled to the use of this gas, ain't I?" "Yes."

"Well, I can't get any satisfaction by lighting it. The only way I can get my money's worth is to sit here and smell it!"

"Did you advise that tenderfoot to provide himself with a gun?"

"Yes," said Cactus Joe. "And so did the rest of the boys."

THE NEW KIND

She: I understand that Mrs. Ticks is suing her husband for divorce on the grounds of non-support.

He: Why her husband is as good and faithful a husband as there is.

Advice.

Advice that may be proffered Often fills a book. A million kinds are offered, But only one gets took.

A Personal Misfortune.

"Just because your candidate was defeated, you don't think the country is going to pot, do you?"

"No," said the melancholy citizen, "I don't. But since my candidate promised me a job if he got elected, I don't see what's to prevent me from going to pot."

Went Too Fast.

Jack—Yes, I had a little balance in the bank, but I got engaged two months ago, and now—

Muriel—Ah, love makes the world go round.

Jack—Yes, but I didn't think it would go round so fast as to make me lose my balance.

Lesser of Two Evils.

He (after third collision with other couples)—I was afraid you didn't like my dancing.

She—Oh, I would much rather dance with you myself than have you bump into me all the evening.

GETTING THE BLAME

Dusty Dick: I see Uncle Sam has been selling a good many ships here lately, Ralph.

Rusty Ralph: I reckon the 38th Amendment's responsible for dat, seein' as how it done away with all the schoolers.

What a Wonder Is.

He is a wonder, People tell, When given a task He does it well.

Same View as Our Own.

Housewife—Why did you leave your last place? Wasn't your work congenial?

Hobo—Lady, no work is congenial.

Not Appropriate.

A Friend—Why do you object to being called colonel, squire?

The Squire—Well, I never was in the army, I don't make speeches, don't swear, and never take a drink, so honestly I don't feel that I have any claim to the title.

Takes No Chances.

"Your husband seems always to remember your wedding anniversary."

"Yes, but don't give him the credit. I take pains every year to see that he doesn't forget it."

FAKE PASSPORTS TO AMERICA

Paris Police Arrest Suspects With Counterfeit Polish Blank Forms and Stamps.

Paris.—Scores of counterfeit Polish passports have been issued in the last few weeks to persons going to the United States, according to the Paris police, who say they were sold for from 500 to 1,000 francs to persons to whom the authorized Polish consulate refused to give visas.

A traveling bag full of blank forms and rubber stamps, one of which was the counterfeit American form, was taken by the police who watched a bogus consulate until a man known as the former Russian Lieutenant Szmanski went there for his outfit. This brought about the arrest of his two confederates.

It marks the exact spot where, on September 7, 1914, the advance guard of the army of Gen. von Kluck was brought to halt a little less than 15 miles from Paris.

Aged Indian Never in Bed.

Minneapolis, Minn.—John Smith, an aged Chippewa Indian, arrived in Minneapolis recently with his adopted son, Tom Smith, to attend the state fair. John, who is 133 years old, has become blind since his last visit to Minneapolis a year ago. His health is still good, however, he maintains. He is said to be the oldest living Indian. "I don't see any more, but I still like to travel," the old Indian said. With him he brought his blanket, upon which he sleeps, never having slept in a bed.

HOME BREW GOOD IN SEVERE COLD

Two Popular Anti-Freezing Substances Will Prevent Serious Damage in Winter.

CALCIUM CHLORIDE IS CHEAP

It Should Be Carefully Tested as It Frequently Contains Impurities and Free Acids—Alcohol Is Somewhat Expensive.

There are two popular and easily obtained antifreezing substances which when used in proper proportions will prevent the radiator contents from suffering damage during cold weather, according to Ernest Coler in Motor Life. The first of these is calcium chloride, the other alcohol. Calcium chloride comes in the form of a salt, and is sold under its own name as well as under various proprietary names which usually indicate its freeze-proofing quality. When purchased in the open market calcium chloride is cheapest as well as most uncertain; it should be tested carefully, since it frequently contains impurities and free acids which attack aluminum as well as the metal and solder of radiators. Blue litmus paper, when moistened with a calcium chloride solution containing acids will turn pink. The salt may be neutralized by the addition of soda ash or ammonia until the litmus paper no longer turns pink.

Amount to Use.
The amount of calcium chloride to be used in the cooling system depends on the temperatures likely to be encountered and the capacity of the radiator. Two pounds of calcium chloride added to each gallon of water will keep the mixture from freezing at temperatures not lower than 19 degrees Fahrenheit. Three pounds per gallon will withstand a temperature as low as two and a half degrees Fahrenheit. Four pounds of calcium chloride in each gallon of water will not freeze at 16 degrees below zero.

The calcium chloride should be dissolved in hot water, and care should be exercised that none of the mixture is spilled over the radiator or other parts on which it is apt to leave a somewhat unsightly white deposit.

Whatever it lost of the mixture by evaporation should be replenished from a saturated solution of calcium chloride in water. Such saturated solution is made up by adding the salt to hot water until the liquid refuses to dissolve more of the salt and a layer of undissolved calcium chloride remains at the bottom of the container.

Cleaning Essential.
A point of great importance is to clean the radiator thoroughly before rendering it freeze-proof with calcium chloride solution. This cleaning is perhaps most competently done by one of the radiator cleaning compounds sold by dealers. The cleaning itself serves a twofold purpose. It frees the radiator from accumulated rust, scale and dirt, and incidentally is apt to open tiny leaks which previous to the cleaning were kept closed by dirt. If the cleaning were neglected the calcium chloride solution would open these small leaks in short order, the solution, leaking out, would render the spot unsightly, and a certain chemical action would be set up at the mixture's exit. All this is avoided, however, if the radiator is cleaned out and all leaks are repaired before the cooling system is filled with antifreezing solution.

Denatured alcohol, enjoys well-deserved popularity with motorists who during cold weather render their radiators and engine jackets immune to damage by adding alcohol to the water. The advantages of alcohol are that it does not have any destructive action on rubber connections or on metal, that it will not form deposits of foreign matter and produces no electrolytic effects. The drawbacks of alcohol—if they may be called such—are, that it is somewhat expensive, and that it boils at lower temperatures than water, and must therefore be replenished from time to time.

LOCATING DISORDERS IN ENGINE CYLINDER

Combination Mirror and Lamp Reflects Hidden Parts.

Two Principal Features to Be Considered in Construction of Device Are Flexibility and Illuminating Qualities.

Unfortunately our eyes are not like those of the lobster, mounted on long posts and sticking out of our heads. If they were we should have little trouble seeing into a transmission or engine cylinder. Since we are handicapped by nature's mistake, we must make the best of the situation and use tools or devices to suit the occasion.

Illustrated below is a combination mirror and lamp, which can be used for inspecting the inside of the engine, the transmission, or the differential.

The mirror should not be more than two inches in diameter, the lamp bulb a regular six-volt and operated from the storage battery.

There are two features to be considered in making the device. First, flexibility, and second, illuminating qualities. Obviously the light will be of but little use unless it is mounted on a flexible tube. The ordinary armored cable cover, or flexible metal gasoline hose of small diameter answers the purpose very well. With this sort of a tubing, the light and mirror may be put into almost inaccessible places and conditions inspected.

With the Combination Mirror and Trouble Lamp You Can Find That Lost Nut or Broken Part.

The second point to be considered is the location of the light bulb. If the bulb is located below the mirror, on the tube, it will shine in the eyes of the operator. The best location is shown, at the top of the mirror, where it can be shielded from the operator's eyes, yet give maximum illumination. —Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE HUNTS

Ten years ago the automobile was considered a luxury to be enjoyed only by the rich.

The municipal government of Los Angeles leads all other cities in the United States with a total of 370 official automobiles.

The automobile industry is paying $143,000,000 annually to the federal government, with state fees of $64,000,000 and personal property taxes and other fees of $50,000,000.

A very simple way of cleaning valve stems which are under suspicion of harboring carbon deposits is to inject a little kerosene in the air valve of a carburetor while the engine is running.

In using a grease gun to fill compartments with lubricants, it is a mistake to thrust the nozzle deep into the hole, as this makes the gun hard to operate, and results in a lot of the grease leaking out of the case.

When the car owner allows his rims to become badly rusted, rough particles of the rust and scale act as sandpaper would on the inner tube, and the result is a worn spot and a premature blow.

SOMETHING NEW IN AUTOMOBILES

Here is a car, made in Germany, which the manufacturers expect will revolutionize the automobile industry there. It is a four-passenger car of an entirely new design, having a ten-horse power engine and a maximum speed of 36 miles an hour. The manufacturers claim it will run 27 miles on one gallon of gasoline. It sells for about $800 in American money at the present rate of exchange.

BURIED WITH THEIR HUSBAND

Wives of Members of the Barua Tribe of the Congo Are Interred With the Corpses.

The Barua tribe in the Congo district of Africa have a number of strange and horrible customs, but of them all their burial customs are the most terrible. When a man dies a large grave is dug. The corpse and his wives—these may be anywhere from two to twenty—are escorted to the hole with wild music and the interested attendance of the entire tribe. The chief wife is thrust into the hole, and the corpse is then lowered. The second wife follows. The dead man's relatives then proceed to break the arms and legs of the two wives so they cannot get out of the hole. The head of the corpse is placed in the lap of the head wife, and the feet in the lap of the second wife.

The rest of the wives are then thrust into the hole, their limbs broken, and they are forced to sit in a circle about the corpse and its human supporters. The priest chants a few words, and everyone falls to with rude shovels, dishing earth into the hole. They never stop until the grave is full and the corpse and the living wives buried far under the earth. The howls of the wives with their broken limbs and fear of the terrible death are drowned by the banging of drums and the yells of the delighted tribe.

IN THE NAME OF RELIGION!

Wild and Savage Rites Indulged In by the Khlysts, Sect of Russian Fanatics.

One of the queer religious sects of the world is the Khlysts or Khlysts of Russia. They hold their meetings in their churches with hundreds of men, women and children attending. After prayers and hymns that last until midnight they begin a wild dance amid sobs and groans. After this continues for a while they abandon their garments and put on white robes and white stockings. Candles are lighted, and a new dance begins that consists of rapidly revolving, the men to the right, the women to the left.

In a short time a sort of madness falls upon them. They leap, scream, beat themselves and each other, indulge in wild laughter and cries, and then begin to tear off the garments with shouts of "It is coming, the Holy Spirit is coming!" They begin to go about on all fours, riding on one another's backs, rolling about on the floor, biting and scratching one another, and at last go entirely insane and dash about until they fall exhausted. By dawn the church floor is covered with naked men, women and children, unconscious and blood-stained.

Weather's Effect on Birds.

Cold and hunger in England has driven armies of birds, even the wild-est, into streets and gardens and unwanted places. Great flocks of green plover, which are singularly shy as a rule, appeared in the stackyards and paddocks of Hertfordshire villages. In Buckinghamshire several thousand rooks in a flock was no rarity; and old scouts came right up to the back doors and competed for their food with the poultry and the pigs. In London it was curious to see the pigeons feeding busily on the ice, to the obvious irritation of the gulls, whose bills are useless for securing fragments from a hard surface. It was hard to be defeated by a land bird in their own element. Starlings showed even greater ability in picking up morsels from the flocks and even the water of the river, a feat very foreign to their nature.

The Boy of It.

The three children were on the street car on their way to school—a boy and two younger sisters. The sisters disputed who was to push the button to notify the street car conductor to stop the car. The older sister won and held her finger on the button for more than a block. Then her brother rose, pulled her hand away arbitrarily and pushed the button. The older sister stepped into the vestibule, followed by her sister, to be the first to step off the car. As it stopped, the brother brushed them aside and led the way. The sisters having alighted, waited for the car to go on, but the boy rushed across the tracks, ignoring the warning clanging of the bell by the motorman.

Microbes in Sugar Bowl.

About one per cent of the Cuban sugar crop, valued at $1,500,000, is each year destroyed by greedy micro-organisms too small to be seen except when congregated in crowds of millions. Molds and bacteria are the culprits. It is estimated that each person in the United States consumes 81.84 pounds of sugar each year. At this rate, 873,000 persons could be supplied with the sugar destroyed by germs. The sugar loses its sweetness when the molds consume the sucrose, its "sweetening" principle.

Marble Cheaper Than Wood.

A report to Washington from the American commercial attache in Rome is to the effect that American lumber has gone to such price heights in the Italian market that builders find it cheaper to put in marble staircases than to build them of wood. Such is the combined effect of mill cost, plus freight rates, multiplied by the exchange premium of four to one that Italian buyers have to pay to translate our money into theirs.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—Mrs. Jennie B. Worster was a guest of Mrs. Helen Howard, the president of the "Massachusetts-Maine Daughters" at a regular meeting of the club held in New England Women's club room in Boston last Thursday. This is a new club, comparatively, this being its second year. Last year its first year the president was Mrs. Annet C. Flint. There is a large amount of talent in this club and the program was wholly by club members and was varied and entertaining. This club is composed of women who are born in Maine, no others being eligible and is growing rapidly. There was a paper on the early settlement of Maine. One of the members is a successful photographer and displays some fine views of Maine. It is quite an interesting fact that so many of our Massachusetts women were born in Maine. Miss Bertha Bryant of Weymouth is a member of this club.

—Mrs. E. W. Chandler entertained a party of friends and neighbors at a covered dish luncheon at her home on Monday. During the social, afternoon whist and music were enjoyed by the guests.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Hoyt of Hillcrest road are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. J. O. Hildebrand and daughter.

—Miss L. L. Whitman entertained on Saturday. Among her guests were two cousins of the new Secretary of War, John W. Weeks.

—The Ladies Cemetery Association will meet with Mrs. R. L. Hunt on Thursday afternoon, March 17, at 2.30.

—The Neighborhood Whist club was entertained by Mrs. George Shaw of Union street on Thursday afternoon of last week. Mrs. Marden and Mrs. Warnick had the highest score.

—Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Miller are the happy parents of a son.

—Mrs. Gustavus White entertained a party of friends at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wallace Drake at Eicknell Square on last Wednesday at a covered dish party. The decorations were green in honor of St. Patrick. Two of the guests who had approaching birthdays were remembered with magnolia vases. Among those present were Mrs. George Bean, Mrs. Willis Bean, Mrs. Murray Parker, Mrs. Manuel Page, Mrs. Edward Stiles and Mrs. Ed. McGill.

—Mrs. Anna Williams attended a dinner at Worcester on Monday given to the department officers of Daughters of Veterans.

—In honor of her first birthday anniversary Alice C. Gardiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Gardiner of Pleasant street entertained 16 of her friends at a baby party at her home on Monday afternoon. The little hostess was the recipient of many useful gifts. The young guests enjoyed a social afternoon and refreshments were served.

—The Ladies Social Circle of the Second Universalist church are to hold an Easter Sale in the vestry on Thursday, March 17. Tables with fancy and domestic articles, cake, candy and ice cream are to be placed on sale and at 5.30 a cafeteria supper will be served. At 8 o'clock the "young people" are to present the drama: "Playing the Game." Mrs. William Allen is the president.

—Mrs. George Torrey was hostess to the Missionary Society of the Old South Union Congregational church at her home on Torrey street Friday afternoon.

—Mr. and Mrs. Alexander R. Bates received a lot of oranges and grape fruit Monday from Mr. Bates' brother, Louis F. Bates, who with Mrs. Bates, is sojourning at St. Petersburg, Fla.

MONDAY CLUB

The 12th meeting of the Monday club was "Education Afternoon." The routine business of the club came first and Miss Corino gave notice of Legislative hearings in regard to Physical Training and allied bills that have the clubs endorsement. Then came the selection of the nomination committee to choose officers for the coming year and the following were chosen: Mrs. Elizabeth Pratt, North Weymouth, chairman. Mrs. J. Frank Perry and Mrs. Harriet B. Bachelder, Weymouth. Mrs. Frank H. Sylvester, East Weymouth, and Mrs. James B. Jones, Weymouth Heights.

The Education committee now took the meeting in charge and first introduced Mary Fifield King, who brought to the club a well written account of Abigail Smith of Weymouth from her birth as daughter of "Payson Smith" through her childhood and womanhood, acting the part of wife to John Adams and mother of John Quincy Adams, our second and sixth Presidents. Many side lights were given of the old time customs and the whole article showed the loving study given to the subject and the deep interest felt by the speaker herself.

Mr. Payson Smith, who was to speak, was unable to come, but Mr. B. P. Jones of the State Educational department gave a very stirring and convincing talk on Educational matters giving figures concerning the illiteracy of the country that were astounding and that conditions could not be improved unless more teachers were trained and better paid to carry on the work. He told of the surprising number of drafted men, who could only speak a foreign language and had no knowledge of our famous "Declaration" in the language in which it was written, but had to have it translated into various languages to enable them to grasp its meaning.

The High School orchestra under the direction of Mr. Calderwood furnished the music of the afternoon and certainly showed the advantages of education and a spirit of helpfulness. The orchestra members are as follows: Grace Costore, Katherine Davenport, Marian Hollis, Lester Lindblow, George Puopolo, Ruth Tirrell, Marion Tutty, Orelly Melville and Hazel Our. The play which is to be given the last of March is said to be delightful, though no hint is given as to what it may be. This year men are to be admitted to see the play and next week will be announced the names of members who have the tickets.

Mrs. Frank A. Pray gave an interesting account of the Industrial conference recently held at Dorchester.

—The supper and entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies Benevolent society of the First church given in the chapel on last Friday evening was a great success, both socially and financially.

The able committee consisting of Mrs. J. C. Nash, Mrs. Elmer Lunt, Mrs. Carlton Bradford, Mrs. J. B. Jones, Miss M. M. Hunt and Mrs. Fred Hilton and Mrs. Charles Macker served a most appetizing supper and a large number were present to enjoy same. The entertainment consisted of cello selections by Miss Orelly Melville of North Weymouth, which were very pleasing to all, and readings by Miss Helen Barrett of the Heights. Following the entertainment a social hour of games was carried on by Miss Florence B. Nash, each and every one having a jolly good time.

DRUG STORE ROBBED

Some time in the early hours of the morning last Saturday burglars made away with a large amount of merchandise from the store of the Elbridge Nash Drug Co. at Columbian Square, South Weymouth. It is believed to have been done sometime between the hours of 3 and 6.30 A. M. and entrance was forced by the use of a jimmy on the back door.

That the burglars must have been men familiar with the value of the goods taken and also of their location, rather than the work of amateurs, seems probable. To remove the goods surely some conveyance must have been used, and it thought that the haul was made in a leisurely manner by several parties. No drawer or pane of glass in the store was broken. No money was obtained, as both cash register and safe were empty, with the exception of books in the latter. In view of the great quantity of goods taken it is evident that those involved in the affair knew their business and took only what they most desired. "Every camera was taken, 13 in all; these had only recently been removed from a window display.

The best of the hair brushes and combs were taken. For some unknown reason two hair brushes of a good grade were either overlooked or forgotten.

The fountain pens in a locked case were all taken away (or it was a case where the pens went with the case). Only the best grades of soap and tooth brushes were taken. A shelf containing two rows of fine perfumes disappeared completely. Over 40 boxes of fine cigars representing some 4000 smokes all together were taken away. These boxes alone would make a good sized load and more than one trip for a single burglar.

The cheaper smokes were not touched. As Mr. Nash had very recently taken an inventory he soon was able to place his loss at about $875. The police are not blamed, for the man is not on duty after 2 A. M. and the work could have been done when he was on his beat at the station or elsewhere.

The arc light in the Square would serve to light up the interior of the store a little, thus making an inside light that would attract outside attention, unnecessary.

The police visited Tuesday the home of William J. McGarvey at Rockland, where the police had confiscated a large amount of butter, eggs and cheese that they claim was stolen from William A. Eldridge. The Weymouth officers could find no trace of any of the missing drug store goods.

Making Joss Stick.
The composition of candles called joss sticks, which are used in all the religious ceremonies of Buddhism, has long remained a mystery, the preparation of the sticks being entrusted to certain persons chosen from a limited class. Not long ago, however, there was learned the manner of making joss sticks in Indo-China. A stem of bamboo is rolled in a preparation containing 14 different odoriferous drugs, two of which are significant, as showing a knowledge of chemical and physical properties. These are acornite, which serves to protect the sticks against the attacks of rats and mice, and camphor, which causes them to burn steadily without being periodically extinguished.

Overcoming Obstacles.
Obstacles look large or small to the man in proportion to his strength and determination to master them. If a little man, they look large; if a large man, difficulties look small in comparison with the advantage of what he longs for and what he proposes. The harder things go the greater the obstacle, the greater is the persistence and grit to annihilate them.—Orison Swett Marden in Chicago News.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT HARDING

America Anxious to Participate in Any Seemly Program Likely to Lessen Probability of War and Promote World Peace.

ASSOCIATION FOR COUNSEL

Make Offensive Warfare So Futile
That Governments and Peoples Who Resort to It Must Prove the Righteousness of Their Cause or Stand as Outlaws Before Bar of Civilization.

Washington.—The Inaugural Address of President Warren G. Harding was as follows:

My countrymen.—When one surveys the world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet rejoicing in the ruggedness of the things which withstood it, if he is an American he breathes the clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and new hope. We have seen a world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate a republic unshaken and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law—and civilization are inseparable, and, though both were threatened, we find them now secure; and there comes to Americans the profound assurance that our representative government is the highest expression and purest guaranty of both.

Standing in this presence, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, feeling the emotions which no one may know until he senses the great weight of responsibility for himself, I must utter my belief in the divine inspiration of the founding fathers. Surely there must have been God's intent in the making of this new world republic. Ours is an organic law which had but one ambiguity, and we saw that effaced in a baptism of sacrifice and blood, with union maintained, the nation supreme and its concord inspiring. We have seen the world rivet its hopeful gaze on the great truths on which the founders wrought. We have seen civil, human and religious liberty verified and glorified. In the beginning, the old world scoffed at our experiment; today our foundations of political and social belief stand unshaken, a precious inheritance to ourselves, an inspiring example of freedom and civilization to all mankind. Let us express renewed and strengthened devotion in grateful reverence for the immortal beginning and utter our confidence in the supreme fulfillment.

Progress Proves Wisdom
The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, itself proves the wisdom of the inherited policy of non-involvement in old world affairs. Confident of our ability to work out our own destiny and jealously guarding our right to do so, we seek no part in directing the destinies of the old world. We do not mean to be entangled, we will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment, in each instance, may determine.

Our eyes never will be blind to a developing menace, our ears never deaf to the call of civilization. We recognize the new order in the world, with the closer contacts which progress has wrought. We sense the call of the human heart for fellowship, fraternity and co-operation. We crave friendship and harbor no hate. But America—our America, the America built on the foundation laid by the inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority. I am sure our own people will not misunderstand, nor will the world misconstrue. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in making offensive warfare so hateful that governments and peoples who resort to it must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization.

Association for Counsel
We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conference, for counsel, to seek the expressed views of world opinion; to recommend a way to approximate disarmament and relieve the crushing burdens of military and naval establishments. We elect to participate in suggesting plans for mediation, conciliation and arbitration and would gladly join in that expressed conscience of progress which seeks to clarify and write the laws of international relationship and establish a world court for the disposition of such justiciable questions as nations are agreed to submit thereto. In expressing aspirations in seeking practical plans, in translating humanity's new concept of righteousness and justice and its hatred of war into recommended action we are ready most heartily to unite, but every commitment must be made in the exercise of our national sovereignty. Since freedom impelled and independence inspired and nationality exalted a world super-government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic. This is not selfishness; it is sanctity. It is not aloofness; it is security. It is not suspicion of others; it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are.

Today, better than ever before, we know the aspirations of human kind and share them. We have come to a new realization of our place in the world and new appraisal of our nation by the world. The selfishness of these United States is a thing proven, our devotion to peace for ourselves and for the world is well established, our concern for preserved civilization has had its impassioned and heroic expression. There was no American failure to resist the attempted reversion of civilization, there will be no failure today or tomorrow.

Rests on Popular Will
The success of our popular government rests wholly upon the correct interpretation of the deliberate, intelligent, dependable popular will of America. In a deliberate questioning of a suggested change of national policy where internationality was to supersede nationality we turned to a referendum to the American people. There was ample discussion, and there is a public mandate in manifest understanding.

America is ready to encourage, eager to initiate, anxious to participate in any seemly program likely to lessen the probability of war and promote that brotherhood of mankind which must be God's highest conception of human relationship. Because we cherish ideals of justice and peace, because we appraise international comity and helpful relationship no less highly than any people of the world, we aspire to a high place in moral leadership of civilization, and we hold maintained America, the proven republic, the unshaken temple of representative democracy, to be not only an inspiration and example, but the highest agency of strengthening good will and promoting accord on both continents.

Mankind needs a world wide benediction of understanding. It is needed among individuals, among peoples, among governments, and it will inaugurate an era of good feeling to mark a birth of a new order. Such understanding men will strive confidently for the promotion of their better relationships and nations will promote the comity so essential to peace.

Trade Ties Bind Closely
We must understand that ties of trade bind nations in closest intimacy and none may receive except as he gives. We have not strengthened ours in accordance with our resources or our genius, notably on our own continent, where a galaxy of republics reflect the glory of new world democracy, but in the new order of finance and trade we mean to promote, enlarged activities and seek expanded confidence.

Perhaps we can make no more helpful contribution by example than prove a republic's capacity to emerge from the wreckage of war. While the world's embittered travail did not leave us devastated lands nor desolate cities, left no gaping wounds, no breast with hate, it did involve us in the delirium of expenditure, in expanded currency and credits, in unbalanced industry, in unspeakable waste and disturbed relationships. While it uncovered our portion of hateful selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America as sound and fearless and beating in confidence unflinching. Amid it all we have riveted the gaze of all civilization to the unselfishness and the righteousness of representative democracy where our freedom has never made offensive warfare, has never sought territorial aggrandizement through force, never has turned to the arbitrament of arms until reason has been exhausted. When the governments of the earth shall have established a freedom like our own and shall have sanctioned the pursuit of peace as we have practiced it, I believe the last sorrow and the final sacrifice of international warfare will have been written.

Our supreme task is the resumption of our onward, normal way. Reconstruction, readjustment, restoration—all these must follow. I would like to hasten them if it will lighten the spirit and add to the resolution with which we take up the task. Let me repeat: For our nation we shall give no people just cause to make war upon us, we hold no national prejudices, we entertain no spirit of revenge, we do not hate, we do not covet, we dream of no conquest nor boast of armed prowess. If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us I earnestly hope a way may be found which will unify our individual and collective strength and consecrate all America materially and spiritually, body and soul, to national defense. I can vision the ideal republic where every man and woman is called under the flag for assignment to duty for whatever service, military or civil, the individual is best fitted; where we may call to universal service every plant, agency or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for country, and not one penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy when one portion of our citizenship turns its activities to private gain and defensive war while another is fighting, sacrificing or dying for national preservation.

Unity of Spirit and Purpose
Out of such universal service will come a new unity of spirit and purpose, a new confidence and consecration, which would make our defense impregnable, our triumphs assured. Then we should have little or no disorganization of our economic, industrial and commercial systems at home; no staggering war debts, no swollen fortunes to flout the sacrifices of our soldiers, no excuse for sedition, no pitiable slackness, no outrage of treason, envy and jealousy would have no soil for their menacing development, and revolution would be without the passion which engenders it; a regret for the mistakes of yesterday must not, however, blind us to the tasks of today. War never left such an aftermath, and there has been staggering loss of life and measureless wastage of materials. Nations are still groping for return to stable ways. Discouraging indebtedness confronts us like all the war-torn nations, and these obligations must be provided for. No civilization can survive repudiation.

We can reduce the abnormal expenditures, and we will; we can strike at war taxation, and we must. We must face the grim necessity, with full knowledge that the task is to be solved, and we must proceed with a full realization that no statute enacted can repeal the inexorable laws of nature. Our most dangerous tendency is to expect too much of government, and at the same time do for it too little.

We contemplate the immediate task of putting our public household in order. We need a rigid and yet sane economy combined with final justice, and it must be attended by individual prudence and thrift, which are so essential to this trying hour and reassuring for the future.

Reflection of War's Reaction
The business world reflects the disturbance of war's reaction. Herein flows the life blood of material existence. The economic mechanism is intricate and its parts interdependent, and has suffered the shocks and jars incident to abnormal demands, credit inflations and price upheavals. The normal balances have been impaired. The channels of distribution have been clogged, the relations of labor and management have been strained. We must seek the readjustment with care and courage. Our people must give and take. Prices must reflect the receding fever of war activities. Perhaps we never shall know the old levels of wage again, because war invariably readjusts compensations, and the necessities of life will show their inseparable relationship, but we must strive for normalcy to reach stability. All the penalties will not be light nor evenly distributed. There is no way of making them so. There is no instant steps from disorder to order. We must face a condition of grim reality, charge off our losses and start afresh. It is the oldest lesson of civilization. I would like government to do all it can to mitigate, then, in understanding, in mutuality of interest, of concern for the common good, our tasks will be solved. No altered system will work a miracle; any wild experiment will only add to the confusion. Our best assurance lies in efficient administration of our present system.

From Destruction to Production
The forward course of the business cycle is unmistakable. Peoples are turning from destruction to production. Industry has sensed the changed order, and our own people are turning to resume their normal, onward way. The call is for productive America to go on. I know that Congress and the administration will favor every wise government policy to aid the resumption and encourage continued progress. I speak for administrative efficiency, for lightened tax burdens, for sound commercial practices, for adequate credit facilities, for sympathetic concern for all agricultural problems, for the omission of unnecessary interference of government with business, for an end to government's experiment in business and for more efficient business in government administration. With all of this must attend a mindfulness of the human side of all activities, so that social, industrial and economic justice will be squared with the purposes of a righteous people. With the nation-wide induction of womanhood into our political life we may count upon her intuitions, her refinements, her intelligence and her influence to exalt the social order. We count upon her exercise of the full privileges and the performance of the duties of citizenship to speed the attainment of the highest state.

Prayer for Industrial Peace
I wish for an America no less alert in guarding against dangers from within than it is watchful against enemies from without. Our fundamental law recognizes no class, no group, no section. There must be none in legislation or administration. The supreme inspiration is the common weal. Humanity hungers for international peace, and we have it with all mankind. My most fervent prayer for America is for industrial peace, with its rewards widely and generally distributed amid the inspirations of equal opportunity. No one justly may deny the equality of opportunity which made us what we are. We have mistaken unpreparedness to embrace it to be a challenge of the reality, and due concern for making all citizens fit for participation will give added strength of citizenship and magnify our achievement. If revolution insists on overturning established order let other peoples make the tragic experiment. There is no place for it in America. When world war threatened civilization we pledged our resources and our lives to our preservation, and when revolution threatens we unfurl the flag of law and order and renew our consecration. Ours is a constitutional freedom where the popular will is the law supreme and minorities are sacredly protected. Our revisions, reformations and evolutions reflect a deliberate judgment and an orderly progress, and we mean to cure our ills, but never destroy or permit destruction by force.

I had rather submit our industrial controversies to the conference table in advance than to a settlement table after conflict and suffering. The earth is thirsting for the cup of good will. Understanding its fountain source, I would like to acclaim an era of good feeling amid dependable prosperity and all the blessings which attend.

Protection of Industries
It has been proved again and again that we cannot while throwing our markets open to the world maintain American standards of living and opportunity and hold our industrial eminence in such unequal competition. There is a luring fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports. Today as never before, when peoples are seeking trade restoration and expansion, we must adjust our tariff to the new order. We seek participation in the world's exchanges because therein lies our way to widened influence and the triumphs of peace. We know full well we cannot sell where we do not buy, and we cannot sell successfully where we do not carry. Opportunity is calling not alone for the restoration, but for a new era in production, transportation and trade. We shall answer it best by meeting the demand of a surpassing home market by promoting self reliance in production and by bidding enterprise, genius and efficiency to carry our cargoes in American bottoms to the marts of the world.

An America of Homes
We would not have an America living within and for herself alone, but we would have herself reliant, independent and even nobler, stronger and richer. Believing in our higher standards, reared through constitutional liberty and maintained opportunity, we invite the world to the same heights. But pride in things wrought is no reflex of a completed task. Common welfare is the goal of our national endeavor. Wealth is inimical to welfare; it ought to be its friendliest agency. There never can be equality of rewards or possessions so long as the human plan contains varied talents and differing degrees of industry and thrift. But ours ought to be a country free from great blotches of distressed property. We ought to find a way to guard against the perils and penalties of unemployment. We want an America of homes, illumined with hope and happiness, where mothers, freed from the necessity for long hours of toll beyond their own doors, may preside as befits the hearthstone of American citizenship. We want the cradle of American childhood rocked under conditions so wholesome and so hopeful that no blight may touch it in its development, and we want to provide that no selfish interest, no material necessity, no lack of opportunity shall prevent the gaining of that education so essential to best citizenship. There is no short cut to the making of these ideals into glad realities. The world has witnessed again and again the futility and the mischief of ill considered remedies for social and economic disorders. But we are mindful today as never before of the friction of modern industrialism, and we must learn its causes and reduce its evil consequences by sober and tested methods. Where genius has made for great possibilities justice and happiness must be reflected in a greater common welfare.

Service the Supreme Commitment
Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to acclaim the era of the Golden Rule and crown it with the autocracy of service. I pledge an administration wherein all the agencies of government are called to serve and ever promote an understanding of government purely as an expression of the popular will.

One cannot stand in this presence and be unmindful of the tremendous responsibility. The world's upheaval has been added heavily to our tasks, but with the realization comes the surge of high resolve, and there is reassurance in belief in the God given destiny of our republic. If I felt that there is to be sole responsibility in the executive for the America of tomorrow I should shrink from the burden. But here are a hundred millions, with common concern and shared responsibility answerable to God and country. The republic summons them to their duty, and I invite co-operation. I accept my part with single mindedness of purpose and humility of spirit and implore the favor and guidance of God in his heaven. With these I am unafraid and confidently face the future. I have taken the solemn oath of office on that passage of Holy Writ wherein it is asked:

"What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" This I plight to God and country.

Oddities in Coats

WHEN coats left the straight and narrow way of fitted lines to meander in paths vague and indefinite, they were sure to land in new places. This they have done, presenting many models for spring that are interesting and original as well as attractive. In spite of vagaries of style, these new ideas have been worked out in a practical way, so that they are not forgetful of the chief end of coats, which is service.

Two among these new arrivals are shown in the illustration above, both conforming to the season's demand for ample flowing lines, capacious sleeves, and length that envelops the figure from chin to ankles, or at least somewhere near the ankles. The coat at the right goes even farther and is provided with a draped hood that is capable of covering the hat. It is a handsome model in a light, sturdy coating, that is rainproof, very practical for all-round wear in springtime. Its fullness is disposed of in plaits, so that it hangs straight at the back, with loose belt across the front, and easy raglan sleeves.

The model at the left is as much like a mantle or dolman as it is like a coat, and utilizes one of the soft, pile fabrics that make so strong a place for themselves in the esteem of women. It hangs in plaits at the bottom and features the most capacious of sleeves along with the most original of collars.

To Greet an Early Easter

VARIOUS brands of weather are sure to be delivered on Easterday in different sections of the country, but whatever the weather the day will be greeted with springtime millinery. Every year proves that even in the extreme north women anticipate the spring and brave wintry skies with cheerful headwear that belongs to the new season. This year hats make it easier than ever for them to follow this inclination for many of the new models are made of brilliant millinery fabrics and of braids and silks—often in combination—that are not too summer-like to face a snowfall. They are in lively, lustrous colors and are dedicated to spring.

Four hats out of the five pictured here make a safe choice in Easter headwear for dwellers in the north. At the top of the group the hat at the left is made entirely of faillie silk, in this instance, turquoise blue, but also shown in other colors. It has a sectional crown and a soft brim, the latter entirely of corded silk and extended into a loop and knot at the right side. A gleaming ball of rhinestones forms the head of a pin thrust in the loop. Another hat of corded silk, at the right, has a soft, upturned brim made with workroom-made ornaments set about it.

At the center of the group an all-black, wide-brimmed model shows how effectively hair braid in an airy brim may be joined to a crown of cellophane. The brim is irregular in width and very graceful; there is an odd, shiny ornament set against the crown of this mid-summer night's dream in millinery. One of the new lustrous fabrics in henna color makes the bright hat with long odd feather quills, making a spirited brim trimming—oddities in trimming are the order of the day, it seems, and another example of this appears in the satin hat that finishes the group. This model has an eccentric brim covered with rows of narrow braid, showing a cut-out portion at the left side. It is one of many models with a sectional crown and its trimming is a brush-like ornament of feathers.

HOME-COOKED POTATO CHIPS ARE GREATLY RELISHED AT ANY MEAL

Wire Basket of Some Kind Is Essential for Frying Potato Chips.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Everybody likes good potato chips. Their salty crispness makes them an enjoyable addition to the luncheon or dinner menu and provides a variation in the customary methods of serving potatoes at home. Their food value is high and they offer a valuable part of last year's large potato crop.

Not all potatoes make good chips, say food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the excellence of the finished product depends on the materials used and the care exercised in their preparation. New potatoes in the spring or early summer do not make good chips. They should not be used before the skin sets. A waxy or soggy potato is not good chip material. Select a variety that becomes mealy when baked or boiled.

Round Potatoes Are Best.

Although the size and shape of the potato do not affect its cooking quality, they do influence the quantity and appearance of the chips. Round potatoes are better than long ones, as there is less waste in peeling, especially if a vegetable peeler is used. Deep eyes are objectionable because of the difficulty of paring and the waste involved, and because they make ragged-looking slices.

The equipment necessary is simple and inexpensive. Some form of a vegetable slicer is essential, as it is impossible to slice the peeled potatoes thin and even enough by hand. The slices should be one-sixteenth inch thick and should be even, if they are to cook uniformly. The best vessel in which to fry the chips is one that is deep rather than wide, with a perforated basket in which the chips can be lowered and raised.

Potato chips may be fried in a variety of fats, but for a number of reasons the vegetable fats are preferable to the animal fats. Whatever fat may be selected, it must be in good condition, i. e., light-colored and free from all objectionable odors and flavors.

Peel large, smooth Irish potatoes, removing all eyes and diseased spots. Slice as described above. Soak slices in cold water for at least an hour, changing the water frequently until it is entirely free from starch. Where running water is available, letting cold water run over the chips for an hour is preferable to soaking in standing water. Heat a high-grade of vegetable cooking oil to a little below smoking point (210 degrees C, or 410 degrees F, if you have a thermometer).

Slices Should Be Dried.

The kettle should not be much more than half full of oil, otherwise the water on the potatoes will sputter and boil over when dropped into the hot fat. The moisture on the slices must be evaporated before the potatoes can brown; it also lowers very appreciably the temperature of the fat. Therefore, shake the soaked slices as dry as possible. When making chips in small quantities, it is possible to partially dry the slices between towels before placing them in the basket and lowering them in the oil. Do not cook too many at a time, or they will curl into little balls. Stir constantly. They will cook quickly, the time required varying with the size of the kettle and the quantity of the oil and potatoes used. Three to five minutes is a good average.

When the chips are light golden brown, raise the basket, drain off the surplus oil and empty them on clean brown paper. Sprinkle lightly with salt. If fresh sweet oil is used and care is taken to store the chips in a cool, dry, clean place, they should keep without spoiling for several weeks. Place them in the oven for a few minutes before serving to make them crisp.

WAYS FOR UTILIZING LEFT-OVER CEREALS

Housekeeper Can Make Good Use of All Remnants.

Splendid for Making Scalloped Dishes, Souffles and Omelets, in Making Muffins and in Various Other Ways.

What can be done with the cupful of cooked cereal left from breakfast? The economical housekeeper dislikes to throw it out, but how can she use it so that her family will like its second appearance at the family board? The following solutions of the problem are offered by the home economics specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Remnants of cereal breakfast foods may often be utilized in making scalloped dishes, souffles, and omelets, in thickening soups or gravies, in making muffins and griddle cakes, and in many other ways. Also they can sometimes be reheated or thinned and added to a new supply. The practice of frying the left-overs of boiled hominy or of cornmeal mush is as old as the settlement of this country, and the nursery song about the "bag pudding the queen did make" from King Arthur's barley meal shows us that for centuries other cereal puddings have been treated in the same way. In so-called "oatmeal oysters" small portions of the left-over cereal are dipped in eggs and crumbs and fried. The use of left-over rice and other cereals in croquettes, puddings, etc., is well known.

Cold cooked farina or similar cereal may be utilized in the following way:

Farina Pudding.

1 cupful cold, cooked farina. 1/2 cupful seeded raisins. 1 tablespoonful corn-starch. 1/2 teaspoonful cinnamon. 1 egg. A speck of ground cloves. 1 cupful milk. A little salt if desired. 1-2 cupful sugar.

Bake in a medium oven until brown, or heat on top of the stove. Dried figs or dates or stewed fruit may be substituted for the raisins.

Boiled rice and pearl barley are offen used in soup, and there is no reason why small quantities of coarse samp or any other cereal which will keep its shape fairly well should not be used up in the same way. Similarly, remnants of macaroni broken into small pieces may be used in the place of vermicelli or other special soup pastes. Such practices serve the double purpose of using material that would otherwise be wasted and of giving a little variety to a simple diet by inexpensive means.

Oatmeal cookies, a toothsome and wholesome sweet for the school lunch, may be made of one egg, one-third cupful granulated sugar, one cupful rolled oats, two teaspoonfuls melted fat, one teaspoonful salt. Beat the egg, add sugar gradually, and stir in other ingredients. Drop a spoonful at a time on a well-greased tin and bake in a moderate oven.

SPLENDID DISH FOR SUPPER

Combination of Eggs and Cheese Is Recommended by Department of Agriculture.

The combination of eggs and cheese makes a hearty dish suitable for supper, dinner or lunch. The following recipe is recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture:

4 eggs. 1 cup, or 4 ounces, stale bread crumbs. 1 cup, or 4 ounces, grated cheese. 1/2 teaspoon salt. 1 cup of fine, soft "Cayenne" pepper.

Break the eggs into a buttered baking dish or into ramekins and cook in a hot oven until they begin to turn white around the edge. Cover with the mixture of crumbs, cheese and seasonings. Brown in a very hot oven. In preparing this dish it is essential that the oven be very hot or the egg will be too much cooked by the time the cheese is brown. To avoid this, some cooks cover the eggs with white sauce before adding crumbs.

The food value of the dish is very close to that of a pound of beef of average composition. For those who are particularly fond of cheese, the amount of cheese in this recipe may be very much increased, thus making a much more nourishing dish; or the amount may be reduced so as to give hardly more than a suggestion of the flavor of cheese.

NEW SUITS CLEARLY INTERPRET SPRINGTIME

NEVER was a season more clearly interpreted in suits than the oncoming spring is. A survey of any representative collection of them leaves one impressed with this fact, and it is evident that designers have had it in mind in the choice of styles and colors, and that their interest is centering on new decorative features.

The straight and flaring box-coat modes with loose sleeves widening toward the hand, suggest balmy weather. They are made collarless or with small turnover collars, and they reveal a variety of styles in their embellishments. Many of them are embroidered, others adopt the new crepe ribbons or silk braid decorations, and an occasional model, running true to form in considering the Chinese inspiration of the style, shows coats with bright applique borders made of pieces of colored silks in various shapes applied with needlework in characteristic Chinese designs. But embroideries in self color and braid or ribbon decorations are universally admired.

Not all embroidered suits limit themselves to one color in their embroidery, for many of them introduce either other colors or metallic threads in the design. A suit of this kind appears at the left of the two shown here with an elaborate pattern in self-color embroidery lightened by silver threads. In this model the skirt is a little shorter and a little narrower than the standard for the season, for manufacturers are inclined to favor the ideas of very young wearers—and others who hope to look youthful—by abbreviating skirts considerably. The sash of broad satin reveals the headway this feature of the styles is making and is given prominence by its width and long-fringed ends.

The bloused suit at the right is an elegant new arrival that will please those who like simple styles and smart lines. It dares challenge companions without any embellishment except the decorative rows of buttons on the coat and a fringed satin sash.

In the Galaxy of Blouses

THERE is a considerable diversity of style in blouses this spring, but an actual count in almost any display will reveal the tie-back models and the straight-line models predominating. In materials georgette and crepe-de-chine are in the lead, but there are hosts of lingerie blouses to dispute position with them. The latter have a place in the summer wardrobe not to be disturbed by any newcomers. There are some new and very attractive trimming features to be noted in the spring style points—two or three of them embodied in the two stars in the galaxy of blouses for spring that are pictured here.

A crepe de chine model appears at the right of the two with the favored medium for embellishing this fabric shown in the eyelet embroidery that comes so near to covering it. There is a rising tide of favor for this sort of embroidery on both blouses and dresses. Two other novelties in decoration find themselves well placed in this model—the unusual small rings about the waist line, for supporting the narrow ribbon girdle and the tassels that finish the bottom. Many blouses indulge in a few handsome tassels, but this one makes prodigal use of them; they are placed so close together that they have the effect of lengthening the peplum.

The dainty blouse at the left makes use of two colors in georgette, a dark shade for the body and a light color for a border at neck, sleeves and peplum. Needlework and flower motifs in silk floss repeat the colors in the blouse. The narrow ribbon girdle slips through four tabs, two at the front and two at the back, which are merely extensions of the border decorated with embroidered flowers. The girdle ties in a little bow at the side.

An interesting and pretty decoration in late arrivals among blouses appears in patent leather, which is cut out to represent grapes, acorns, cherries, etc. They are set in foliage embroidered with silk floss matching the blouse in color. Girdles are not always simple—decorations of this kind are often placed on them, or narrow, plaited frills or embroideries.

CITIZENSHIP THRU SERVICE

Let everyone that wants to become a citizen of this country work for that privilege. Many have already done so. All future citizens should. If one thinks enough of this country to want to be a citizen he should serve it in some capacity.

There are many ways of doing this for both young men and ladies. There is no better training, physically, mentally and useful—both in teaching to take care of themselves and be useful men, as well as good discipline—than the Army. The young ladies can serve in the Red Cross and other activities so numerous during war times.

Our Army is a school of training and helpful instruction; under good instructors, your own level and equality, rather your servant, than what the aristocratic Prussian military leaders were.

This was one of several themes and helpful suggestions brought out by Frank P. Sibley, the noted war correspondent, before a meeting of Oshans Hope lodge, A. F. & A. M. at Masonic hall, East Weymouth, last night.

Over 150 enjoyed an excellent supper and any absent member lost a real treat if he missed this splendid address. It was check full of good advice and many helpful suggestions.

The speaker told many interesting war stories and in a general way gave a description of the American young man, as he felt he knew him thru his work that consisted of meeting, talking and writing about them. He wanted to see more young men in newspaper work. He felt it was a work full of noble service. More men should be producers—do something or make something each day. He said the Boy Scouts was the best organization in the world. It taught or expected each scout to do one useful or helpful thing before promotion.

CITIZENSHIP THRU SERVICE

Let everyone that wants to become a citizen of this country work for that privilege. Many have already done so. All future citizens should. If one thinks enough of this country to want to be a citizen he should serve it in some capacity.

There are many ways of doing this for both young men and ladies. There is no better training, physically, mentally and useful—both in teaching to take care of themselves and be useful men, as well as good discipline—than the Army. The young ladies can serve in the Red Cross and other activities so numerous during war times.

Our Army is a school of training and helpful instruction; under good instructors, your own level and equality, rather your servant, than what the aristocratic Prussian military leaders were.

This was one of several themes and helpful suggestions brought out by Frank P. Sibley, the noted war correspondent, before a meeting of Ophans Hope lodge, A. F. & A. M. at Masonic hall, East Weymouth, last night.

Over 150 enjoyed an excellent supper and any absent member lost a real treat if he missed this splendid address. It was chock full of good advice and many helpful suggestions.

The speaker told many interesting war stories and in a general way gave a description of the American young man, as he felt he knew him thru his work that consisted of meeting, talking and writing about them. He wanted to see more young men in newspaper work. He felt it was a work full of noble service. More men should be producers—do something or make something each day. He said the Boy Scouts was the best organization in the world. It taught or expected each scout to do one useful or helpful thing before promotion.

Moderator Barnes expressed his sincere thanks and appreciation to the voters upon the honor conferred on him, and promised to conduct his duties in that impartial way that had been his custom on former occasions which he felt the voters in choosing him again for the honored position, was a token of their confidence in his conduct of that office.

If allowed the speaker would like before commencing the business of the evening to speak on two significant facts that must be apparent to all assembled, that they can in no better way be recorded in the records of the town meetings than a few words at this time.

For nearly 300 years, or since 1636 Weymouth has had an unbroken chain of town meetings, a record to be proud of as a period of steady, orderly progress, and the town stands well with and beside other communities in that at has good roads, sidewalks, lights, fire and police protection and other municipal advantages.

As he had been honored for a number of years as moderator perhaps this would be (due to the recent Act of passed by Legislature of 1921 and to be voted upon by the voters next Monday) the last time he would be thus honored by them; he felt this personal word duly opportune at this time.

The second fact this year, we have assembled with us many new voters, which makes it necessary that I change my opening remarks to "ladies and gentlemen", instead of just to the last named.

He felt he voiced the sentiment of all those present, that they were glad to welcome the ladies for the first time in the deliberations of town affairs, and he felt they would make a valuable addition and render excellent advice in many of the questions that might come up.

On the motion of town counsel William J. Holbrook, duly seconded and carried, the Moderator was instructed to appoint a committee of five to bring in nominations for major officers of the town. The chair appointed Stanley Torrey, James Bosworth, Joseph Kelly, Theron Tirrell and Walter L. Bates, who reported the list of Public Weighers as published in the Town Report, with the new names of G. B. Proctor, Archibald McCullagh, Mary McDonald and Miss Stancomb in place of those of John Byrne, Annie Brennan and Mabel D. Harlow, whose names do not appear.

The same list of Surveyors of Lumber and Bark with the two exceptions of Annie Brennan and Theron L. Tirrell.

For Fence Viewers Bowdoin Smith takes the place of Theron L. Tirrell. Mrs. Albert P. Worthen was chosen to succeed her husband on the Planning Board, her term expires in 1922. J. Herbert Libbey and W. L. Swan take the place of David Kilder and Walter L. Bates, whose terms expire this year.

The above list was accepted and those officers all elected for 1922 by the Town Meeting.

Article 3 of the warrant was soon disposed of when some 27 reports each in turn from the various officers, boards, trustees and others were read and accepted as printed in Town Report.

The special committee appointed to draw up resolutions in memory of the late Town Counsel Albert P. Worthen, were read by William J. Holbrook and unanimously adopted by a rising vote; copy to be spread upon the records and another sent to Mrs. Worthen.

The special committee appointed to look into the advisability and expense of the town joining the Metropolitan Water Commission reported briefly and asked for further time. The figures had arrived too late from the water board to allow the committee time to prepare their report. So far, the committee found, there would be a little less cost if Braintree and Weymouth could act jointly. A motion by Mr. Litchfield to indefinitely postpone any action was lost, and more time was granted to the committee.

The Voters accepted the report of Appropriation Committee on Articles 4 and 5. That authorized treasurer to borrow in anticipation of taxes for 1921 and after Jan. 1, 1922.

Article 6 to place $14,000 in reserve fund.

Article 7 appointing banking agents for 1921.

Article 8, to pay Weymouth's portion for upkeep of Norfolk County hospital for the year 1920 of $6453.95.

On Article 9 came the first debate and discussion of the evening. The committee reported no action on the article and several gentlemen spoke against accepting the report of the committee. H. H. Joy, president of the Historical Society, stated that the moderator had in his opening remarks alluded to importance of town history and what better time to record changes than just at this time. Mr. Joy felt that the subject was of intense interest to many and became more so as one went deeper into it.

The town was approaching its 300th anniversary and certainly there was no more opportune time for a good history. The committee were asking only a loan to put the product of many able writers, who had given unlimited time gratuitously in compiling a history now nearly ready to print. It was to be a loan to serve as working capital that would be repaid on the sale of books and that many subscriptions had already been received. The town has already spent $1000 and to get the full benefit from its expenditure the history should now be published.

Rev. William Hyde made a very earnest plea for this small appropriation by the town. He felt it was a subject that affected us all. Other towns around about had published their histories, but Weymouth never had. The publication at this time would put Weymouth where it belongs. The Historical Society had at their own expense published 3 volumes in years past; one was now out of print; the others were hard to obtain and it offered for sale would bring ten times their original price.

There were people all over the world that came or have relatives in Weymouth and they are continually asking or writing for information of their ancestors. Such a book would have wide distribution and perpetuate much valuable information that had been assembled thru years of hard work. The Historical Society had had only three secretaries and the splendid work of Charles F. Adams and Gilbert Nash should be properly printed, plus considerable more recent additional data obtained from England that would take one back beyond 1622; and no time should now be lost in publication.

George Cuniff, a former member of the Appropriation committee felt the committee's labors are often too lightly spoken of. He agreed with committee that it was hardly proper time now for the expense of this publication.

LAND ALL MEN IN DISTRICT

Arthur Wiseman Post, Avon, S. D., Rounds Out Its 100 Per Cent Membership.

To serve as commander of an American Legion post, which includes every eligible ex-service man in its district of 200 square miles, is the honor conferred on David L. Wickens of Arthur Wiseman post, No. 150, Avon, S. D.

In rounding out its one hundred per cent membership, the post conducted a contest in which the losing side suffered the penalty of serving as kitchen police for a general feast. After the contest the ex-service men not yet enrolled were assigned to individuals until the last man in the territory was signed up.

Members of the post are scattered over a section 20 miles long and 10 miles wide. The post centralizes responsibility by providing that the post officers shall serve as members of the executive committee. It boasts of a first-class Women's auxiliary, an orchestra and basket ball team. Spice is added to the monthly meetings by a permanent entertainment committee which arranges for athletic contests, motion pictures or feasts to wind up the meetings.

Clubhouse is in order now

Kensington Post at Philadelphia is Ready for Entertainment of the Boys During Warm Days.

The wind which sweeps up the Delaware these days is hardly indicative of sunshine and roses; yet the members of Kensington Post at Philadelphia have just finished painting their summer clubhouse and have renovated it from top to bottom.

By doing the job themselves, the members of the Pennsylvania post have saved the price of numerous entertainments which are planned for the summer of 1921.

WHAT THEY DO WITH BONUS

Seventy Per Cent of Minneapolis Men Increase or Open New Savings Accounts.

What do ex-service men do with their bonus money received from the various states?

Some persons opposed to handing out cash to the men either by the states or nation, give as their greatest argument that the beneficiaries will squander the money foolishly as soon as they get it.

But the experience of the Wells Dickey Trust company of Minneapolis which firm has been instrumental in advancing $2,205,000 to ex-service men through special arrangement with the bonus board, completely overturns this conjecture. Figures just compiled by the cashier of the trust company show that of the 8,024 claims handled by the bank for Minneapolis men, 70 per cent of the men increased their own accounts and 26 per cent opened savings accounts at once.

Blasts Hopes of Politicians.

The indorsement of a candidate for political preferment by any organization of the American Legion in Illinois will result in disciplinary action for the offending organization. It was decided at a meeting of the state executive committee of the Legion. The Illinois legionnaires further resolved "that we disapprove the use of the name of the American Legion or of the prestige of office or membership therein by any person for the furtherance of his personal efforts to promote any political candidacy or partisan principles."

Flowers From President Wilson.

A bouquet of flowers from President Wilson was sent every day to Wells Hawks, veteran press agent and commander of S. Mr. Hawks, while on a visit to Washington, was suddenly taken down with inflammatory rheumatism and removed to George Washington hospital. It was while he was in the Washington hospital that the President, a member of the American Legion, aided his "buddy."

Athletic programs have been developed in a number of state departments of the American Legion. In Indiana and Iowa Legion basketball tournaments are under way, and in Massachusetts, under the leadership of a committee composed of notable Massachusetts athletes, Legion members propose interstate competition in a number of major sports.

POULTRY CACKLES

BULLETINS AID WITH FOWLS

Noteworthy Success of District of Columbia Woman With Small Flock Attributed to Study.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One hen, a brood of 12 chickens, and a few farmers' bulletins on poultry raising were the foundation on which Mrs. M. Lohrberg, a resident of the District of Columbia, began her poultry operations in the spring of 1919. During the first 11 months of 1920 her flock of eight birds—the hen and seven pullets—laid 1,059 eggs, an average of about 132. During the same period she hatched from three settings of eggs 30 chickens, of which she raised 23.

The noteworthy success with poultry, came to the attention of the United States Department of Agriculture recently, when Mrs. Lohrberg called for an additional supply of farmers' bulletins, explaining that owing to her success her neighbors had borrowed the bulletins which she had formerly obtained.

"I never kept any chickens before," she said, "and knew nothing about poultry raising until I got the first brood and also the bulletins."

Her chickens are Rhode Island Reds from good stock, and a standard-bred rooster is used. The flock is kept entirely under back-yard conditions in a space 30 by 50 feet, and the feed, costing about $1 a week, is supplemented by table scrapes. Based on retail prices, the estimated value of the 88 dozen eggs laid by this back-yard flock was about $62, but none were sold. A fondness for fresh eggs prompted the family to keep every one for family use. In addition, fried chicken and roast fowl graced the table frequently.

Acting on suggestions in Department of Agriculture literature, she is planning to "put down" in water-glass solution a good supply of eggs next season. Her poultry house is small, but scrupulous care in cleaning it out every day, combined with close personal attention to good feeding is responsible, she believes, for the absence of poultry diseases and ailments.

SANITARY HOUSES FOR HENS

To Secure Adequate Returns in Eggs and Growth Buildings Must Be Light and Ventilated.

Chickens will not give adequate returns in eggs or growth when kept under insanitary conditions, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The construction of the poultry house should receive first attention. Sufficient air space, lighting and ventilation should be provided, and the entire house cleaned at frequent intervals.

While these precautions cannot be depended upon to control mites and lice, they aid the poultryman in determining when these pests are present. Furthermore, the fowls are kept in vigorous condition, which in itself aids in controlling pests. Dirty and insanitary houses provide ideal breeding conditions for insects and germs which are detrimental to poultry. Diseased fowls, or those with malformed bills or feet, fall ready prey to lice, mites and other insect pests, and should be removed as soon as discovered.

DON'T FORCE BREEDING HENS

If Strong Healthy Chicks Are Desired Fowls Must Be Kept in Good Condition in Winter.

Many a breeder has fallen into the pit of forcing his breeders for winter eggs and then wonders how it is that the eggs don't hatch well in the spring. If you want strong healthy chicks and big hatches you will do well to keep your hens in good condition but not force them for heavy egg production.

ESSENTIALS OF EGG MAKING

Sprouted Oats or Steamed Clover and Meat Scrap Take Place of Bugs and Grass.

Laying hens need the elements of egg making that are found so freely in their summer range—meat and grass. Both are vitally necessary to making hens lay, and can be supplied with but little trouble in the form of meat scrap, and sprouted oats or steamed clover.

General Pershing Canvas by Maj. Albert De Kossak

When Kaiser Wilhelm, sitting astride a hobby horse in Potsdam, posed for Maj. Albert de Kossak many years ago, he little dreamed that one day the Kossaks would paint the general who was destined to help overthrow the mighty armies of Germany. Yet that is what has happened, only instead of posing for the artist, as the one-time Kaiser did, on a wooden horse, General Pershing was sketched on his lively chestnut thoroughbred, Kedore. Major De Kossak is seen putting the finishing touches to the canvas, which when finished will be presented to the United States Military academy at West Point by the Polish artist, on behalf of Poland.

PLAN TO FIGHT PROPAGANDA

Will Urge Congress to Make English Language and American History Compulsory in Schools.

Arthur Woods as national director of the Americanism commission of the American Legion, has announced a definite program of Americanism activities which Legion leaders believe will effectively combat anti-American propaganda at its sources.

The plan includes a sympathetic reception to the immigrant and a method of providing him with opportunities to school himself in American ideas; improvement of immigration and naturalization laws; measures to stop the circulation of Bolshevik and I. W. W. propaganda; and providing a greater chance for education in citizenship among the adult native born.

The Legion's campaign will start with the school, which is characterized by Mr. Ryan as the foundation of character building. "No greater problem challenges the American people than the school," said Mr. Ryan. "Sweeping changes must be made in our schools or revolution and the destruction of America will be but a matter of time. The school system of America, as constituted at present, is incapable of developing the type of intelligent citizenship which is the foundation of a democracy, and without which human liberty has no champion. The changes which the American Legion advocates are, first, that English shall be the controlling language in all schools, and, second, that the study of American history and civics shall be made compulsory to all school pupils. To accomplish these proposals the Legion will petition congress to formulate a resolution recommending to state legislatures the passage of statutes embodying these changes."

SENATE SERGEANT AT ARMS

Wisconsin Legion Hero is Honored by the Lawmaking Body of His Home State.

Sergt. Vincent P. Klepinski, kept a platoon of the Thirty-second division in such good condition during the World war that he was called upon by the Wisconsin state senate to keep order in the legislative chambers by assuming the office of sergeant at arms. A winner of the Distinguished Service cross and the Croix de Guerre, Sergeant Klepinski became interested in the American Legion as soon as he returned to America. He organized the Quentin Roosevelt post of the Legion and is now serving as post commander.

"YOUR OLD UNCLE."

Synopsis—Lonely and friendless, Tonnibel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley. Uriah Devon, Tony's father, announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. She finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to a Doctor Pendlehaven. With the Pendlehavens, a family of wealth, live Mrs. Curtis, a cousin, her daughter and son, Katherine Curtis and Reginald Brown. Katherine is in love with Philip MacCauley. Tonnibel returns the picture to Doctor John, and learns it belongs to his brother, Dr. Paul Pendlehaven. It is a portrait of Doctor Paul's daughter, stolen in infancy. Doctor John goes with Tony to the canal boat. Mrs. Devon is deeply agitated and makes Tony swear she will never tell of Devon's brutality. The older Devons disappear and Tony is taken into the Pendlehaven house as a companion to Doctor Paul. Philip saves Tony from Reginald, after a fight on the boat. Uriah appears, orders Philip off and locks Tony up. Philip again rescues her. They exchange love vows. The Curtis are furious over Tony's presence. Philip and Tony unexpectedly meet in the Pendlehaven home. Doctor Paul improves under Tony's care.

That afternoon he met Captain MacCauley on State street. The sight of Reggie's slim swarthy figure brought Philip to a quick decision. He stopped directly in front of Brown, and, as it was the first time they'd met since the memorable moment when Reggie had been flung in the lake, they looked embarrassedly into each other's eyes.

"So you decided to come home?" asked Philip, his voice sharply toned. Reggie gathered together his courage and curbed his lips. Why should he be afraid of a Salvation army captain even if he were rich?

"It looks like it, doesn't it?" he sneered. "And it's none of your business, anyway."

"It's my business about how you treat Tony Devon," Philip began, but Reggie's fresh outburst cut off his words.

"Nobody'll ever treat her any way after this," he almost growled. "She's dead, drowned in the lake."

A horrified expression passed over Philip's face. Then he realized that Reginald didn't know of Tony Devon's presence in the Pendlehaven home.

"She's better off than she was the last time you saw her," he said and whirled away.

Twenty minutes later Philip was talking to John Pendlehaven.

"You promised last night I could see her today," he pleaded. "I'll promise only to stay a few minutes. May I go up?"

"No; I'll call Tony down," was the reply. "I don't want Paul disturbed today."

When the boy and girl stood facing each other, embarrassment kept them silent for some moments. Philip had decided to find out whether Tony knew of Reginald Brown's connection with the Pendlehavens, although he was positive in his own mind she did not.

"It's a nice day," he blurted out, and Tonnibel's low "yes" was her "Tony, Don't You Like Me at All?"

only answer. How pretty she looked, thought Philip, and how much he desired to kiss her as he had the other time in the breaking dawn on the shore of Lake Cayuga.

"Tony," he said huskily, "don't you—don't you—like me at all?"

Tonnibel opened her eyes to their fullest extent. Why, hadn't she kissed him, oh, ever so many times? No girl would do that—She blushed and studied the tip of her pretty shoe.

"Don't you, Tony, or if you don't, couldn't you?" pleaded the boy.

"I like you heaps," she breathed with suppressed emotion. She wanted to throw her arms about him right then, to tell him how she had longed to be with him, all about her promise that she would not leave the house again without some one with her. She was considering this when—

"I wanted to ask you—if you've seen that man again?" said Philip. "The one I—"

"You slung him in the lake?" interrupted Tonnibel, a dimple peeping out at the corner of her mouth. "No, never. I guess old Reggie thinks I'm dead, don't you?"

"I saw him in town today," he told her finally and then almost cursed himself for his brutality. She had gone so white and was looking about her helplessly.

"He'll find me, mebbe," she hesitated, a haunted expression coming into her eyes. "Mebbe he will."

"No, he won't; not if you let me help you," exclaimed Philip. "Now, listen to me! Don't go out of Cousin Paul's rooms for anything, no matter what. Call a servant if you want anything downstairs. And don't leave the house unless you go with me. I want your promise that you will not come downstairs. Will you give it to me?"

Tony didn't understand why she should promise this, and a whimsical thought came into her mind that she was always making promises to some one, but she couldn't refuse him, and Philip went away a little happier and feeling much more secure.

CHAPTER XI.

"I Love You More'n the Whole World!"

One late afternoon Philip MacCauley started for the Pendlehavens', desirous of seeing Tony Devon. Katherine saw him guiding his car up the roadway and ran to the door to meet him. Her smile was especially radiant, for she had begun to lose her fear about Tonnibel's influence over him.

"Sit down, Phil," she entreated. "Mother's sick today. Reggie almost sets her into fits."

Philip still remained standing.

"And you've kept away so much, dear boy," complained the girl. "It seems you don't care for us any more."

"I do, though, but I've been busy," replied Philip, not able to think of any other excuse.

"But you've always been busy, more or less," the girl shot back, "and yet you came. Mother and I have come to the conclusion that you couldn't have been very much interested in—Cousin Paul's protegee. You haven't even asked about her."

Philip coughed embarrassedly, then laughed.

"The fact is, I came to see her today," he exclaimed.

Katherine went wax white.

"What do you want to see her for?" she asked sharply.

"Oh, just to talk to her," replied MacCauley, awkwardly.

Katherine shook her head.

"I don't believe you can," she protested dubiously. "Cousin John won't let any of us go up to Paul's room, and she never comes down any more."

"Where's Reggie?" demanded the boy.

"Oh, he's gone to Trumansburg today," answered Katherine, listlessly.

"And I am glad of it. I wish he'd never come back. He keeps mother in tears most of the time he's here."

"And Cousin John! I want to ask him if I can take Miss Devon—" Katherine's head went up in disdain.

"I know what you want to ask him," she interrupted tartly. "But you needn't waste your sympathy on that Devon girl. But mamma says—"

Before she could tell him her mother's opinion, the door opened and Dr. Pendlehaven walked in.

"Cousin John," said Philip, abruptly, going to him, "may I take Miss Devon out for a little ride? I'll promise to bring her back in an hour."

The doctor looked at the boy's dark pleading eyes, looked and then smiled.

"Perhaps you won't have any better luck than I have had, son," he answered with a little laugh. "I've almost been down on my knees to the child, and she absolutely refuses."

"Mother's dreadfully against her riding in our car, Cousin John," Katherine cried in thin, throaty tones. "The thought of it makes her sick."

"Your mother's not really sick, my dear Katherine," the doctor asserted.

"Ah, here she is. Katherine was just speaking of you, my dear Sarah."

A merry twinkle came into his eyes as he turned on his cousin.

"Now, was she?" smirked Mrs. Curtis. "What were you saying, Kathie?"

Katherine lifted her eyes, slumbering with passionate anger.

"That you would dislike Cousin Paul's—I mean that girl up there—taken out for a drive," replied Katherine.

Mrs. Curtis caught her daughter's expression and looked at Dr. John, then at Philip.

"Well, I should say I wouldn't like it," she ejaculated. "There's a limit to all things. What in the world would the neighbors say to such an outrage?"

Dr. Pendlehaven's face gathered a dark look.

"If she'll go with Philip, Sarah," he said, "I wouldn't give a hang what the neighbors said. Come along up, Phil, and ask her."

"Cousin John!" cried Mrs. Curtis.

"And, oh, Cousin John," gasped Katherine. But the doctor was too angry to pay any heed to them.

"You really want to take the child, my lad?" he asked, smiling at MacCauley.

"Yes, do let me," blurted the boy.

"Let's go up now."

They had no more than closed the door when Katherine burst into tears, and Mrs. Curtis plumped down into a chair in a spell of hysterics.

"The little trollop," she cried. "Oh, I'd like—"

"I'd like to kill her," burst forth Katherine. "Mother, if you don't do something for me, I'll die. Oh, to think of it; he takes her out when he could take me! Oh, God! Oh, dear God, help me!"

Her daughter's terrible outburst brought Mrs. Curtis directly out of herself.

"Don't, Kathie," she said in a whisper. "I really had no idea you cared for him so much. I will help you, poor dear. John shall listen to me this night; he certainly shall."

Meanwhile Tonnibel looked up with inquiring eyes as Dr. Pendlehaven walked in. He had closed Philip on the outside of the door.

The girl gave him a slight smile. The doctor came forward and took hold of her hand.

"Paul," he asked, looking at his brother, "could you spare our little girl for an hour? I want her to go out."

Tonnibel, remembering her promise to Philip, rose to her feet. "I don't want to," she trembled. "I'd rather stay here. I'd really rather stay here."

Pendlehaven went to the door and opened it, and Philip walked in.

"Here's a young man, Miss Tony Devon," he said, laughing at the sight of the girl's puzzled face, "who tells me he wants you to drive with him. Now, what do you say?"

"Say yes, darling Tony," Philip ejaculated with sparkling eyes.

"Oh, that's how the land lies, is it?" said Dr. John under his breath. Then aloud, "I didn't know this thing had gotten to the 'darling' point, Philip."

Tonnibel's face grew poppy red, and she stood with her eyes cast down and her fingers interlocked nervously. Oh! how she wanted to go; now her boy had come for her.

"You will go, Tony?" begged Philip, his face very red from John's speech.

"If—if—" the girl stammered.

John Pendlehaven laughed.

"She can go, can't she, Paul?" he asked. "Phil will take good care of her."

Paul Pendlehaven smiled and sighed.

"Of course, she can go! She ought to!" he said. "She stays in too close. I've told her that every day. Go along, little maid, but come back to your old uncle in a little while."

Philip seized her hand to lead her away, but Tony turned to the bed. Then she stooped and kissed Paul Pendlehaven impulsively.

"I love you," she whispered, "and mebbe it'll only be half an hour before I'm back to you."

For many minutes after the car started Philip paid strict attention to his driving, and Tonnibel allowed herself the luxury of taking a sidelong look at him now and then. Once within sight of Beebe Lake, Captain MacCauley slowed down and stopped.

A little drop of something for Dr. Paul.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ON THE WAY.

"Now you must start," said Mrs. Wood Elf to the boy and the girl who were going forth for adventures. They had heard the story Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life had told them of how she was named and how she lived up to the meaning of a) the words in her name.

"I packed up a delicious luncheon and supper for you," said Mrs. Wood Elf. "And there is also enough for breakfast and luncheon tomorrow. Here! I will put it in your knapsack. And you needn't stay to help wash up the dishes (they hadn't really said anything about dishes, but they were glad that, as the subject had been mentioned, they wouldn't have to stop around any longer) for the old giant who said you would be starting early this morning would be surprised if he saw you still around."

"You were going to take us to the end of the wood, weren't you?" asked the boy. "We wouldn't be able to find our way back to the road before night-fall, and, while we'd love to spend the night here again, we really must be on our way."

"Yes, I think we should be starting," said the girl, "though we've had a very good time."

"That's right," said Mrs. Wood Elf.

Really Quite Glad.

"You haven't forgotten your manners. That was a most polite speech," she laughed and continued:

"We like manners even in the woods. We're used to it. You would be surprised, I've no doubt, to see how polite even the birds are to each other. Now," she said, "I will take you out of the woods. I will lead you to the road."

"I'll do the dishes," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life.

"I should think you could get something more interesting out of life than that," said the girl.

"Well, perhaps I could, and, in fact, I'm sure I could," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life. "But my mother, whose name was Take-Your-Time, told me once that it was nice sometimes to thank folks for their hospitality in other ways besides the use of words."

"And Mrs. Wood Elf will be late in getting home and will doubtless then be tired. I'm really quite glad to do the dishes under such circumstances. Good-by! Good luck!"

"Good-by," they shouted as they went through the woods with Mrs. Wood Elf.

"We would never find the way ourselves," said the boy.

"I'm sure we wouldn't," said the girl.

"Let's run," said the boy. So they ran in and out of the trees and sometimes Mrs. Wood Elf ran with them, but she said she wasn't so fond of running as they were. She promised, though, to be on the same path, walking straight ahead so they could always come back and find her.

"I'm so glad we came adventuring," said the boy.

"I'll be glad to see the House of Secrets. I love secrets," said the girl. "and to think that we'll have secrets filling up a whole house!"

"Oh, it's fine to have some place worth seeing at the end of the trip," said the boy. "And a long journey with many adventures will make it all the more interesting."

"But you're going the wrong way," said some voices.

"No, you're going the right way," said some other voices.

"Nonsense," said the first voices, "you're going the wrong way. We know."

"They don't know," said the other voices. "You're going the right way."

"I think we must be going the right way," said the boy. "We'll run back to Mrs. Wood Elf and find out. How fine these adventures are."

"I love adventures and adventures! Such a journey! Such excitement. It's wonderful!"

"Let's hear more of what the voices have to say," suggested the boy.

"All right," the girl agreed.

So they didn't go back, just then, to Mrs. Wood Elf, but they stayed and talked with the voices, though they couldn't see who owned the voices at all. Such was the excitement of the adventuring!

EXPERIMENTS WITH STATIC ELECTRICITY.

Place a sheet of paper upon a wooden table top, rub the surface with your fist (Fig. 1), raise a corner, and note how the paper clings to the wooden surface. The paper will also cling to your clothes or hands, and will lift bits of paper.

Sealing-wax or a rubber comb, rubbed briskly with flannel or a woolen cloth, will become electrified, and will attract bits of paper (Fig. 2). An interesting experiment is to make a small hoop out of a paper strip, and cause it to roll by means of an electrified stick of sealing-wax or rubber comb held close to its edge (Fig. 3).

To detect the presence of static electricity, make an electroscope (Fig. 4). Cut a small square of cardboard (A), and stick a pin through it (B). Make the piece balanced on the pin out of paper. Cut it to the shape shown in Fig. 5, fold it in half, and notch it at the center of the fold. Make hanger

PENNANTS, ARM BANDS, AND A MEGAPHONE.

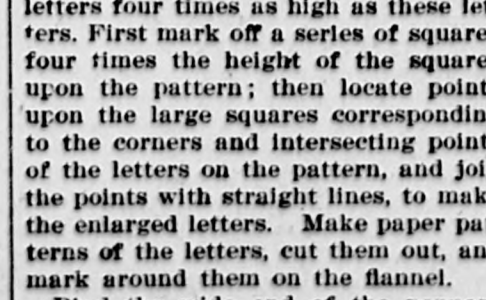

You can make the pennants easily, and the material, light-weight flannel, will be inexpensive, because only a small piece will be required. There are no fixed proportions for pennants. I have several that measure 24 inches long and 9 inches wide, one of this same width, but 30 inches long, and several little ones 14 inches long and 6 inches wide. Suit yourself as to the dimensions, and make either a single point (Fig. 1) or two points (Fig. 2), and use one, two, or three colors, as you choose. It is important to lay out the measurements carefully, so as to get opposite edges symmetrical, and you will find it easiest to prepare a paper pattern, then mark around its edges upon the cloth.

Fig. 5 shows an alphabet of the right proportions for the letters of your pennants. Make the letters U and V alike. These are marked off into squares to make it easy to enlarge them. Suppose that you want letters four times as high as these letters. First mark off a series of squares four times the height of the squares upon the pattern; then locate points upon the large squares corresponding to the corners and intersecting points of the letters on the pattern, and join the points with straight lines, to make the enlarged letters. Make paper patterns of the letters, cut them out, and mark around them on the flannel.

Bind the wide end of the pennant with a strip of flannel, and fasten two pairs of tapes to this re-enforced edge, as shown in the illustrations. If the pennant is to be made of two or more colors, place the edges of the strips together, and overcast them.

the paper and trim off the ends afterwards. Glue together the edges of the paper, and re-enforce both ends by gluing paper over them. A leather strap stitched to the side will make a handle.

D out of paper, and paste it to the sides of C over the notch. The hanger rests upon the pin point. To use the electroscope, bring a charged body toward it. One end of C will swing toward the body in the same way a compass needle is attracted by a magnet.

Fig. 6 shows another form of electroscope. Make a standard out of pieces A, B and C, and suspend a piece of cork (D) from the end of C by means of a silk thread (E). An electrified rubber comb or stick of sealing-wax (F) will attract the cork.

A body charged with static electricity will attract a body not electrified. Bring the two together (for example, cork D and sealing-wax F of the electroscope in Fig. 6), and the body not charged will become charged by contact with the charged body. The two bodies repel each other.

Drop a suspended cork into a glass tumbler (Fig. 9). By bringing an electrified stick of sealing-wax to sides of the glass, the cork will be influenced as though the glass were not between.

An electrophorus is an apparatus for obtaining static electricity (Fig.

10). Run melted sealing-wax into a can cover having a narrow rim, so that it will be nearly brimful (Fig. 11). Cut a circular piece of tin an inch smaller in diameter than the cover, and tack it at its center to a thread spool (Fig. 12). Fasten a short glass rod into the spool hole.

To charge the electrophorus, rub the sealing-wax briskly with flannel or a woolen cloth. Then, to charge the tin disk, take hold of the glass rod handle, place the disk upon the sealing-wax, and touch the finger of the other hand to the top of the disk (Fig. 10). Raise the disk by the glass handle, then bring it close to a finger or your tongue, and a spark will jump across the gap. To recharge the disk, replace it upon the sealing-wax, touch your finger to the disk as before, then raise the disk. The wax surface requires only an occasional recharging.

In Fig. 4, out of flannel, with the initial cut out of flannel and glued upon it. Sew a tape to each end, by which to strap the band about your arm.

An outdoor game cannot be cheered with the proper enthusiasm without a megaphone, and one of these sound magnifiers can be made of heavy wrapping paper (Fig. 6). You can cut the paper to the shape shown in the pattern of Fig. 7, the ends of which are curved just right, or you can roll up the paper and trim off the ends afterwards. Glue together the edges of the paper, and re-enforce both ends by gluing paper over them. A leather strap stitched to the side will make a handle.

There are other Weymouth people similarly situated.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Weymouth residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

CALL TO BOSTON CHURCH

Weymouth is honored by the selection of one of her pastors for a leading Boston church. A Boston paper says: "The Rev. Frank Kingdon, for the past two years pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of East Weymouth, is to be transferred to the New England conference, which will hold its annual session at Springfield in April. He is to become pastor of the Tremont Methodist Episcopal church of Boston. This arrangement has been approved by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, who is to preside at the session of the conference."

Mr. Kingdon is to succeed the Rev. Kelly Jenness, who has gone to a western conference. He is regarded as one of the most brilliant of the younger ministers of the Methodist denomination. He is a man of magnetic personality, of broad and progressive views, of ripe scholarship, and an eloquent preacher.

He is a native of London, England, where he was born Feb. 27, 1894. His academic education was received in the University College school of that city. He came to the United States in 1912, at which time he joined the Eastern Maine conference. His first charge was over the Methodist Episcopal church at China, and one year later he was transferred to a church at Harmony, Me., where he labored for three years. During this ministry a new church edifice was erected. While at China and Harmony he took the conference theological course.

In 1916 Mr. Kingdon was transferred to the southern New England conference, to enable him to take a course of study at Boston University. He immediately entered that institution, graduating with a degree of A. B. While pursuing his studies he served as pastor of the Methodist church at Hull in 1916, 1917 and 1918. In 1919 he was appointed to his present charge, which he has since filled.

Mr. Kingdon was awarded the Jacob Sleeper Fellowship of liberal Arts of Boston University, and he is now taking that course of study in connection with his work as a teacher in French at the university. He is also pursuing a course in philosophy at Harvard University.

Mr. Kingdon was married Feb. 27, 1915, to Miss Gertrude Bailey of Harmony, Me. Three children have been born to them, all being boys. Mr. Kingdon is a member of the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

At the recent meeting of Old Colony council, Boy Scouts, three Weymouth men were chosen for officers to look after the boys for 1922. J. B. Reed is a vice-president, with Dr. Joseph Chapin and W. T. Seabury on the executive committee.

The executive enthusiastically reported that the past year the Old Colony council showed a gain. There are now 450 scouts in the Old Colony council, divided into 20 troops, and offered by 46 adult leaders of the highest type; 23 being veterans of the World War, 16 having attained commissions.

Sixty scouts have attained merit badges, 85 first class and 95 second class.

A new camp at Manomet was required during the year, with 174 boys in camp from one to six weeks.

At camp the scout program was carried out and it was found that boys, whether members of scout organizations or not, were intensely interested in scout activities. Over 300 tests were passed on such subjects as cooking, first aid, conservation, surveying, astronomy, swimming, life saving, athletics, pioneering.

The boys co-operated in every way to make the camp a success. The boys were trustworthy, helpful and courteous at all times.

To take full advantage of all their opportunities for good, Boy Scouts should receive a stronger financial backing from the public.

A meeting of the executive committee was held Monday evening to prepare plans for raising the budget for the New Year's work. About $6000 is needed in this county and Weymouth's share is about $800.

On Saturday the Weymouth troops led by scout master Duncan McKellar will have a long hike into the Blue Hills meeting the Quincy troops at Farley's pond, where dinner will be prepared and a brief time for sports before returning.

HERBERT W. LUCAS

On Saturday, Feb. 19, Herbert William Lucas passed away in a hospital, in Seattle, Washington. He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lucas of 11 Priory avenue, Manchester, England. He came to East Braintree about 17 months ago and lived with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Spain, 178 Commercial street. While living with them he worked with the Cost Department of the Fore River Shipbuilding office, where he was popular with his fellow workers and employers.

Last September Mr. Lucas went out West and had been there all winter. He became ill about five weeks ago of heart trouble and great hopes were held for his recovery. He was only 24 years of age. The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Spain in bereavement. He was well known and well liked by the young people here.

LARGE APPROPRIATIONS

book store. Copies were scarce and a high price was paid if one was on sale it always brought a handsome premium.

Selectman Hawes felt no further words should be necessary to show the need and demand for history at this time and the Town should not take lightly the completion of such an important work.

Many representative men had made valuable contributions and have given more time to the work than the Appropriation committee had to their work.

Robert Hoffman speaking for Appropriation committee said the latter was not against the publication, but felt that high prices of material would make work very expensive just now, the same work can be done much cheaper later on.

The Society was only ready to publish three volumes now and no definite number had been asked for and on the whole the committee felt it was advisable to postpone publication a few months, when the cost would be lower and their would be a larger number of subscribers that would ensure a more successful proposition than at present.

Walter L. Bates did not see how any Weymouth voter could turn down such an important question. For they had but to recall all the many years of work contributed by prominent men. Judge Cook had worked over 20 years on data and gathering material. Who was better posted or more interested in the alewife fishery than the late Albert P. Worthen and his data is available only for immediate compiling. It would seem as though no more time should be lost to record permanently this valuable history, the work of men familiar with the subject. This will not be true in years to come, for each year sees vacancies in the community.

It seems a poor excuse that of economy, on the part of the appropriation committee to further postpone this article. Delay will mean added expense later if the work is done by hired compilers rather than by those who now live in and love the town.

Article 10 appears on the ballot and did not come up for action at the town meeting.

Article 11 was passed by, for the reason that a state law provides when town meetings must be held; hence the passage of this Article would have no effect.

Article 12, report of committee recommending no action was accepted.

Article 13 called for $4047.38 for overdrafts. Article 14 for $165,300 for schools and Article 15 for $1900 for interest on Humphrey School bonds were carried as recommended by the committee.

North Weymouth is assured of a new schoolhouse in the near future thru the acceptance of Articles 16 and 17 that calls for appropriation that purchases a lot of land on Bridge street. The lot is considered ideal for school purposes, being fairly level, high and dry, with good approaches and convenient to this rapidly growing section; being close to Bicknell Square on Bridge street, nearly opposite Newcomb street.

The public parks benefit thru the granting of $800 for their cars under Article 18. A provision for a convenience station at Webb Park is provided by Article 19, both were accepted.

The attempt to amend the amount of $19,000 recommended by the committee for the fire department did not pass; the original sum standing.

W. W. Pratt made an urgent plea to either give the men at Nash's Corner fire equipment, or else do away with the fire station. Its maintenance in present form was next to useless and also the need warranted a motor chassis. The necessity to pay for services of a wagon from a distant station would thus be saved.

Mr. Hoffman for committee said this was only part of the expense, the State Rules would require expensive alterations at the station for a motor car, necessary to remodel, change open fires etc. Thought town was well supplied with fire apparatus and did not need more. The motion to indefinitely postpone Article 21 was carried.

Police Department is allowed $18,775.50 by Article 22, which was carried.

Article 23 grants Board of Health $350 and the next Article 24 provides $2000 for a district nurse; both were carried.

The sums recommended by the Appropriation Committee for town offices, election and officers were allowed as suggested in Articles 25 to 29.

One voter felt that during the recent removal of snow those employed were too youthful and playful and asked that the next time the amount called for under Article 28 be spent more wisely.

Article 30 called for working of Filomena street. No action was taken under Article 31 that called for an appropriation. This street is in East Weymouth, between Broad and Madison and is of commercial traffic value to a nearby shoe factory.

The second article to cause debate was Article 32 to see if town would vote $900 for an improved sidewalk on westerly side of Main street, beginning at corner of Columbian street, thence to Independence Square. The Appropriation Committee report was no action on the article.

Selectman Hastings felt the town should consider this question and moved against accepting report of committee. Hardly appropriate for him as a Town Father to oppose or knock the committee, but he felt there was a real need for this work. Paves had increased, more were walking. Many men formerly rode to Braintree, but thanks to State street more walking was now in vogue. Many commuters used this street to and from the station. Many school children's lives were in

LAND COURT

To William E. Warnick, Francis H. Lord, Alvin C. Thayer and Henry B. Alvord, of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Delvina M. L. Fitzgerald, of Norwich, in the State of Connecticut, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Weymouth, bounded and described as follows:

Northerly on Hollis street, one hundred seventy-four and 49-100 (174.49) feet; Easterly on land of Henry B. Alvord, one hundred forty-one and 78-100 (141.78) feet; Southerly by land supposed to belong to Francis H. danger daily by the swift motor cars passing, as they were forced to walk in the street, because of poor sidewalk condition. He moved that a sum of $1200 be voted to make it a permanent job, rather than an improved one as called for by the Article. Mr.
Tay asked if there was any sidewalk there now, said it was easy to appropriate money, and there was need for a great many sidewalks, but did not favor this motion.

Mr. Sheehy said he favored sidewalks, but South Weymouth had already the best ones and East Weymouth had none. He thought a little crushed stone would connect any missing link, if there was one in the chain of good walks at South Weymouth.

Mr. Cate wanted to know why the committee had reported no action.

Mr. Hoffman replied that there was a good walk on the other side, which was enough. The many prominent men that used it must cross over.
The returns under the betterment would be little, because of school and cemetery that were on that side.
A voter remarked the other side was equally as bad, forcing people to walk in the street and putting children in danger.

Mr. Bicknell moved it be done under Betterment Act. Frank Torrey said the school and cemetery took most of frontage. This motion and that of Selectman Hastings were both lost, and the recommendation of Appropriation committee accepted.

Article 33 was accepted as recommended, calling for $400 for drain crossing on High street, after Mr.
Sheehy had reminded the voters that a case on Broad street was even worse and had been in the warrant many times in the past and warned if this passed it would serve as a start and there would be more cases next year.

Article 34 will improve the southerly side of Lovell street to extent of $300 received favorable action.

Article 35 recommended to the Superintendent of Streets by the committee was carried after Mr. Hoffman assured a voter who protested to conditions saying, "that the street was fitted named and was like a saucer filled at all times with water", that the work mentioned in the article would have attention of Superintendent.
Article 36 calling for repairs on Union avenue and East street. $2000 was recommended and Article accepted by the voters.

Article 37, asking for $15,000 for permanent work on Union street, and Article 38 for construction of North street the sum of $20,000, were both carried on recommendation of committee. Mr. Sheehy asked the difference in the cost of construction of macadam and asphalt roads and Superintendent Johnson said that asphalt roads cost 20% more, but lasted longer than macadam roads. Mr. Sheehy doubted whether even Broad street would hold up as the years pass.

As Article 38 called for the issuing of bonds it required a count of votes, Messrs. Libby and Humphrey were sworn in as tellers. The vote was yes 202, no 2; Moderator declaring it had received the necessary two-thirds vote and was accepted.

Chairman Hawes read the reports of Selectmen, calling for laying out of Idellwell and Emerson streets and both reports were accepted.

The Appropriation Committee reported no action on Articles 41 and 42 calling for appropriations to start working of these streets, and the suggestion was accepted. But on the motion of Frank Torrey speaking for people of Emerson street and the new development of property there felt the money should be appropriated. Mr. Hoffman said no one had appeared at the meeting of the committee. Selectman Humphrey replied many appeared at the hearing in interest of this new street. The motion was finally passed over objection of the appropriation committee and the amount allowed for working it.

Article 43 providing for the appropriation of the revenue from the Water Department was carried as recommended by the committee, the amount being $53,112.50.

The tellers counted the vote on Article 44 and found the necessary two-thirds vote in favor, and the chair declared the article carried, as called for, $10,000 for construction of water system.

Articles 45 and 46 were referred to the Water Commissioners.

A resident of Park street moved to have Article 46 acted upon, but was informed by Mr. Hoffman that the cost would be over $8000 and far in excess of the returns, so the motion did not prevail.

No action was taken on Article 47 as a committee is already at work on the question.

The recommendation of the committee to provide $8900 for State and Military aid and Soldiers Relief under articles 48 and 49 were carried.

COMING

ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Article 50 to provide $18,000 for relief and support of poor was also carried.

The Appropriation committee recommended no action on Article 51 calling for purchase of Severance estate for almshouse purposes. Selectman Humphrey hoped the matter would come before the voters for the overseers wanted to take better care of the poor that were now being taken care of by an adjoining town at considerable expense. Thought town will do well to have their own building at less expense.

A motion was made and carried to authorize Moderator to appoint a committee of ten to consider this article also the advisability of joining the town of Hingham in such a project.

The recommendations of the committee were carried allowing Tufts library $7900, Article 52; and the sum of $750 to Fogg library. Article 53.

That the town will have about 32
new street lights was made possible by Article 54 appropriating $16,000 for street lighting.

This allowed the referring of the next five Articles to Electric Light Commission, who will probably grant some of the petitions. Meeting voted Articles 55, 56, 57, 58 and 59 be referred as suggested by the committee.

A new town survey under direction of the Selectmen was voted by accepting the report of the committee appropriating $1500 for the purpose in Article 60.

Article 61 fixing salary of tax collector at 8 mills on the dollar, to be regulated by Section 57, Chap. 59, of the general laws. Just before adjourning the meeting voted on motion that called for the tax collector to have his office at Town Offices, in Savings Bank building.

No action was voted on Article 62.

Article 63 calling for an appropriation of $15,000 for Town Interest becoming due during current year. Article 64 for printing and advertising Article 65 and 66 calling for $8250 for shade trees and suppression of moths.
Article 67 a sum of $4250 for miscellaneous expenses. Article 68, $400 for Memorial day. Article 69 $250 for alewife fishery and Article 70 authorizing legal proceedings by Selectmen were carried as recommended.

Motion to amend Article 71 was made that "all property to be sold at public auction must be advertised before the sale."

The town will erect bound stones on accepted town ways was made possible by acceptance of Article 72, which puts $300 at their disposal for this purpose.

The report of the Selectmen was read by Bradford Hawes; Article 73 to lay out and re-location of parts of Bicknell Square.

And the last Article 74 appropriating $400 for this purpose was carried.
On the motion of Selectman Humphrey a vote of thanks was extended to the moderator for the fine, impartial manner and prompt way he had conducted the meeting.

A second motion voted appreciation for the long and faithful service rendered by Chairman of Selectmen Bradford Hawes. Both motions were unanimous.

The Moderator appointed the following men to act on the Appropriation committee for 1931: Charles E. Stiles, William C. Earle, Joseph Kelley,
Charles A. Vinal and Jacob Wichert.
Meeting adjourned at 10 P. M.

the alliterative title of the new and sensational farce which began its Bos-producer of farcial entertainment, Mr.

A. H. Woods, has exceeded his own dazzling speed in this newest fun-making play "Getting Gertie's Garter"

Was the Biblical version of our modern saying: "Nothing succeeds like success." So it was with Dr. Pierce's, of Buffalo, N. Y., who, over 50 years ago, gave to the world a Prescription which has never been equalled as a tonic for the weaknesses of women. Many women in every hamlet, town or city will gladly testify that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription did them a world of good. Ask your neighbor.

Another of this great physician's successful remedies is known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and, like the "Prescription," is now sold by druggists everywhere, in both liquid and tablet form. This medicine was a success from the start, for the list of men and women all over the universe who have successfully used it for indigestion and as a blood tonic and system builder, makes an amazing total of thousands.

Pride and Prunes

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Welles looked at her four daughters with an inquiring expression. They looked very well—very pretty, one might say—although their clothes were obviously last year's style and their shoes were shabby. One noticed that they had made the most of old clothes. The Welles family had suffered reverses since the death of the husband and father. He had been a salaried man, with four daughters to educate and a large house to maintain. Even the house was growing shabby by inches, Molly declared.

"What do you think of my plan?" asked Mrs. Welles at last.

"It's awful," groaned Madge. "I never expected we would come to keeping boarders."

"And I particularly detest prunes!" complained Cicely.

"Think of the hard work," suggested Barbara, looking at her well-kept hands.

"We might make it a pruneless boarding house," and Della went off into a peal of merry laughter at her own wit, but her charming face clouded at once as she saw the disappointment in her mother's countenance.

Were those new lines on her mother's placid brow? Lines of care and worry—with four idle daughters? Della stiffened in a ramrod way, that was like her father.

"We can do it if we want to," she said bluntly. "We're too lazy for words—all of our friends, rich and poor, are working—none of us are qualified to take up any special line of work and taking paying guests is respectable; we can keep our own home, reserve some rooms out of this big house for ourselves. Mother can superintend everything, I can help the cook in the kitchen, Molly and Barbara can wait on table and take care of rooms at first until we can afford to keep another maid, and Cicely shall keep all the accounts and sew for the rest of us. Who will join the league of workers?"

With more or less reluctance they all agreed, but Cicely, the clever needle woman, pouted. "People make such foolish jokes about prunes and boarding houses—and oh, dear—I suppose I must join too!"

Della called them the band of unwilling workers, but her enthusiasm

soon whipped them into line with the new enterprise, and they were encouraged by their friends and by tales of the money to be made. They could charge well, for the house was large and situated in an extensive garden. The girls found their first happiness in cleaning the house and preparing the rooms.

Everything was planned in advance, and every room was rented before they were ready to receive their "guests." A good cook was hired and then the doors were open to receive the people and the trunks that soon occupied the rooms, small and large. After a while the family retired to a wing of the house, which they held against any siege of would-be boarders.

The girls were happy. Mrs. Welles was relieved of care, and money seemed to flow into the cash box in a steady stream. Table boarders came from the neighborhood, and the Welles place achieved a reputation.

For six months everything went well; never a word of complaint reached the family, and never a prune appeared upon the table, never a baked bean reared itself above the horizon.

Madge became engaged to a young college professor and Cicely was sewing on her sister's modest trousseau. Della, who called herself Cinderella, was dubbed Cinder by the rest of the family, became famous for her delicious pastry and sang like a thrush over her work in the kitchen.

"Dat singin' shuah does add flavor to de cookin', yas ma'am," averred Sally, the black cook.

One day the singing stopped and the singer dropped her pretty head. One of the guests was going to leave—and he had given no reason beyond the fact that his mother needed a change. Mr. Payton was young and attractive. He worked in the local bank and had a bright future. His mother was a robust old lady whom they all loved, but lately she had lost interest in life. She declared she was going out to Ohio to live with her married daughter and that would leave young Payton alone.

"I hate to leave Robert. No one knows what foolish girl he might fall in love with," Mrs. Payton had confided to Mrs. Welles. "One of your daughters now—"

The two elderly ladies did not know it, but one of the daughters—pretty Cinder herself, had captured Robert's heart and lost her own in exchange.

"When he leaves, he will forget all about me in the kitchen," mourned Della. "He will meet pretty girls who wear frilly things all the time and keep their hands immaculate!" She lifted her floury hands for inspection, and then dropped them in confusion, for Robert Payton was looking into the vine-covered window of the butler's pantry where Della made her pastry. He poked his head through the vines, caught Della's floury hands and kissed them, receiving smudges of flour on nose and chin in the process.

"Oh—" Della began to cry a little, and then told him all her woes. "There is an undercurrent of something. The boarders are dissatisfied—the food is good—abundant and we have variety—" She shook her head perplexedly.

A slow grin spread over Payton's face. "Two things lacking, sweetheart—will you marry me if I tell you? You know I love you?"

"I will anyway!" dared Della happily. "Tell me—what is the matter? What do they want?"

"Prunes!" hissed Mr. Payton, "and baked beans! I know—because I want 'em myself."

Della stared. "We haven't any in the house—we wouldn't serve them." "I'll get them now—we'll have 'em for dinner—and after dinner—is this your evening off, Miss Cinder?"

"Yes," whispered Della happily. "I want to tell you the rest of the story of me two! In the meantime, to my errand—prunes and beans, hurrah!"

And Della began to sing like a nightingale. Once in awhile she stopped and laughed. "Prunes and beans—prunes and pride!"

WOLFE JOURNALS IN MUSEUM

Montreal Institution Has Complete Collection of Documents Bearing on Life of Great Soldier.

Montreal is in possession of one of the most complete collections in existence of original journals, letters, portraits and effects of Gen. James Wolfe. It was brought together by David Ross McCord, and will be part of the new McCord National museum at McGill university. The letters from the pen of Wolfe begin with a boyhood epistle, dated January 24, 1741, and addressed to his tutor, W. Weston. It shows the serious trend of the boy's thoughts even at that time, and a tendency to meditation and philosophizing. A second letter, written the following December to the same tutor and friend, reveals the other side of Wolfe's character, the appeal of action, for in it he exults over the prospects of a soldier's life, and refers to his having been made an ensign in a line regiment.

An original journal kept by Wolfe from the days of his entering the army up to a few days before the Battle of the Plains of Abraham reveals much of the development of his character with the passing years. A second journal of great value is the record of operations before Quebec, written in his own hand. This document was lost for 150 years, was finally traced to St. Louis, from there to the Riviera, where the trail disappeared. Finally it turned up in London in 1914, when it was acquired by Mr. McCord.

Old Sundial as Town Clock.

A sundial on an old wooden building at Union Mills, Md., has marked the passing of the sun for more than a century without once being wound up. It was the "town clock" in Colonial days, before Washington led Americans to Independence. And it keeps time as well now as it did then.

As the sun shines on this side of the building only from a little before 8 in the morning until shortly after 2 in the afternoon, that portion of the daytime is marked.

The hour figures are iron, placed accurately in position. The center is a long iron rod, the shadow of which marks the time.

Big Men in Small Store.

At Boars Hill, near Oxford, England, there is a little notion store, which looks a little different from the usual country store, but the residents of the vicinity patronize it liberally. Most of the residents are literary personages and one is likely to encounter in the store any one of a number of prominent English writers. It is said on many occasions the poet-laureate of England has been seen behind the counter waiting on customers, and others visiting the place frequently are Mr. Masfield, Mr. Galsworthy and Sir Gilbert Murray.

Useful Yarn.

"Historians say there isn't a word of truth in that story about Horatius at the bridge."

"Maybe it isn't true," said Senator Smartworthy, "but it's a good story and I intend to stick to it. I've been using Horatius in my speeches for the last 40 years and it would be rank ingratitude if I abandoned him now."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

UNWILLING TO TAKE CHANCE

Colored Man Evidently Had Little Confidence in His Own Judgment in Important Matter.

A visitor in Kentucky came across that rare specimen, an unmarried colored man.

The negro was a quiet, elderly person, not shiftless, but quite industrious, so the northern man felt curious and determined to find out why he had remained single.

"Uncle Jim, how does it happen that you are so opposed to matrimony?" The old fellow looked up with a grave face, but there was a twinkle in his eye, as he replied: "Me suh! I ain't exposed to matrimony."

"Well, why is it you have never married?" his inquirer continued. "Haven't you seen anyone you liked?"

"Lawdy! yessah—but you see it's thisaway; I couldn't risk my judgment."

THE DRINK

By FRANCES E. GOODRICH.
(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Among his friends on the force he was known as Big Arm John, and the reason was perfectly obvious when one looked at the great muscles swelling beneath the sleeves of his uniform.

When he went away to France he carried with him the treasure of a girl's love, and the sweetness of realization came to him when he returned and made Margaret his wife.

They found a modest little flat near the station and settled down to what seemed a life of quiet happiness, but always in Margaret's heart was the shadow of coming evil.

At times John noticed her abstraction and when he asked the reason she would tell him of her feeling, and he would laugh and kiss her, and tell her she needed more of the outdoor world and sunshine.

"You must take a long walk each day, dear, and while you are out just think of all the nice things you can, preferably of all the many virtues of a man called Big Arm John," and he winked at her slyly and swung her up to the ceiling as though she were a baby.

Then ensued a scene that would have done credit to a nursery, and finally when John went away he left a flushed and laughing wife.

For some weeks that part of the city had been the center of operations of a party of bootleggers, and the police had been baffled for the time.

That memorable afternoon John hurried home to let her know that he would be away all night.

The police had received news that a few miles from the city there was a case worth investigating, and John was one of those designated for the work. He and Herndon, in plain clothes, started out in their speedy little car, just as it began to grow dusk. They had been pals in France.

"I tell you, John, I'm getting sick of this business. This crime stuff is getting on my nerves. Two years of scrapping in France and now chasing bootleggers here. Bah, laugh if you want to, but I'm thinking seriously of taking the wife and kiddies and settling down on a little farm somewhere."

John didn't laugh. Instead, he clapped a hand on his companion's shoulder.

"Don't know but you're right, old scout. Sometimes I get fed up on this stuff myself, but the pay's good, and I have to save something. Margaret wants me to give it up. She seems afraid all the time something will happen to me. Funny they worry so much, isn't it?"

"Mine is that way, too. Imagine I'm killed about forty times a day. Well, it's pretty nice to know they think so much of us, I'll say."

"Say, Herndon," he broke out suddenly. "Pull up on that car ahead. Looks rather suspicious somehow."

Herndon pushed on speed and the little car pulled up close beside the larger one. There were two men in it, a chauffeur in livery, and a man about thirty years of age evidently well to do.

As the car with the officers came abreast the stranger rose in his seat, and drawing a small black bottle from his pocket raised it to his lips. Then looking towards them he made a mock flourish with the flask, and said in clear, ringing tones, "We who are about to die, salute you."

"Stop!" shouted the officer, and springing clear from his own car landed on the running board of the other.

Herndon, meanwhile, by a skillful maneuver, brought his car directly across the road. John was now in the seat with the stranger, and grasping the hand with the flask demanded to know its contents, showing his badge of authority meanwhile.

"My dear fellow, why should you wish to know what my precious bottle holds? If but this glass were clear you would see the wonderful golden light of the liquid within. Surely you would not deny me the privilege of losing myself in its hidden wonders. Don't you remember Omar's words: "Why, be this juice the growth of God, who dare Blaspheme the twisted tendril as a snare?"

A blessing, we should use it, should we not?

And if a curse, why, then, who set it there?"

"I don't know who Omar is, and I don't care, but I do want to know what is in that bottle, and if you won't tell me I'll find out."

"It smells like liquor, but it's a queer smell, too. Guess I'll have to take a taste and make certain." John had turned to Herndon as he spoke, and raising the flask to his lips tasted of it.

"Well, you would do it, you know," groaned the man in the car. "You have taken my golden release and while you go free my body must still wear its fetters."

While he spoke John looked at him with a queer, dazed expression in his eyes. A strange sagging appeared in his limbs and a slight twitching in his muscles.

"What was it?" he gasped. "Poison," came the one word, and as he spoke the officer crumpled at the stranger's feet, his great bulk writhing in agony.

With a shriek of rage Herndon leaped into the car and raised the form of his friend in his arms.

MRS. BARRETTE TELLS OF SPLENDID RESULTS

Prominent New Hampshire Woman Says Tanlac Brought About a Wonderful Change in Her Condition.

"Tanlac is a grand medicine, and I think every suffering woman ought to know about it," was the statement made recently by Mrs. Aurore Barrette, at her residence, 133 Second Street, Manchester, New Hampshire. Mrs. Barrette is a well known and highly respected resident of that city. "I have not felt at all well for the past year or more," she continued. "I haven't been sick enough to be in bed, but I was far from being a well woman. At times I thought I had kidney trouble for I suffered almost constantly from severe pains across my back, just over the kidneys. Whenever I tried to do any housework at all that dull pain would be there, and if I attempted to stoop over it just felt as though my back would break. I would get so weak and worn out I would have to sit down and rest several times a day, and I felt tired all the time."

"This condition made me awfully nervous, so that I rarely ever slept well at night, and every now and then I would jump in my sleep, as if in a fright, and my condition was really becoming serious."

"Only two bottles of Tanlac have brought about a wonderful change in my condition. In fact, the results I have received from this medicine have really surprised me. Those terrible pains in my back which used to trouble me every day have almost disappeared, and I am going to keep on taking Tanlac until they leave me entirely. I have lots of energy now, and am not only able to do my housework, but I get through the day without feeling the least bit tired. I am no longer nervous like I was, and I sleep well at night.

"I shall always be thankful for what Tanlac has done for me." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Victim of Carelessness Came Back With Pointed Remark Concerning Companion's Immediate Future.

Two negroes were working in a coal bin in a Mississippi town, one down in the bin throwing out the coal and the other wielding a shovel. The one inside picked up a large lump and heaved it carelessly into the air, struck the other a resounding blow on the head.

As soon as the victim had recovered from his momentary daze he walked over to the edge of the bin and, peering down at his mate, said:

"Nigger, how come you don't watch where you throws dat coal? You done hit me smack on the head."
The other looked surprised.
"Did I hit you, nigger?"
"You sho' did," came the answer.

New Seeds Being Tested.

Seeds of a number of unusual plants have been recently received at the quarantine station of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, from J. F. Rock, one of the department's explorers in Siam. Among these are a black-kerneled rice which is said to be extensively eaten by the natives of Siam, and another is a brown-tinted cotton, not hitherto known in this country. The seeds will be propagated in the plant-detection station to guard against spreading any lurking plant disease which may have clung to them, and the second-generation seed will be tested out in various parts of the United States.

MRS. BARRETTE TELLS OF SPLENDID RESULTS

Prominent New Hampshire Woman Says Tanlac Brought About a Wonderful Change in Her Condition.

"Tanlac is a grand medicine, and I think every suffering woman ought to know about it," was the statement made recently by Mrs. Aureore Barrette, at her residence, 133 Second Street, Manchester, New Hampshire. Mrs. Barrette is a well known and highly respected resident of that city. "I have not felt at all well for the past year or more," she continued. "I haven't been sick enough to be in bed, but I was far from being a well woman. At times I thought I had kidney trouble for I suffered almost constantly from severe pains across my back, just over the kidneys. Whenever I tried to do any housework at all that dull pain would be there, and if I attempted to stoop over it just felt as though my back would break. I would get so weak and worn out I would have to sit down and rest several times a day, and I felt tired all the time."

"This condition made me awfully nervous, so that I rarely ever slept well at night, and every now and then I would jump in my sleep, as if in a fright, and my condition was really becoming serious."

"Only two bottles of Tanlac have brought about a wonderful change in my condition. In fact, the results I have received from this medicine have really surprised me. Those terrible pains in my back which used to trouble me every day have almost disappeared, and I am going to keep on taking Tanlac until they leave me entirely. I have lots of energy now, and am not only able to do my housework, but I get through the day without feeling the least bit tired. I am no longer nervous like I was, and I sleep well at night.

"I shall always be thankful for what Tanlac has done for me." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Stock Raising in WESTERN CANADA is as profitable as grain growing. Successes as wonderful as those from growing wheat, oats, barley, and flax have been made in raising horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. Bright, sunny climate, nutritious grasses, good water, enormous fodder crops—these spell success to the farmer and stock raiser. And remember, you can buy on easy terms.

Farm Land at $15 to $30 An Acre —land equal to that which through many years has yielded from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre—grazing land convenient to good grain farms at proportionately low prices. These lands have every rural convenience: good schools, churches, roads, telephones, etc., close to live towns and good markets.

If you want to get back to the farm, or to farm on a larger scale than is possible under your present conditions, investigate what Western Canada has to offer you.

The Perpetual Smile.
"Do you disapprove of pink tea diplomacy?"

"I don't know anything much about diplomacy," replied Uncle Bill Bottletop, "except that it depends on a man's suavity and his ability to conceal his feelings. I should say anybody who could drink pink tea and go on pretendin' he was havin' a perfectly pleasant time ought to have the makin' of a good diplomat."

The Polo association has made no official announcement, but it is deemed a certainty that the following players will make up the team: Devereaux Milburn; Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.; J. Watson Webb; and Louis Stoddard, with Earl W. Hopping and C. C. Rumsey as alternates. The above named men have played together often at Meadowbrook. The photograph shows J. A BEAUTIFUL WEYMOUTH

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Why isn't Weymouth the most beautiful town in New England? Stately American elms shade miles of her fine surfaced roadways, hills and vales, ponds and rivers, and an impressive ocean view are natural advantages unsurpassed; far enough from Boston to prevent Sunday afternoon onslaughts in summer by the unappreciative rabble; near enough to Boston to enable Boston business and professional men to establish their estates here and commute daily. Fine estates, good soil, beautiful churches and fine pastors, libraries, lodges, amusements. Why then, is this not the most beautiful town in New England?

It is not the lack of money, for it is not expensive to live here, and there are large amounts spent weekly at all amusements that come to town. One prominent man told me that all that is needed is missionary work to show the residents the beauties and possibilities of Weymouth.

A woman with whom I have recently talked went even further and laughingly declared that she believed that the only thing which would wake up some sections of the town, long dormant, is a few funerals. I hardly think the case is so extreme. It is certain the right kind of missionary work would help greatly. Good example by the up-to-date would do even more.

Co-operation on the part of everyone is the only way to obtain the most satisfactory results which are well worth while. No other investment possible for man to make will bring the pleasure that will spring into his heart at the sight of his home surrounded with lovely shrubs and trees and in addition these plantings have a great economic value.

One may have an elegant house, but no matter how costly, it is impossible to have a beautiful home unless it is surrounded with the verdure of nature. Many an old and unsightly building is made beautiful by the trees and foliage surrounding it. Every season you let planting go by is a loss. A house buried in the splendor of shrubs, trees and flowers will always sell at a big percentage above the same unadorned.

There are many fruit trees and berry bushes that give a good decorative effect in the garden as purely ornamental trees and shrubs and they are at the same time highly profitable. Watch this column for further information on this subject.

A WEYMOUTH INDUSTRY

One of the newest of industries that has been added to the many of which Weymouth can be justly proud; that helps add to make this town a successful and commercial community and making it possible for the residents to have done within their own boundaries many kinds of work as well as goods manufactured, consists of a cabinet shop at East Weymouth.

This plant of goodly floor area has several of the latest wood working machinery, all run by electricity, and a man in constant attendance assures that all work and jobs can be turned out rapidly and accurately.

The machinery in detail consists of a band-saw for all kinds of fancy furniture work, a lathe that will handle anything up to an automobile wheel, a cutting-off saw for board ripping, a shaper for furniture work and a sander for finishing furniture surface.

TO VOTE "YES" OR "NO"

Section 1 provides that the Selectmen shall divide the town into not less than six or more than twelve new precincts, which shall be revised every five years. Maps and description of precincts to be posted.

Section 2 provides that the voters in every precinct established under this act shall be limited to the voters to be held on May second next ensuing after the acceptance of this act elect by ballot as nearly as may be Three percent of the voters in the precinct as town meeting members at large, one-third of whom shall be elected for one year, one-third for two years, and one-third for three years.

Section 3 provides that any town meeting held after the adoption of this act shall be limited to the voters elected under Section 2, together with certain town officials. The town meeting members shall be judges of the election and qualification of other members. A majority shall constitute a quorum, but a less number may organize and adjourn. All town meetings shall be public. Town meeting members shall receive no compensation. Any voter, under certain restrictions may speak, but he cannot vote.

Section 4 provides for the nomination of candidates for town meeting members by nomination papers, which shall bear no political designation. Section 5 refers all articles in the Warrants, except the election of officers and other matters to be acted upon by ballot to town meeting members.

Section 6 provides for the election of a Moderator by the voters of the town at the election May 2.

Section 7 provides for the filling of vacancies in town meeting members by precinct members.

The first part of Section 8 was amended in the Legislature and reads as follows: No measure passed at any representative town meeting, except a vote to adjourn or a measure appropriating or borrowing money for emergency purposes which shall contain a preamble specifying the facts constituting the emergency and requiring for its passage a separate vote of two-thirds of the town meeting members present and voting thereon, shall become operative until after the expiration of five days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, from the dissolution of the meeting.

Provisions follow for a referendum on petition of 100 or more voters, when the question shall be submitted to vote of the voters of the town, a majority to decide.

Section 9 provides that business transacted by town meeting members, who shall exercise exclusively all powers vested in the municipal corporation.

Section 10 provides for general meetings of citizens of the town.

Section 11, the last section, is printed in full: The question of the acceptance of this Act by the town of Weymouth shall be submitted to the registered voters of the town at the Annual Town Meeting in the year 1921. The vote shall be taken by ballot, in accordance with the provisions of the General Laws so far as the same shall be applicable and not inconsistent herewith answer to the following question which shall be placed upon the official ballot used for the election of town officers:

"Shall an Act passed by the General Court in the year 1921 entitled 'An Act to provide for precinct voting, representative town meetings, town meeting members, a referendum and an annual moderator in the town of Weymouth', be accepted by this town?"

And the affirmative votes of a majority of the registered voters of the town present and voting thereon shall be required for and shall determine its acceptance. So much of this Act as authorizes its submission to the registered voters of the town shall take effect on its passage; but this Act shall not take further effect unless and until accepted by the town as herein provided.

Approved and signed by the Governor Feb. 28, 1921.

Formerly, the bill provided for 30 town meeting members from each precinct, but now that the representation will be on percentage it is not essential that the precincts should be of equal size.

The North Weymouth ward could be divided, so that there would be a precinct at Weymouth Heights near the depot.

The Weymouth Landing ward should be divided, so that there would be a polling place near Washington Square.

Ward Four should be divided so that Lovell's Corner and Pleasant street would be one precinct, and Nash's Corner and Main street in another.

The South Weymouth ward should also be divided so as to provide a polling place for Pond Plain near the South Weymouth depot.

This with two precincts at East Weymouth would make ten precincts in all.

Many of the voters feel that the Selectmen should have published the new Act in full in the Gazette-Transcript that they might vote more intelligently. There are many who feel that they are losing all their town rights in accepting the Act.

Annual Meeting of White Church

The annual meeting of the Congregational church, East Weymouth, was held in the chapel Tuesday evening with a good number present.

Charles B. Cushing was elected moderator and was assisted by Emerson R. Dizer in conducting the devotional exercises, which included congregational singing with Fred V. Garey accompanist.

The report of the church clerk and treasurer, William M. Reamy, was read and adopted, after which reports of other organizations connected with the church were presented as follows: deaconesses by Miss Lillian F. Keene; church choir by C. Will Bailey; Y. P. S. C. E. by Miss Ruth Wing, secretary; Sunday school by Ralph H. Haskins, superintendent; Friendship class by Mrs. Abraham Horsley, secretary; Ladies Social Union by Mrs. James Ford, president; Women's missionary society by Mrs. Arthur Cunningham, president; Searchlight club by Dana A. Hollis, president, and a combined report of the In-as-much, Golden Rule and Liberty circles of Kings Daughters, prepared by Mrs. William P. Denbroeder and read by Mrs. Edward P. Hunt.

All of the reports were well written and interesting and showed that a great variety of good work had been accomplished during the year just closed.

The financial result of the work of the Ladies Social Union was remarkable, showing unusual business ability and there were also good results along social lines. The report of the superintendent of the Sunday school was comprehensive and encouraging, but closing with a plea for more serious thought of the responsibilities in relation to the need of additional teachers by the school.

The report of the Y. P. S. C. E. showed sustained interest and an encouraging outlook. The Friendship class has shown ability and usefulness in many ways and in the past has given a Liberty bond and generous cash gifts to the Sunday school for the purpose of establishing a fund.

The president of the Searchlight club, offered to steady gain in membership and said they held themselves ready to assist in promoting the interests of the church in any way possible.

The reports of the circles of Kings Daughters indicated careful preparation and modestly referred to a variety of "good deeds" done during the year.

Reference was made to the loss to the church during the year of Brother Martin E. Hawes, who became a member when a young man and continued in willing and efficient service to within a short time of his death, Sept. 19, 1920, at the age of 85 years.

Following the business meeting there was a social hour with refreshments provided by the lady members of the church committee, Misses Adeline M. Canterbury, Florence E. Earle and Elizabeth Taylor, assisted by Mrs. Emerson R. Dizer and Mrs. Henry C. Cottell.

The following officers were elected for the new year: church clerk and treasurer, W. M. Reamy; deacon for four years, Fred V. Garey; church committee, Misses Adeline M. Canterbury, Florence E. Earle and Elizabeth Taylor; Sunday school superintendent, Ralph H. Haskins; Y. P. S. C. E. secretary, Miss Ruth Wing; Ladies Social Union secretary, Mrs. James Ford; Women's missionary society president, Mrs. Arthur Cunningham; Searchlight club president, Dana A. Hollis; combined report of the In-as-much, Golden Rule and Liberty circles of Kings Daughters, prepared by Mrs. William P. Denbroeder and read by Mrs. Edward P. Hunt.

olences, Emerson R. Dizer, Herbert W. Rockwood, Ernest A. Smith, Mrs. Winslow M. Tirrell and Mrs. Arthur Cunningham.

DELPHI LODGE K OF P.

A mighty good time and with lots to eat was the unanimous verdict of all who were fortunate to attend the banquet and entertainment given Tuesday night at the lodge rooms by the Knights of Pythias to the Pythian Sisters in appreciation of the many acts of assistance given their lodge the past year.

Over 200 sat down to a bountiful feast of grape fruit, escalloped oysters, cold ham, chicken salad and ice cream with cake. This was prepared by the Old Timers committee, George E. Ludden, Irving J. Nightingale and Burton E. Johnston, whose years of faithful endeavors along these lines have made any such undertaking nearly a perfection and it always means a treat.

The entertainment of the evening consisted of vocal selections by Chester Howe, music by Mosher's orchestra, readings by Miss Gertrude Crosby, followed by dancing.

LAST MEETING OF SELECTMEN OF 1920

The Selectmen of 1920 held their final meeting Monday afternoon, with all members present. There was little business to transact and the desk was soon cleared of matters. A little longer session of the Overseers was necessary to act upon considerable business before it.

The afternoon might have passed quietly, only that as the Board was about to adjourn sine die, the Town Clerk informed them a very important matter had been overlooked. This alarmed the members for some felt their labors were over for 1920.

On being asked what had been overlooked the Town Clerk said: "Mr. Chairman: We appear here, co-workers of yours in the several departments of town government to do homage to you, as you are about to sever your connections as a Selectman (Continued on Page 16)"

Attorney-General Allen Speaks to Men's Club

The fourth annual banquet and ladies night of the First Universalist Men's club of Weymouth was very largely attended and an excellent menu was served.

Hon. J. Weston Allen, Attorney General of Massachusetts, gave a very impressive address on "Good Government", interspersed with several good stories, including the story of St. Peter and his advice to an applicant to smile or else go below, and the woman who was too busy to register, but they could count on her at election day, all served to give the gathering a very enjoyable evening.

The gathering met in the church at 7 o'clock and listened to music by Mrs. Mary R. Flint on the organ, Edward H. Brown on the piano and solos by the Concorde Male quartette, and then proceeded to Lincoln hall, where a bountiful supper, consisting of roast turkey with dressing and cranberry sauce, chicken salad, mashed potato and squash, a dessert of ice cream and assorted cakes was served.

John P. Hunt introduced the speaker and said how fortunate the gathering was to have him here.

Attorney General Allen was glad to address just such a gathering, where the surroundings and conditions testified to the descent from those responsible for our splendid form of government.

By E. F. CLIPSON.

European affairs have taken another kaleidoscopic turn and as usual Germany is the pivot of interest, with the remainder of the world speculating as to what form the next developments will assume.

Occupation of the German towns of Danzig, Dusseldorf and Ruhrort in an attempt by the allies to enforce compliance with the terms of reparation was accomplished quietly and so far no very spectacular results have occurred. It is true the German ambassadors to London, Paris and Brussels have been recalled to Berlin, but the move is not characterized as a severance of diplomatic relations; rather, it is more in the nature of protest calculated to have some effect upon the present situation or future negotiations. Such negotiations appear to be a probability after each side has sized up the other and determined about how far it is likely to go.

Inasmuch as the ambassadors have been more closely in touch with conditions in the allied countries than the heads of the German government, their counsels are needed at home at this time before Germany decides upon the ultimate degree of bluff, or capitulation or of resistance which it shall employ. No warlike preparations have been reported from Germany and nothing revealing a coalesced plan of action among German leaders. Ominous quiet, seems to describe the situation, with here and there a flash possibly presaging future action by one or another of the many factions in the country. Labor, especially the radical wing, is expected to play a prominent part and already there has been talk of a general strike as a protest, an immediate economic factor and a general bid for the sympathy of workers in the allied countries and elsewhere.

The strike weapon would appear to be sort of a modified suicide—a notice to the allies that "if you attempt to collect the indemnities from us in goods or customs, we will ruin ourselves industrially so that there may be no goods or customs duties available." That a protest strike would continue long is not regarded as probable. Its chief value would lie in its effect on the immediate situation—its influence upon France, which needs money and hopes to get it from the occupied territory and through the customs houses which the allies are establishing along the Rhine.

The danger that Germany will go Bolshevik and unite with Russia seems to be mitigated considerably by the present state of affairs in the latter country where the soviet authorities are contending with a sizeable revolution. The danger of Russian aid to Germany seems past and the only menace remaining is that Germany will attempt to give military assistance to Russia. Germany has plenty of men, but after the dismantling of her military power, which already has occurred under the Versailles treaty, the degree of assistance which she could lend in the way of highly essential guns, munitions and other implements of war is a question, and the question vastly concerns the allies at present; for anything like an effective coalition between Germany and Russia might mean the relighting of the war torch all over Europe.

The allies were not of unanimous opinion in forcing the reparations program, but they were driven to united action through the necessity of showing a solid front. Whatever developments in Germany even to a joining with Russia, the allies are in a strategic position to deal with it through their military establishments and the fact that they already are in German territory and can strike unitedly and quickly.

While the threatened strike of packing house employees all over the United States against reductions in wages and changes in hours of employment has elements of seriousness, it is not definitely, at this writing, beyond settlement. President Harding's influence may bring results, but if it does not, there is a court weapon which is likely to delay the more drastic effects if it does not stop them entirely. Singularly, this weapon, an injunction, is proposed by the employees instead of, as usually has been the case, by the employers.

Inasmuch as the scale of wages and hours was fixed by arbitration during war times, the employees contend that a sudden altering without due consideration and conference between all parties affected, is unwarranted and that the court should grant a restraining order against the packers. Attorneys for the unions state that if the order is refused they will ask that the packing houses be placed in the hands of receivers.

Advices are to the effect that all Russia is in a ferment and that the Bolshevik authorities, if they have not a real revolution to contend with just now, are likely to have it soon. The past winter, which has augmented the sufferings of the people to a degree beyond anything before experienced, the constant warfare under soviet rule and, lastly, the attempt to coerce labor—mobilize is the word that has been used—and make it a part of the property of the state along with goods, lands, etc., has strained the communist scheme to the breaking point. People all over the country are reported to be deathly sick of the plan and in a mood to try revolution, believing that any change must be an improvement.

Heretofore the strength of the Lenin and Trotsky government has existed in its military establishment. Soldiers were fed and clothed even if others starved and froze. This made military duty attractive and rendered a big, efficient army possible. The significant feature of the present revolution is that it was started by soldiers and sailors, the very forces which started and upheld the soviet experiment.

The revolutionists seized the great fortress of Kronstadt and several of the minor defenses of Petrograd. At this writing a struggle for the city itself is on with the deciding fortunes still in doubt. Authentic news is meager, but enough has seeped through to indicate that the disturbance is not a mere flash in the pan. The fact that the attack was started at the seat of government, that the city has been bombarded heavily and that sanguinary encounters have taken place in its streets, also that the Red forces from other parts of the country, including the famed army of General Budenny, have been summoned to its defense, is enough to indicate that the affair is a determined movement against the whole soviet regime.

After the usual formalities attendant upon the nomination and confirmation of cabinet heads and a few other important officials, the new national administration got under way with its announced program of a get-together between the executive and legislative branches of the government. This was started by a dinner at the White House to the Republican leaders in the senate and house. President Harding announced that he contemplates calling an extra session of the Sixty-seventh congress not later than April 11.

The fact that peace with Germany, the League of Nations and other questions of foreign relations were not touched upon at the dinner, but that domestic reconstruction problems formed the bulk of the discussion, makes it a practical certainty that the latter will receive first consideration at the coming session. Tax revision seems to have the right of way over other questions and after it comes the tariff, the problem being to lessen burdens and at the same time provide adequate revenues. If the excess profits tax is repealed, economies in governmental expenditures will have to be instituted and additional revenue from imports and perhaps other sources will be required.

President Harding has intimated that an emergency tariff may be proposed, but that final disposition of the tariff question will await the recommendations of a new tariff commission to be constituted along scientific lines. This commission is yet to be appointed and its deliberations necessarily will be prolonged, so that the ultimate tariff bill of this administration does not loom as a very near possibility.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has announced himself definitely for economies and for the establishment of a national budget system. In a letter to the banks of the country he has declared that, while the figures as to the public debt and the current operations of the treasury show that the finances of the government are in a sound position, the situation for the utmost economy. The covers the financial condition in considerable detail and winds up with the statement: "The people generally must become more interested in saving the government's money than in spending it. A thorough-going national budget system must be established and the government's expenses brought into relation to its income."

Ever since Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes announced himself so positively before a congressional committee on the subject of unbusinesslike methods in the national departments, and other matters, there has been persistent talk that this administration would take energetic action to reduce criticism in this respect. Accordingly the President has gone over tentative plans with a joint committee from house and senate now holding sessions in Washington. The plans which White House advices state are approved by the President, and will have the co-operation of the cabinet, call for a reorganization of the executive departments to systematize administration, eliminate duplication and reduce expenses. If the program goes through it will be the first shaking up of departments since the days of Alexander Hamilton. One of the proposed changes is a consolidation under one head of the War and Navy departments.

One of the first acts of President Harding was to throw open the White House gates to the public. And the public is reported to have availed itself of the invitation to the beautiful grounds to the extent that some came with soap boxes on which to stand, while others mounted the shoulders of friends, in order to peer into the windows of the executive mansion. A serious question has arisen as to how the democratic privilege may be continued, the White House rooms given air and sunshine and the occupants allowed a degree of privacy somewhat greater than that of a goldfish in a bowl.

An indication of the attitude of President Harding and his administration to matters of turbulence among our Latin-American neighbors was pointedly brought out in strong notes dispatched by Secretary of State Hughes which had the effect of halting hostilities between Costa Rica and Panama. Although couched in most courteous and diplomatic language, the notes in reality were the eagle's scream, warning the countries that the territorial boundaries of Panama had been fixed by a previous arbitration award made by Chief Justice White, and that they are the concern of this government which cannot regard forcible measures by either party as justifiable. The belligerents were told to settle their differences by orderly procedure.

SCRAPS OF HUMOR

FROM THE OLD WORLD.

P. K. Chu, editor of the Shanghai Daily News, who is in this country making a tour of American newspaper offices, has an Occidental sense of humor. A newspaper man during an interview with him jollied the editor by asking, "By the way, have you read the great Chinese novel, 'Chaw Main Street?'" To which Mr. Chu promptly asked, "By Sin Loo?"—New York Evening Post.

A Beverage Disdained.

"I think I shall set up a soda fountain in Crimson Gulch," remarked the stranger.

"Don't do it," rejoined Cactus Joe with great earnestness. "The boys that used to ride in and shoot up a regular bar were only playful. What they would do to a soda water fountain would be plum vindictive."

Still There.

"Hello, old man! Seen Bobby Sponger lately?"

"Yes. Bobby's down at my shore place. I invited him down for a weekend."

"Why, I thought that was two weeks ago."

"It was, but you know Bobby is an expert at making both ends meet."

His Mind Clearing.

Doctor—Has your husband come out of his semi-unconsciousness yet, madam?

Doctor—What did he do or say?

Barring the Bard.

"Why don't you put on a good clean play?"

Symphony of Street Sounds.

"How can I compose in this racket?" snarled the composer. "The doorbell is jangling constantly, people are putting in coal, automobiles honk, and here comes a fish man with his horn." "Work 'em all into a jazz composition," suggested his wife.

An Experience.

"Don't you believe a soft answer turns away wrath?"

"What makes you doubt it?"

"My wife asked me what I thought of her biscuits and she got hopping mad when I told her they tasted like mush."

Malicious Information.

"Are those curls of Maude's natural?"

"I should say they were. I defy anybody to tell them from the real thing."

He Inquires.

"How about that million-dollar will case?"

"They settled it to the satisfaction of the attorneys on both sides."

Experience.

"How is Dubwaite's game of golf these days?"

"He's improving."

"Makes a better score?"

"No, but he has an easier flow of language when he loses a ball."

STILL TO MAKE BATTERY WATER

Simple and Inexpensive Contrivance Can Be Put Together
by Any Handy Mechanic.

DETAILS OF CONSTRUCTION

Boiler or Tank in Which Water Is Turned to Steam Is Made of Quart or Half-Gallon Can or Bucket
With Rolled Seams.

With the greatly increasing use of storage batteries in automobiles the demand for pure or distilled water has increased. It is unnecessary to purchase this water or pay the garage man to put it in the battery. With this simple and inexpensive still any one can distill water for refilling the batteries as the occasion requires.

As shown in the illustration accompanying this article, the boiler or tank in which the water is turned to steam, is made of a quart or half-gallon can or bucket with rolled seams. Be sure they are not soldered at the bottom.
The top of the can or bucket is open.
Procure a large tin funnel that will fit over the top of the can and then solder firmly and tightly in place as shown. This completes the boiler.

The condenser consists of three lengths of glass tubing each 12 inches in length. These tubes pass through a larger tube or a piece of iron pipe or brass tube of sufficient size to accommodate the tubes with some space between them. Fit a large cork into each end of the large pipe or tube and pass the three glass tubes through the corks. Then into each cork fit a short length of glass tube, one at the bottom, the other near the top of the large tube. Connect the free ends of the long tubes with rubber tubing so that they will form one long continuous tube.

Fill the boiler half full of clean water by submerging, and place it over a gas flame until the water comes to a boil. Connect the top of the funnel with one free end of the glass tube through the condenser by a short length of rubber tube. Slip a short length of rubber tube over the other end of the condenser tube and run it to a clean glass receptacle. Pass a small stream of cold water through the condenser by connecting the lower of the short glass tubes with a hydrant the upper to a drain. Just open the faucet enough to keep a small, easy stream of cold water passing through the condenser and out of the drain hose.

The steam from the boiler passes through the condenser and becomes condensed in the tubes chilled by the flowing water. The pure distilled water is collected in the receptacle as shown.—Francis Dashiell, in Popular Science Monthly.

Emergency Patch.
An ingenious motorist recently discovered that his roll collar, from which the starch had, been scrubbed out, made an excellent blowout patch, which carried him home after his tire had failed on the road.

"SILENT POLICEMAN" IS UNIQUE

Flashing eighty times a minute, day and night, this "silent policeman" equipped with an acetylene lamp directs the traffic in Washington near the southeast gate of the White House. The lamp throws a green light similar to those used along the Panama Canal. The White House can be seen in the background.

TO PREVENT CREEPING RIMS

Excellent Plan to Tighten Lugs by Degrees Thereby Avoiding Too Much on One Side.

When the shoulders on the wheel designed to hold the demountable rim become worn, the rim and its tire will creep on the wheel. Naturally this makes the valve stem project at an acute angle and if continued long enough may cut it off. If the valve stem is held firmly by means of a cap the strain falls upon the lower portion of the stem and that part of the inner tube which surrounds it. In this connection it is well to call attention to the need for tightening the rim lugs by degrees. If they are fully tightened one after the other and all the way around the wheel there is apt to be too much space on one side of the wheel and too little on the other. The proper way is to tighten one lug and then the one nearly opposite it and so on.

FOOT COMFORT FOR DRIVERS

Device Gives Smooth Action on Accelerator and Prevents Choking of Engine on Bad Roads.

A readily adjustable heel support for the foot which operates the accelerator is constructed so that it may be moved forward or backward. Its use is said to give a smooth action on the accelerator and prevent choking of the engine on rough roads, wearing of the heel of one's shoe, wearing holes in the floor mat and wearying of the leg.

LOCATING SQUEAK IN SPRING

All Doubt Can Be Removed by Running Car Over Smooth Road
With Ruts in It.

Most everyone knows the noise of a squeaky spring, remarks a contributor of American Motorist.

"But if you doubt whether it actually is that," he continues, "run your car over a smooth road which has a few small holes now and then. Drive over these holes at the rate of about 15 miles an hour. If your car squeaks only when you go over the holes, and rides silent while on the smooth parts, you may be sure that your springs need oiling."

REMOVAL OF TIGHT WHEELS

Simple but Often Effective Expedient
Is to Loosen Nut and Drive
Car Short Distance.

Sometimes one needs to remove a stuck wheel on an occasion when no wheel puller is available. As a simple but often effective expedient, jack up the wheel in question, put the car in gear, and after removing nut, key, etc., shake the wheel back and forth, pulling at the same time. If this does not work replace the key, drive car a short distance. This method will loosen a wheel even when a puller won't budge it.

VALVES ARE NOT REVERSIBLE

Can Be Inlet on Engine Operated by Piston's Suction Downward—Exhaust Is Mechanical.

An automobile valve cannot be either an inlet or an exhaust. It can be an inlet only on the engine, operated by the piston's suction downward. The exhaust valve must be forced open against pressure of the burned gases in the cylinder and therefore must be mechanically operated.

PUT ONE OVER ON BUTCHER

Incident Proves That Art of Shopping Has Not Been Altogether Thrown in Discard.

A dignified-looking woman stepped up to a showcase in the meat market, and after she had bought several pieces of meat, she asked:

"Have you any shinbone that I could use for soup stock?"
"Just the thing," responded the obliging clerk as he took up a long shinbone and knuckle and balanced it on his left hand.

"What is it worth?" asked the woman.
"Just a half-dollar," said he.

"It is such a large piece, would you mind cutting it at the joint?"

"Sure, I will," he replied.

After cutting off the large knuckle he again balanced the long, slim shinbone on his hand and said:

"You may have this for 40 cents."

The woman looked at the piece for a moment, then at the knuckle and said:
"Is that piece you cut off worth only 10 cents?"

The clerk hesitatingly replied:
"Yes, madam."

"All right," said the woman, "I'll take that knuckle."

The clerk waited a moment, looked at the woman, then actually laughed aloud. But he was game and willingly wrapped up the 10-cent soup bone.

NO WONDER THEY LAUGHED

American Soldier in Paris Had Made a Small Mistake in Copying the Street Name.

During the war, while I was on leave of absence in Paris, relates a returned soldier, I decided to take a walk alone. I thought it advisable to copy down the name of the street in which I was staying, so I wrote down some words printed on the sidewalk.

When I was ready to return I found that I could not locate the street where my hotel was, so I approached a woman, showed her what I had written in my book, and tried to learn from her where the place was. She laughed and said something in French, which, of course, I did not understand, and passed on. A number of times I did the same thing, and every one I stopped laughed, and passed on until a man said in English, "What is it you want?"

Delighted to find that I had discovered one person who spoke English, I said, "That is the name of the street where I am staying, and I am lost.
Will you please direct me?"
"You haven't written down a street name," said the man, "but 'post no bills.'"

Skidding Is Overcome.

Attention is called in a circular report from Sydney, Australia, to a new invention of a front-drive vehicle which entirely prevents skidding. A test over 16,000 miles of rough road has been made, it is claimed, with no signs of wear. The front wheels are pivoted in the center, which enables the steering of the car with much greater ease than in the rear-wheel-driven machine. The device is now attached to an old worn British car which, prior to the attachment of the device, weighed 32 cwt., with a speed of thirty-eight miles an hour traveling fifteen miles on one gallon of gasoline.
After alteration and application of the front drive device, the car weighs 35 cwt., has a speed of forty-five miles an hour and will go seventeen and one-half miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

Tuberculosis in France.

That of 368 antituberculosis dispensaries in France only ten per cent are situated in Paris was hailed as a "happy omen" at the second international conference. Only a few organizations were actively engaged in anti-tuberculosis work in France, before the war. Today, largely through the activity of the Rockefeller Foundation, in addition to the dispensaries mentioned, there are 10,000 sanitarium beds for tuberculous patients; many hospitals have provided isolation wards; the boarding out of anemic children in rural homes has been organized on a large scale, and there is national co-operation of all the agencies concerned.

British Soldiers and New Roads.

Some seven and a half million dollars' worth of new road construction has been taken in hand by various British cities to provide work for the unemployed. According to a report of the British information service of the Bankers' Trust company, the ministry of transportation contributes one-half of the cost—probably out of funds accumulated for that purpose for many years by the development commission —and lends to the municipalities the other half for five years, repayable in annual installments. Ex-service men, after due registration at a labor exchange, receive preference among applicants.

Unquestioning Admirer.

"Are you an admirer of Jeffersonian simplicity?"
"I am," replied Senator Sorghum.
"I don't know exactly what it is, but I admire anything that can command so much public approval and political influence."

Calumny in the Calendar.

"Do you regard Friday as an unlucky day?"
"Most assuredly any day with such a bad reputation is unlucky, whether it deserves it or not."

Monday evening, March 14, a miscellaneous shower was tendered to Miss Lillian De Young by her co-workers, relatives and friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Geurtin, 720 Middle street, in honor of her approaching marriage to Mr. William Lyster. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion by the Misses Annie Clinton, Flora Blenis, Elsie Munroe and Lillian Derusha. During the social evening music and games were enjoyed and a mock wedding was performed by friends of Mrs. John Dacey of Brockton at the close of the entertainment a luncheon was served to nearly 50 guests. Miss De Young was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

The Woman's Community Sisterhood of the First Baptist church held an open missionary meeting Sunday evening. Rev. E. E. Condit, a returned missionary from Burma, India, gave an address on: "The Game of Life." He appeared in the native India costume and showed an exhibit of Burmese curios.

Miss Marion Gertrude Hersey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hersey of Main street and Thomas W. Blackwell of the ammunition depot at the Marine camp at Hingham were married Saturday evening at the home of Rev. Ora A. Price, pastor of the Old South Union Congregational church. The couple were attended by Miss Mary E. Hersey, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid and William Bagdaley, U. S. N., as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, attended by the relatives and friends of the bridal couple. At nine o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell left on a short wedding trip and upon their return are to reside at 109 Fort Hill street, Hingham.

Miss Mary Chandler, the popular proprietor of the waiting room at Lincoln Square and Leslie O. Waite a conductor-motorman on the local street railway and prominent ex-service man who served in the U. S. Navy during the World War, were married at Abington Wednesday afternoon by Rev. L. W. Atwood, a former pastor of the Second Universalist church, South Weymouth. The happy couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall T. Gallant, the latter being a sister of the bride. The evening was spent playing games, dancing and music. Piano solos were contributed by the Misses Wilder, Arbuckle and Williams. In behalf of the company Miss Williams was presented with an ivory brush and comb. Miss Dorothy Dasha made the presentation speech. The party broke up at a late hour, all wishing Miss Williams many happy returns of the day.

CLARK CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR
The quarterly meeting of the Clark Union, Y. P. C. E. was held in the Old South Union Congregational church Friday evening.

March 11 was a big day for Clark C. E. Union and one that accomplished so much for the Christian Endeavorers as well as the pastors of the Union that it will long be remembered. In the afternoon a pastors' conference was held at the church, there being eight pastors present. The conference was led by Christian Endeavor's field secretary for Massachusetts, Rev. Mr. Frank Freet. At 6.30 o'clock a supper was served for the pastors.

At 7.30 endeavorers from all the societies in the Union arrived, in all there being about 275. Miss Florence B. Nash, Clark Union's president opened the meeting with a song service, this being followed by devotional service in charge of Rev. Mr. Ora Price. Miss Marjorie Davis, president of the entertaining society welcomed the young people, after which the roll call was given. Each society responded with a cheer or song and the enthusiasm of each and every society was inspiring. The North Scituate Baptist society was present with a perfect attendance of 39 members and for their highest percentage were awarded the Clark Union banner.

The speaker of the evening was field secretary Rev. Mr. Freet, who gave an inspirational address. His message was so practical and of such great interest to the young people, he received great applause.

At the close of Mr. Freet's address Norfolk county secretary Rudolph Couillard talked on the County C. E. convention to be held at Foxboro on April 19, and it was very evident that Clark Union is enthusiastic about Foxboro.

After one of the most inspirational and enthusiastic meetings the Union has ever had, all the endeavorers adjourned to the vestry, where the South Weymouth endeavorers served refreshments.

The luncheon consisted of ice cream, cakes, candies, nuts, dates and punch. ALLEN SPEAKS TO MEN'S CLUB

The splendid spirit now being shown by ex-Attorney General Wyman, who without pay, a refusal of a position or title, but giving considerable time and effort, because he knows from past experience how busy the Attorney General is.

To his assistants the Attorney General paid a very high tribute as tireless workers. Assistant Attorney General Hurwitz, a son of a Russian immigrant born himself in Moscow, he considered him one of the best criminal lawyers in Massachusetts and very faithful in his duties.

Attorney Hurwitz was also giving a vast amount of time on auto cases. All showed the high conception and duty these men had for public service. If we could only have more of this kind.

This is a period of reconstruction. In time of war it was easy to be patriotic, but are we living up to those high ideals formed then? Or are we thinking in selfish terms and not seriously of duties and confidence we owe others.

We are an educated people—the hope of the world lies in America. Should we allow the sacrifices made by our splendid boys recently to appear as in vain?

To a former school teacher the speaker said he felt she taught him more good things that he can remember have since been taught or shown him.

The public servant held a trust from the people and he can only do it to the extent that they support him. And in conclusion he hoped God will give more men of strong character, willing hearts and hands.

Men of will power, of action, not afraid to express the right and would not lie. Tall men who will stand above the fog of the uncertainty of these days. To help break down un-equalities and beat fraud and damn the demigod.

During the evening the Concorde Male quartette rendered an excellent variety of very pleasing solos and those present felt they had a most enjoyable evening.

POPULAR WITH 'DOUGH' BOYS

Adjutant of Montana Department Good Fighter for Rights of the Ex-Service Men.

Ben W. Barnett of Helena, Mont., adjutant of the Montana department of the American Legion, is popular with ex-service men because he possesses the rare ability of entertaining veterans as well as fighting for their rights.

Many former soldiers who were stationed at Camp Dodge, Ia., remember Mr. Barnett for his vaudeville acts at various recreational huts and hundreds of Montana veterans praise him for his efforts in obtaining work for them and justice for disabled ex-service men.

At the age of eleven, Mr. Barnett organized the Abraham Lincoln club at the Hull House in Chicago and ever since he has been an organizer in business and in the affairs of the Legion. His versatility is indicated by the fact that he has been a vaudeville artist as well as a successful dealer in hides and furs.

Mr. Barnett was at first rejected by the army because of a bad foot, but finally was accepted for a few months of service in an American training camp. He has served as state adjutant since the organization of the Legion's Montana department.

SEEKS OWNER OF WAR MEDAL

Opera Singer Redeems Emblem Found in Window of New York Pawn Shop.

The sight of a Victory medal in the window of a New York pawn shop moved Lucien Muratore, opera singer and French soldier during the World war, to redeem the decoration in hope that it will find its way to its owner.

"While strolling with my secretary," M. Muratore wrote, "I chanced to look curiously in a window where many odd articles were displayed. Among them was this medal. Having served with the French army in the great war, I was naturally interested to know how this medal should come to such a place. My friends informed me that probably the veteran had been forced by circumstances to part with it for a small sum. It is certain that I should be greatly distressed to be forced to give up insignia of reward with which France has honored me. With this feeling, I sent my secretary to recover this medal for me in the hope that I should be able to return it to the gallant soldier who won it."

The medal bears clasps for St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne and a defensive sector. It will be returned to its owner if properly identified.

FIRST TO SIGN APPLICATION

Little Minnesota Lady Puts Her Name on Dotted Line for Auxiliary Charter.

The Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion is open to wives, daughters and sisters of Legionnaires as well as mothers and wives. Hence it was entirely proper for Pearl Iva Hoskins, six-year-old daughter of a prominent Legion member in Fergus Falls, Minn., to have the distinction of being the first signer on an application for an auxiliary charter.

Pearl says she likes her Auxiliary, but that it is a hard word to pronounce.

Delays Cashing Certificates.

Minnesota members of the American Legion are attacking the red tape and delay by the government in cashing their certificates issued to disabled veterans to pay their expenses while traveling to public health and vocational training centers. Because of the difficulty in cashing the paper, the ex-service men are now forced to accept a discount of ten per cent. Authorization by legislation of federal reserve banks and post offices to pay cash on presentation of the certificates is the remedy suggested by A. H. Vernon, Legion department commander, in letters to F. W. Galbraith, Jr., National commander, and to the federal board for Vocational Education. It is believed that the Legion will adopt the suggestion and back legislation to that end.

Waiting, Fondly Waiting.
O—Sloppy weather, ain't it? I'm wearing my army slicker. Got your's yet?
D—No, not yet.—American Legion Weekly.

WAS BUSY MAN IN HOSPITALS

Commander of Wyoming Department Spent Many Months in Kansas and Connecticut Institutions.

Although he was forty-nine years old at the start of the World war, Dr. M. A. Newell of Sheridan, Wyo., commander of the Wyoming department of the American Legion, entered the service and spent many busy months in Kansas and Connecticut hospitals.

Dr. Newell was born in Saratoga county, N. Y., and received his early education in the public schools and in Saratoga academy. He was graduated from the college of physicians and surgeons, medical department, Columbia university, in 1890, when he moved to Wyoming.

Dr. Newell has served on the staffs of a number of governors of his state and was at one time assistant surgeon general of Wyoming. He entered the service in August, 1918, and served at the M. O. T. C., Fort Riley, Kan., and at U. S. General hospital, No. 16, at New Haven, Conn. He was one of the organizers of the Donald Garbutt post of Sheridan and was elected department commander in August, 1919.

IN DEFENSE OF THE FARMERS

Statement That Agriculturists Turn Backs on ex-Service Men Is Attacked by Writers.

A statement that the farmers of this country gained considerably as a result of the World war and now turn their backs on ex-service men has been challenged by numerous writers. The following is a good statement of the farmers' case, as one correspondent outlines it:

"Sixty years of my life had rolled away when this country entered the war. I had four boys and they certainly all wore breeches, but none of them claimed exemption. Three of them enlisted shortly after war was declared. The youngest was a boy of eighteen. Myself, one of the boys, and my sixteen-year-old daughter were left to conduct a farm of more than 300 acres, and we had to work from 16 to 18 hours every day. If we hired any help we had to pay munition plant wages for an eight-hour day, and if we had any surplus cash, the Y. M. C. A., the Red Cross, Jewish Welfare Board, Salvation Army and other meritorious war agencies absorbed it. I know that other farmers in this section were in the same condition. I also know that the states which have paid their ex-soldiers bonuses to date are almost exclusively agricultural."

WHY SCRUGGS WAS HONORED

Texas ex-Doughboy Is Made State Adjutant Because He Attended Every Legion Convention.

Because Charles W. Scruggs of Dallas, Tex., attended every state and national convention of the American Legion, he was rewarded with the strenuous job of adjutant of the Texas department.

Mr. Scruggs enlisted as a private in the Thirty-sixth division early in the war, and served with that unit in America and France. He was discharged as a sergeant at Camp Bowie, Tex., March 1, 1919. Mr. Scruggs attended the University of Texas and then taught school two years. At the outbreak of the war he was a reporter on a Texas newspaper.

Convicts in Olive Drab Uniforms.
A protest against the wearing of the olive drab United States service uniform by prisoners of the Monroe State Reformatory at Monroe, Wash., has been made by Thomas N. Swala, commander of the Washington department of the American Legion, who with a committee of Legionnaires visited that institution. Representatives of the bureau of War Risk Insurance and the federal board for Vocational Education joined with the Legion members in the protest to the state officials. Shortage of funds and the low cost of the uniforms were responsible for their adoption as the official prison garb, according to state officials. It is believed that the prison officials will adopt some other uniform for the convicts.

States O. K. Five-Fold Plan
The state legislatures of North Dakota, Oregon and Minnesota have adopted resolutions urging that congress pass the Fordney bill, which embodies the five-fold compensation plan of the American Legion. The action of the North Dakota legislators is especially noteworthy in that their state has already awarded each veteran a flat bonus of $25 a month of service, the largest state bonus to be granted.

Legion Athletes in Training.
American Legion athletes keep in training in many parts of the world by competing in all branches of sports. The polo team of Kanai Post No. 2, Department of Hawaii, has been the victor in a series of matches with a number of regulars.

INDIANS ALL OF SAME RACE

Differences in Type No Greater Than Among the Whites, According to Scientist.

The American aborigines from the Hudson bay and Alaska to the southern tip of the continent are all members of the same race, according to Dr. Frederick M. Mendenhall of New York and Pasadena, said to be more familiar with the American Indian than any other white man.

Dr. Mendenhall declared the differences in type found in Indians of the various parts of the continent are becoming manifest among us today. He recognizes people from Maine as typical of that section of the country, and says a southerner or westerner can be easily distinguished by one familiar with the types of American people.

"The aborigines of America are all red men," Dr. Mendenhall said. "The Eskimos have flatter noses and oily skins, due to their diet and the climate."

He found corresponding differences among the Indians of the Eastern coast, the West, Mexico and other parts of the country, but other indications prove the distinguishing characteristics were the product of food, environment and methods of living.

Mentioning the treatment the red men have received from the whites, Dr. Mendenhall said: "The Pilgrims embarked on Plymouth rock and fell upon their knees. Then they fell upon the aborigines and we've been falling on them ever since."

RULER HAD PRACTICAL MIND

Like Our Own Politicians, Sultan Preferred Any Eventuality to Being Forgotten.

At Trengganu (Malay Peninsula) the native sultan welcomed me and I spent several days with him, telling him what was happening in the world and discussing his problems. The problems were largely financial. He owed some money, and, knowing that he had something in the treasury, I asked why he did not pay his debts.

He thought for a time and then replied: "Well, I'll tell you. If I pay those people, they will forget about the sultan of Trengganu. If I don't pay them, they'll never forget me."

The conversation turned to the subject of prisoners. On my way to the palace I had passed the cages where the prisoners were kept. Many of them were starving to death, for unless their friends or family cared for them they got no food.

"Why don't you feed them?" I asked.

"Why should I?" he replied. "If I feed them, my whole country will want to go to jail."—Asia Magazine.

Point of Honor.

Samuel Untermyer, the brilliant New York lawyer, who probed the building question, said in a discussion about honor:

"Business men are honorable; or they don't get on. Even big business men are honorable. Of course, few business men are as punctilious about a point of honor, though, as Honest John Jones was.

"Honest John Jones, you know, once stole on tiptoe, fountain pen in hand, into the empty waiting room of his hotel. He stepped stealthily up to an inkwell, advanced his fountain pen towards the ink, then drew back with a start.

"No!" he groaned, striking his brow with his palm. "No, I cannot fill my fountain pen with the hotel's ink—it would not be honorable."

War of Science on Diseases.

Of the diseases of men and animals known to be infectious, Dr. Walter E. King counts up 38 having organisms not yet discovered that are believed to be so small as to pass through the customary filters. These include chicken-pox, rabies, dengue fever, small-pox, trachoma, measles, poliomyelitis, scarlet fever, typhus and mumps, and yellow fever was in the list until Doctor Noguchi's recent discovery of the organism. As in the case of tuberculosis, knowledge of the organism does not always bring a direct remedy. On the other hand, steps toward eradicating yellow fever, through the destruction of the germ-carrying mosquito, were made possible while the disease organism was still unknown.

Wireless Waves Fire Oil Wells.

In recent years there have been a number of oil well fires the origin of which has never been explained. The fires started at such times when the sites were deserted and could not have been done through any human agency, and in this connection R. M. McLain of Desdemona, Tex., has come to the fore with a remarkable theory that the firing is done by wireless waves gathered by the metal entering into the construction of the derricks. This gentleman has observed a number of oil well fires which could be explained in no other way.

Reassurance.

"Look here," demanded the new patron of the Dizzy Hour luncheon. "When do I get that order?"

"Control yourself," snapped Romeo the waiter. "The cooks are on strike, but I think they'll come to an agreement 'most any hour now."—American Legion Weekly.

Probably Not Overdressed.

"But that woman in the box seems to have no clothes on at all!"

"Ah, yes; she's the best-dressed woman in Paris.—Le Journal Amusant (Paris).

USEFUL MODE FOR NEW LACE FROCKS

ONE thing we may be sure of, and that is the continued vogue of the lace gown. Everything conspires to make this mode certain of long life. To begin with, women love laces, and lace makers stimulate their devotion by constantly turning out new and alluring varieties of lace. More than all else, the general usefulness of lace gowns is a factor in their favor—they fit in for formal and informal wear, according to the accessories worn with them, and are at home either in afternoon or evening affairs.

Black, brown and ecru laces are in demand just now, at the beginning of a season that may see the list of colors increased. They are made up with silks or satins, usually in the same color, but with contrasting color notes in girdles and sashes, or in trimmings, which are sparingly used with lace. Paris says, "longer and wider skirts," and all the world says, "ribbons." With these assurances, the designer of lace frocks has everything to encourage him.

In the lovely frock pictured we have all these style points emphasized in a dress of ecru lace and changeable taffeta which may be imagined in tan and rose. A wide net top lace is arranged in a long tunic with points at the bottom falling below the hem of the skirt. This 'hem,' it should be noted, makes no pretensions to evenness. The tunic is shortened at the sides. In the bodice the pattern in the lace sweeps across the front in diagonal lines, but over the right shoulder in straight lines. The net sleeves show the top portion of the lace pattern. The wide and long sash would be of ecru colored ribbon. Such a gown might be chosen by maid or matron of honor; in company with a hat as distinctive as that pictured, it could not fail to triumph.

Styles Matrons Will Admire

NOW that style creators have proclaimed and reiterated their intention to lengthen skirts, to advocate simplicity, to pay much attention to becoming draperies, we may expect to see many lovely and dignified afternoon frocks that will delight the hearts of smart matrons. The tunic is assured and in the interest of graceful draperies, both the tunic and the underskirt are privileged to be uneven in length at the bottom. Straight hems will disappear to be replaced by lines that deviate from evenness and make a vague finish for the bottom of the skirt.

The new Canton crepe, crepe-de-chine, and other supple weaves of silk, lend themselves to all these style innovations so well that it seems as if they were made for each other. When fabrics fit the mode so perfectly one is inclined to believe that the styles were created for the fabrics. Two handsome frocks for afternoon wear, as shown above, employ the crepe weaves in silks and are dignified types suited to older women than the models posing in them. In the frock at Eighty thousand tenants recently met at Fyzabad and passed resolutions not to tolerate the landlords' highhandedness. Village soviets were formed, and the tenants, encouraged by radical agitators, resorted to violence.

A number of people have been made ill from eating the fish, it being said that the refuse from the mill has penetrated the fish and that they are now unfit for food.

SOLDIERS AND JAPANESE

Prof. W. D. Watson of the Government Vocational school for ex-service men in Boston was the speaker at the monthly meeting of the Union Men's club Wednesday evening. He told of the work his school is doing for lives that have been broken by shell-shock, bodies maimed by shrapnel and minds disorganized by war experiences. Dr. Watson said that many of these lads had held good positions before the country had called them to fight and that the Government was endeavoring with a good measure of success by the most thorough medical and surgical treatment as well as the careful instruction in the Vocational school to get them back where they could again take their places as producers in society. He told of individual cases of wonderful bravery; of how certain fiendish tricks of the Germans had been discovered by one of his students who was subsequently decorated by England, France and the United States, winning the Congressional Medal. Many questions were asked, which Dr. Watson most fully answered and asked that any employers of men present who had positions open, or knew of any, to write to J. W. Calnan, 168 Dartmouth street, Trinity Building, Boston, stating that to help these men would be only paying back a large debt that we owe them.

By request Mr. Watson, who has been a secret service agent in California, presented his views of the California-Japanese question. He was sent to California during the war to investigate certain matters and came in intimate contact with the Jap problem. He told how the Japs have bought up land by out-bidding Americans with money that comes from, no one knew where, living in sheds, then underselling Americans until the Japs obtain a monopoly of the markets, then lowest the prices to the highest mark. At present the entire florist trade of the Pacific Coast is a monopoly of the Japanese. Many other lines of industry are now on the way to become monopolies of the Japs. They purchase land as guardians of their children, who since they are American citizens in view of having been born here, have a right to buy and hold land. The speaker told of many instances which tended to show a thorough and aggressive system of obtaining naval and military plans of the United States. He said that he was prejudiced in favor of the Japanese until he had been to California and obtained a firsthand knowledge of the situation as it actually is. Many questions were asked and a rising vote of thanks was given Prof. Watson for his splendid address. The evening was full of enthusiasm. A good oyster supper, Baltimore style, with all the fixings; oyster stew, fried oysters, a la the East, and oyster fritters was served under direction of William McDowell and Edgar H. Bolles.

A TOWN OFFICER

Charles W. Pearce, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Pearce, 39 Hawthorne street, East Weymouth, was re-elected selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor of Scituate Monday, for three years. It is his third term.

He received his education in the public schools of Weymouth and went to Egypt at the age of 17 as station agent, which he held for 20 years. He gave it up when he married Litchfield as partner erected a garage at Egypt, known as the Egypt Garage & Machine Co., where he is still doing business.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

Weymouth post, No. 79, held its first installation of officers in Masonic hall on the evening of March 11 and the women of the auxiliary with Mrs. Flynn as chairman, gave the boys a supper in the lower hall before the ceremony.

There were guests from different patriotic societies and a pleasant spirit of co-operation was shown by all the older orders. As the youngest of the patriotic orders the auxiliary feels it is being given the kindest of assistance by the older orders in all its early struggles. One very important part of our work is caring for boys in hospitals and this unit has done its work for West Roxbury as it seemed most in need. Many hands have helped and this week the Women's Auxiliary of the A. O. U. volunteered to furnish our president with all the would need for her weekly trip. They more than fulfilled every requirement for they sent such a bountiful supply of cakes, candies and cigarettes that every boy was "filled to the brim" with goodies.

A welfare committee, consisting of Mrs. Talbot of South Weymouth, Mrs. Tutty of North Weymouth, Mrs. Haviland of Weymouth and Mrs. McLaughlin and Mrs. Draper of East Weymouth will give any information desired in regard to this work if anyone desires to help.

W. R. C. NOTES

At the next regular meeting, March 24, of Corps 102, there will be comforters to knit in the afternoon, supper at 6 o'clock, meeting at 7.30. At this meeting plans will be arranged for Grand Army day and charter members April 12.

P. P. Mary E. Mahoney, P. P. Mary Brassill and Mary R. Flint attended the banquet of the Freda Association at Olin hall Thursday. There will be a special meeting of the W. W. V. Aids Thursday, March 24, at headquarters. This committee with Mary E. Mahoney, chairman, have done great work for the boys in the hospitals. A victrola will soon be presented to the West Roxbury hospital.

—These warm days will soon see the vacant lots and playgrounds busy as baseball teams are whipped into shape. The Crescent lodge I. O. O. F. is anxious to gain a second leg in the race for the cup of the South Shore baseball league.

ANOTHER BIG LEAGUER

About 25 friends of Cornelius Condrick assembled at the residence of former Selectman Joseph A. Fern on High Street place, East Weymouth, presentation party by the Commercial Square Forum.

It was a complete surprise to the popular local boy, who leaves today for Georgia, where he reports to the management of the Augusta baseball club for practice Monday. Ty Cobb America's greatest baseball star, is part owner in the club; Augusta is Cobb's native city.

Even those who gathered were hardly prepared for the feast that was set before them by Mrs. Joseph A. Fern, assisted by Mrs. Robert McGlinn, Mrs. Harriet Shea, Miss Orilla Wade and Miss Mabel Shea, who was charmingly dressed as a colleen. The house and table were pretty with St. Patrick's decorations, consisting of American and Irish flags, shamrocks and napkins. A cake was inscribed "Three cheers for Ireland." A tasty menu, including ham, salads, rolls, coffee, cakes, ice cream, punch and cigars, was served.

The future big leaguer cut one large frosted cake inscribed: "Good Luck", after which a toast was given to the guest of honor by the host, who presented a ring, ornamented with the K. of C. emblem. The ball player was overwhelmed with surprise and showed much emotion as he rose to respond.

Eight members of last season's K. of C. team were present including Condrick; Dr. William T. Wall and Thomas McDonald, Connie's former battery mates; Frank Horgan, the brilliant shortstop; Philip Cullen, the veteran pitcher; Eddie Brown, Russell Riley and John McCarthy.

Others present were: Gus Conathan, the baseball star of other days, but now superintendent of a local shoe factory; John H. Moran, ex-secretary of the Hartford baseball club; Thomas J. White, Edward F. Sheehy, Joseph Nolan, Abe Tumin, Minot Mathewson, William Gaughen, David Sterling, Lawrence Schofield, former polo player or note; Samuel Schofield, W. C. Bonney, Sumner Shaw, John L. Morgan, John Callant, David J. Toomey, and James Lynch.

Condrick was a sergeant in the Yankee Division, and also served on the Mexican border. He played ball while in high school, but only showed mediocre ability. While in the army he pitched four or five games a week, when not engaged with the Hun.

He started his friends by the form he displayed last season pitching for the K. of C. team; he also showed that he could hit the ball. His greatest achievement was when he shut out the strong Bayside team at Hull before 6000 people, letting them down with two hits and 18 strikeouts. He was publicly praised by Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, whose sons were prominent on the Bayside team. The Gazette wishes him many friends in wishing him success.

C. M. A. NOTES

The fast C. M. A. basketball team was defeated at Randolph by Desmond post, American Legion, last Tuesday night by score of 46 to 33. The star player for Randolph was Courtney, who is undoubtedly the mainstay of the home team and can always see the fouls at the time when they do the most good. As an official he is the original instigator.

The audiences participated in the game on several occasions which is much to be regretted, as exhibitions of this kind tend to hurt the game. A game on a neutral floor with a real referee would give the fans a chance to see a real game.

Small Vote and Little Interest at Annual Election

The town election on Monday was a very quiet affair, only a small number of registered voters, about 600, exercising this annual privilege. Perhaps the fact there were no contests for any town office as it was just a straight vote, may be one reason.

In common with surrounding towns which have this year returned to the dry column, the vote here was Yes 267 No 369 as compared to the vote last year of Yes 351, No 185.

Most of the interest of the election was directed to the action of the voters on the referendum calling for a representative form of government. The acceptance was popular to over two-thirds of the voters, so that a special election will soon be called to choose the town meeting members as provided in the act.

All the candidates ran along about even in votes, no great number separating them.

As a rule a new candidate will, because of new interest created poll a larger vote, but this did not prove true Monday. The two new candidates for Selectmen finished in second and fourth positions.

In the vote for Selectman the new chairman of the board, William M. Cowing, led the field with 579 votes. Theron Tirrell, a new candidate this year succeeding Bradford Hawes, was second being only six votes behind the leader. Frederick Humphrey, a candidate for re-election, was only 11 votes behind Mr. Tirrell.

The second new candidate this year William B. Dasha, succeeding George L. Newton, was tied with Alfred W. Hastings, each receiving 548 votes.

Thus it will be seen that all the candidates ran very closely together.

Weymouth Should Have Markers For Historical Spots

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Weymouth is one of the fortunate towns to possess many historic sites and buildings, and it is highly desirable that these be marked in some way, not only for importance to the town but for the interest of visitors. This is the Pilgrim Year, a time when every town, especially those on the South Shore is looking up, identifying and marking its historic places, and it would seem that Weymouth should not be behind in this important matter. Such historic places are a definite asset to any community and should be treasured in the interests of town betterment if for nothing else. It is good business to do it.

At the large and interesting meeting of the Weymouth Monday club, the speaker, in recalling the life of Abigail Adams, that Weymouth girl who shed such lustre on her birthplace, made a plea that the site of the parsonage where she was born should receive a permanent marker of some kind, which it is hoped will be accomplished either by the Historical Society, the church, the women of the D. A. R. or the Woman's club. The ell of the house removed to some distance when the parsonage was demolished, is already permanently identified. The ancient stones of Parson Smith and his wife are very fine specimens of early graveyard art and should be carefully preserved.

Beside the Smith Markers Weymouth should also remember the home of its distinguished citizen Dr. Cotton Tufts. There is even now considerable difficulty in identifying such places and the fleeting years leave fewer and fewer those who remember accurately or carry on traditions correctly. It is understood that the Massachusetts Medical Society, of which Dr. Tufts was the undoubted founder, will place this summer a bronze on his tomb in the Old North Burying Grounds. The site of his home should be marked, for he was a great man.

It is also hoped that the site of Dr. Noah Fildes' famous old home on Front street, the center of so many notable Weymouth activities, especially in anti-slavery days, will also have a marker. Here William Lloyd Garrison found asylum when hard pressed in Boston. The Library owns invaluable Tufts-Fildes material.

The birthplace of Joshua Bates is another site which should not be allowed to slip from Weymouth's memory. Of him Weymouth should be very proud. It was also the home of Mrs. Maria Weston Chapman, that splendid woman whose inflexible determination and courage did so much in the cause of emancipation. The fine home of Elias Richards was a prominent center and the beautiful Cowing house would have an added interest could it be dated. The Thayer house on Commercial street is already dated. The old Arnold Tavern has been saved by an excellent tablet; which makes it attractive to visitors. It is nearly forgotten that William Hazlitt, the eminent English critic lived in the old parsonage or the Smiths. Weymouth should not forget when Westminster Abbey remembers. Rev. Jonas Perkins' home should be honored, though the school perpetuates his name. The unique Dickerman gravestone is exceedingly curious.

There are many towns not possessing half the historic places belonging to Weymouth which are looking after their assets in this direction with renewed interest and care, and it is hoped Weymouth will not lag behind, either in the community spirit, which is so vital for a town's prosperity or in appreciation of the treasures within its gates.

These markers need not be expensive or large. Bronze is of course the most enduring and the price is not at all prohibitive. They may be of brass or aluminum, even wood, if it is properly treated. Even a plain painted board, which can later be replaced is better than nothing, as it will serve for identification at least for some years.

FINE HOME FOR AVERAGE FAMILY

Brick and Stucco Affair Has Many Appealing Features.

CONTAINS EIGHT GOOD ROOMS

In This House the Builder Has Presented the Owner With a Charming Home as Well as a Sturdy and Safe One.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1877 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Many people prefer the house to the apartment because they want to get away from the inevitable crowding which is found in buildings of the latter type. Especially is this the case if there are children in the family. The "kiddies" need plenty of sunshine and recreation to develop into healthy men and women and these privileges are not very often found in the large apartment building. The home insures a yard, plenty of breathing space, bedrooms and comfortable rooms. For this purpose the story-and-a-half house is very excellently adapted. Not too large and yet ample for the needs of a family of five or six, it can be constructed at a very reasonable cost. To the average family the item of cost is one of utmost importance.

As the average man builds a home but once in a lifetime, it is a proposition of importance and one that he should study carefully before attempting. While seeking as attractive a home as possible he also wants one that possesses permanency and protection against fire. For these two qualities brick is unexcelled. In the home shown here, the builder has presented the owner with a charming arrangement for the housewife. A door at the far end of the dining room opens into a bedroom very conveniently situated for the cook or maid. It has a large clothes closet.

A pantry and breakfast nook, both connected with the kitchen complete the first-floor plan. Breakfast nooks have come to be considered an important accessory to the modern home because of their convenience in serving lunches and breakfasts. This little nook saves the trouble of serving meals in the larger dining room.

On the upper floor are four bedrooms grouped about a central hall, also the bathroom. All of the bedrooms have windows on two sides, insuring plenty of ventilation and light, two important features in sleeping quarters. The old idea of keeping the air out at night in the bedrooms has lost its hold in most homes. That is why bedrooms in new homes are provided with as much window space as possible. The closets in these bedrooms are exceptionally large. An additional closet off the hall provides a storage place for clothing out of house as well as sturdy and safe one.

The exterior is most attractive, being of brick and stucco above, with stucco balustrade around the front porch. The porch is very large and inviting, and one that is excellently adapted for a recreation place for the family and children.

It is recessed under an extension of the main gable roof, and is enhanced by attractive stout white pillars and brick approaches. The front door is plain but attractive and opens into a small vestibule or reception hall. This hall leads to the living room on the left and to the stairs going up. The living room is the main room of the home and very comfortable in size and equipment. On one side is an open brick fireplace, flanked on either side by wall bookcases. Two small windows above these cases supplement the excellent lighting provided by four windows facing the porch. The living room is 18 feet wide and 14 feet long.

An open doorway leads from this room into the dining room directly to the rear. This room is not quite as large, 14 feet 6 inches by 13 feet 6 inches, but ample for the needs of the family and well lighted by a triple side window. It opens on the right into a small hall which leads to the lavatory and kitchen. The latter room is small and very convenient to the dining room, an important ar-season. The bedrooms are not oversized, the two front rooms being 10 feet 9 inches by 11 feet, and the two rear rooms, 10 feet 9 inches by 12 feet 6 inches.

In the rear of the lot is a frame garage built to accommodate two cars. One section can be used by the owner and the other rented out. As the house is built on a corner lot, the expense of a long driveway is not necessary. A short concrete drive way is built from the street to the garage.

There are many features about this pretty home that will appeal strongly to the man of family. Now that rents are soaring, many people are planning to build their own homes. This attractive design should prove inspirational for those who are seeking definite ideas on home building.

WEBSTER HELPED OUT CLIENT

Great Lawyer Evidently Possessed Kindness of Heart as Well as a Matchless Brain.

One day a gentleman of Boston, who was sorely disheartened by the failure of a company for whose debts he was responsible, called on Daniel Webster and asked his legal advice. He told Webster of his difficulties, received his advice without charge and left. But at the door he heard Webster calling him. He stopped and turned to see Webster coming toward him with his pocketbook in his hand, saying:

"It seems to me, my dear sir, if I understood rightly, you are entirely without funds. Is that so?"

The client replied that he was indeed penniless, and then, of course, expected a demand for some security for the time as well as the advice he had just engaged Webster to employ in his behalf. Instead of that demand, however, Webster kindly remarked as he handed his client $500:

"Well, there, take that. It's all I have by me now. I wish it were more, and, if you are ever able, you must pay it back to me."

Novel Proposal.

"Have you ever been engaged to be married before?" asked the young man with the blond mustache.

"Oh, yes; eight times, I believe," replied the sweet young thing.

"Well, if your hand is not working just at present, might I have a try for it?"

GREEN FEEDS ARE ESSENTIAL

Good Varieties Are Sprouted Oats, Alfalfa Meal, Clover Hay, Cabbages and Mangel Beets.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Green feeds should be supplied to hens confined in small yards, and, indeed, to all hens during the winter. Free range or large yards kept in grass furnish ideal conditions for green feed. Smaller yards should be divided into two parts, used alternately, planting the vacant section two or three times yearly with a quick-growing green crop, such as rape, oats, wheat, rye, or barley. This method furnishes green feed and helps to keep the yards sweet and clean, which is an important consideration, poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture say.

Good varieties of green feeds are sprouted oats, alfalfa meal, chopped alfalfa and clover hay, cabbages and mangel beets. In ordinary cellars cabbages do not keep as well as mangel beets, and should be used up first. Cabbages may be hung in the poultry house; the beets are usually split and stuck on a nail on the side wall of the pen about a foot above the floor. Vegetables that have been frozen can be thawed out and fed to fowls, but do not keep well after thawing. Clover and alfalfa may be fed as hay, cut into one-quarter or one-half-inch lengths, or they may be in the form of meal.

Oats for sprouting are soaked overnight in water and spread out from one to one and one-half inches thick on trays having perforated bottoms, and put into an oat sprouter. Stir the oats daily until the roots are matted together. Keep the oats moist by watering them once a day. Artificial heat should be supplied in cool weather. Use a good grade of oats and allow a square inch of sprouted-oat surface for each hen daily, feeding these sprouted oats on the floor of the poultry house or in the yard. Feed at any time after the sprouts are well started, which usually takes from five to seven days. Keep the sprouter clean and spray it occasionally with disinfectant to prevent the growth of mold spores.

Keep oyster shell and grit before the hens all the time. These substances are an inexpensive but quite necessary part of the ration. Hens will eat about two pounds of oyster shell and about one pound of grit each in a year.

WINTER CROWDING IS ERROR

Big Mistake to Put Too Many Hens and Pullets Together in One House in Cold Weather.

A good many farm poultry raisers make the mistake of housing too many hens and pullets together during cold weather. Hens will lay as well if yarded and well cared for as if on free range; but they must not be crowded when they are confined.

If the hens are being fed and forced for eggs alone, get them into winter quarters in their pens early in the fall and do not change them about after they have been located. Introducing new hens into the laying pens always causes more or less confusion, and this decreases the number of eggs laid.

GREEN FEED OF IMPORTANCE

Not Only Assists to Supply Necessary Amount of Vitamines but Also Acts as Regulator.

With hens being confined to the pens it is important that plenty of green food should be given. Not only does it help to give the required amount of vitamins but it also is beneficial as a regulator. The nearer one makes the hens feel that they still have spring conditions, the better egg production can be expected. Cabbage, mangels, chopped and steeped alfalfa and such like make fine food for

Railway Wreck in Which Thirty-Seven Were Killed

This photograph was taken shortly after the railway wreck at Porter, Ind., in which 37 persons lost their lives. A west-bound New York Central train crashed into an east-bound Michigan Central train at the crossing.

Actual Center of Population

This photograph shows, left to right: Prof. W. A. Cogshall of the University of Indiana, and Lawrence Wheeler of the Indianapolis Star, beside a tree on the farm of Melvin Sims, two miles west of Whitehall, Ind. As the inscription carved on the beech shows, this is the exact center of the population of the United States. The spot was determined by Professor Cogshall, who is an astronomer, after taking observations of the sun and making complicated calculations based on the 1920-21 census figures.

DICKENS' OFFICE BOY

This photograph of C. Jackson of Breage, Cornwall, is of special interest in view of the recent celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens. Mr. Jackson was the novelist's office boy at the time Dickens was assistant editor of "All the Year Round." It was young Jackson's duty to see if Mr. Dickens was "in" to the numerous callers.

INDIAN ARISTOCRATS

SHE'S REAL "SOURDOUGH"

This is Miss Nellie Cashman, the best-known woman "sourdough" in Alaska, who is visiting her former home in San Francisco for the first time in 48 years. In 1873 she and another girl tossed a coin to determine whether they should go to South Africa or Alaska. The northern country won. Miss Cashman's home is in Wisconsin and she will return there.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

"God, how I've prayed for this minute," he exclaimed, turning on her suddenly.

"I have, too," said Tonnibel in a shy, sweet voice. "I thought you'd forgotten about me."

"Why, I couldn't do my work half way well, I've thought about you so much," cried the boy, "and I've been planning a lot for you and me. You see, Dr. John is a sort of a guardian to me, and next year I'll be twenty-three. Then I have all my own money. I can get married then, if I want to."

"Oh," said Tonnibel in a queer little voice.

"Yes, I believe in early marriages," Philip went on emphatically. "Wasn't it a queer thing that all the while I was haunting the shore you were in the house, my house almost? You see, I live just next door to you."

"Oh!" Tony said again. Something had hurt her dreadfully. Something he had said. He might be married next year and, of course, it would be to Katherine.

"And time and again I heard how much some little girl was helping Dr. Paul," he went on. "But somehow I never heard your name and hadn't the last idea—" He stopped. Then he slipped his arm about her. "I didn't know she was my little girl," he finished.

Tony closed her eyes. All the unhappiness of the past weeks left her that moment like a vanished burden. He had said she was his little girl. How very lovely the world was!

"Lean against me, dear," murmured Philip. "And this time—Oh, Tony, don't leave me today without telling me you love me a lot."

Tony glimpsed him with one little upward glance. Her eyes were star-bright.

"I love you more'n the whole world," she trembled. "More'n I know how to tell."

It isn't any one's affair just how many times Philip made Tony tell him she'd marry him, nor is it any one's affair how many times he kissed her, but it is our business to listen to Philip's conclusion.

"I'm going to tell Cousin John and Cousin Paul tonight that we're going to be married," he said, and Tonnibel had no inclination to forbid him.

With dark thoughts, Katherine was watching for them to come back again. She saw the happy shining face of the girl, saw Philip lift the little figure from the car and draw her up the steps. Her teeth came together in sharp misery as she turned from the window and went upstairs.

CHAPTER XII.

A Little Drop of Something.

Reginald was sitting in his mother's room that evening when his sister opened the door and entered. The girl looked about for Mrs. Curtis, then picked up a cigarette and lit it. She was so white and drawn looking that her brother stared at her.

"What's the matter, sis?" he asked with no particular interest in his voice. "I hate everybody in the world," snapped the girl.

"Who? That's some hate," laughed Reggie.

Katherine threw herself down on the divan.

"Worst of any one I hate Paul Pendelhaven and next—well, next I hate Cousin John," she said between her teeth. "I wish, oh, how I wish Paul would die tonight. I'd almost like to kill him myself. If it weren't for him, we'd all have money, and if it weren't for that girl with him, he'd die."

"Well, I might cheer you up a little if I told you that perhaps before long your illustrious Cousin Paul will be under the sod."

The girl sat up and stared at him. "Don't be a fool, Reggie," she said with a sneer. "Cousin John says Paul will be able to go out of the house very soon, that by next week he can go anywhere he likes."

Reginald got up lazily. He said something under his breath that made his sister struggle to her feet. She stood a moment and gazed with startled eyes at the door that had closed Reggie on the other side of it.

"Now, what'd he mean by that?" she wondered dully. "What did he mean by saying that if he could help it Cousin Paul would never drive again. I wonder just what he meant by that?"

Reggie knew what he meant by his words if Katherine didn't. He intended to put Dr. Paul out of the way, thus helping his mother as well as himself. He wanted to get away from Ithaca, to leave the town that always put him in mind of Tonnibel Devon. The least wind that blew brought back the awful moment when he and Devon had discovered the girl had drowned herself, and because of his tormenting conscience he drank more heavily every day. After leaving his sister he went to his room where he filled himself up with brandy. The drunker he got the more dim grew the picture of Tony's pale, terrified face.

He slept soundly for an hour or so and only awoke when a servant rapped at the door and told him dinner was ready. He was too ill to get up and lay staring hopelessly about the room. Then suddenly out of the shadows in the corner floated Tonnibel Devon. He groaned and turned slowly in the bed. Instead of getting better he was getting worse. The ghost of Devon's daughter was haunting him in every one of his sober hours. He hated Ithaca and every one in it. If Dr. Paul were dead—

He sat up, his head whirling. He crawled to the floor, went to the bathroom and soaked his head in cold water. Then he sent a servant for a pot of strong coffee.

So happy was Dr. Paul to have Tonnibel back that he insisted on sitting up to his dinner.

"It was a long hour, my dear," he said, smiling. "But I'm glad you went out. He's a nice fellow, Philip. My brother and I have often wished our young cousin would pattern after him, but it does seem as if nothing can be done with him. Even his mother has no influence over him."

"I've never seen him," stated Tonnibel.

"He's scarcely ever at home," answered Dr. Paul, "and the worst of it is, he gives no explanation as to where he goes."

Then after dinner as usual Tonnibel, with Gussie Piglet in her arms, read from the Bible. The clock struck ten when she arose softly and began to prepare for the night. By the even breathing of the man on the bed she knew he was asleep, and as quiet as a mouse she crept about softly so as not to arouse him. The suite directly back of Paul Pendelhaven's had been given to her. She went into her bedroom and made ready to retire. Then over her night robe she drew a light kimono.

She turned off the electric switch and stood near the window looking out. Her heart sang with joy. She had but to harken to the voice of a great love, love for Tonnibel Devon. How very much she wanted to be thankful for!

Suddenly she saw the shadow shake as if a giant hand were ing at its roots. How could that be? There wasn't any wind, not even a breeze. Her heart jumped into her throat as she crept away from the window and back into Pendelhaven's room. The little night lamp glimmered dimly above the small table with its load of medicine glasses. She stood in the shadow and peered through the screen. There among the dripping branches was the quiet figure of a man.

Her mind went immediately to her father, but she put the thought of him away, for the form in the tree was much more slender than Uriah Devon's.

Dr. Pendelhaven still slept, his face turned toward the wall, and Tonnibel squatted down at the foot of the bed, keeping the dark figure in the tree in the line of her vision. She dared not leave the room, nor dared she call out. How often Dr. John had told her that his brother must be kept free from shocks of every kind. For another ten minutes she leaned her chin on her hand, still keeping her eyes on the window. Then she saw the flutter of a wistaria branch against the screen and knew that the hour had come. Another tense silence for several minutes, then a little scraping sound as if a sharp instrument was moving over wire. Some one was trying to get in. Tonnibel crawled forward on her knees until she was directly in front of Dr. Paul.

She sank back against the bed and waited.

The scraping sound at length ceased. With a forward shove of her head, Tonnibel saw that the wire netting had been ripped fully a foot, and then she saw a hand move little by little through the opening, until a long arm was fully inside the room. Tony watched it, fascinated. Then she saw it waver toward the table, pause, open and lay some little pellets down without a sound. Then long white fingers drew off the covers of the glasses noiselessly and picked up the pellets one after another and dropped them silently into the medicine. As quietly the covers were restored, and the arm slowly withdrawn. Directly beneath the window, Tonnibel rose up.

There through the faint light she was staring into the face of Reginald Brown. Instantly she recognized him, and all the terror of that day when he and her brutal father had placed a menacing shadow over her swept her nearly off her feet. Reginald had come not only to harm Paul Pendelhaven, but to get her!

"Stand by, Salvation of the Lord," shot across her tortured soul, and then through the break in the wire netting she thrust her clenched fist. Reginald took the blow she gave him without an audible sound and fell backward into the garden below. He was paralyzed by the blazing eyes and the memory that the body of the ghost-girl was somewhere beneath the broad surface of Lake Cayuga.

Tonnibel heard him land on the soft grass, and for a few seconds she stood panting against the window. Then she withdrew her arm and crouched down on the floor.

What had her father's pal put in Dr. Paul's medicine? Minute by minute she became more acutely sure that no good had been intended. Silently she took up the glasses and carried them to her own room. Then she slipped out into the hall, ran along the corridor and rapped softly on John Pendelhaven's apartments. Twice she repeated her summons in nervous little rap-taps that penetrated Dr. John's sound slumber. When he recognized her, opened the door and noticed how white she was, he drew her instantly to him and shut the door.

Between chattering teeth she began to tell him the dreadful tale. As she went on with the story the listener's face grew much concerned.

"Somebody's tried to poison him," he cried, taking a long breath. "My God, who could be so damnable as that? Come, let me get the stuff."

Together they stole back to Tonnibel's room and Dr. John carried away the medicine with him, leaving Tony with a caution not to speak of the matter to his brother. Putting on his clothes, John went outside and made a tour of the house. It wasn't difficult to find the place where the man had fallen, but there was no sign of him anywhere.

Tonnibel did not sleep at all that night. But very early in the morning she arose and slipped into Dr. Paul's room and put back the medicine Dr. John had given her.

During the morning Dr. John Pendelhaven softly entered her room. He came forward, his hands outstretched, his face white and very grave.

"Darling little girl," he whispered, with much emotion. "You have saved my brother's life. The villain, whoever he was, put the rankest kind of poison in it. He must have gotten it from some doctor, for no druggist would have sold it to him."

"Mebbie he's dead," replied Tony gently, with an expression of awe. "It was a long tumble he took."

"No; he got away! I've hunted the place over for him. Would you know him again if you saw him?"

"Sure," replied Tony, nodding, but she said no more. To tell him who the man was would mean to break the solemn oath she had made on the Christ to her mother.

A timid knock brought the conversation to a close. Mrs. Curtis was at the threshold when Pendelhaven opened the door.

"I've been looking the house over for you, John," she began. "Boy's got a headache! He said for you not to bother to come to him, but to give me something to make him sleep."

"Is he drunk?" demanded Pendelhaven.

Mrs. Curtis began to cry. "John, how unkind!" she sniffled from the haven of her handkerchief. "The moment the child complains everybody accuses him of drinking. No, of course, he isn't drunk."

For many days Reginald Curtis tossed fitfully in bed, tortured by the thought that he would never cease being haunted by Tony Devon's spirit. He dared not get up, for he was covered with bruises from his fall, and added to his misery, he imagined every time the door opened he was going to be arrested. But no such thing happened, and one afternoon when Dr. John was gone and his mother and Katherine were shopping downtown, he crawled out of bed and made his way softly from the house.

Uriah Devon had ventured back to the Hoghole with his canal boat, so when Reginald appeared aboard her Devon met him with a growl.

"Where in h—l you been all this time, Rege?" he demanded in a sinister tone.

Reggie shuddered, as he sank down on the bench.

"I'm going crazy," he muttered. "I've been awful sick."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE VOICES EXPLAINED.

When Mrs. Wood Elf was about to explain to the boy and the girl adventurers about the voices she listened first to what they had to tell her.

Curious Creature.

"Oh, it was awful!" said the girl. "When the first voices were saying such horrible things it became very dark and frightful."

"And when we listened to the second voices," said the boy, "we seemed to be in a lighter, brighter part of the woods."

"You see," said the girl, "the first voices said not to go the way you had told us to and they said you weren't really a friend."

"And the second voices said the first voices were very wicked, which they really, really were."

"But it was frightful in the woods, hearing the different voices telling us to go different ways."

"Of course it was," said Mrs. Wood Elf. "And I will explain those voices to you."

"Do," said the boy. "And please forgive us for doubting you for a moment, dear Mrs. Wood Elf."

"Of course I will," said Mrs. Wood Elf, "for I know you haven't understood before how dreadful those first voices are."

"You find out about those voices when you come adventuring and sometimes when you don't adventure at all!"

"You're apt to find them anywhere. They never appear themselves, for they can't. They're only voices. You followed the right ones, the ones who are followers of those two brothers, Honesty and Faithfulness."

"But if you had followed the wrong ones, who, it is true, said they were right, you wouldn't have found me or any one to help you on your journey for goodness knows how long! Maybe years!"

"The first voices, or the wrong voices, are all ruled over by a creature named Doubt, whose lord high chancellor is named Unhappiness."

"Doubt is a very curious creature. He has hands and arms and legs and feet and a face and a body, but he has no heart at all, and so he got hold of Unhappiness, and together they rule the voices which sound in the ears of people who are going forth on adventures, as well as in those of persons who are not!"

"Doubt sees that his subjects do their best to make folks doubt their friends, to make them believe that their friends are never unselfish. He makes people believe that all charities are fakes and that all kind people are being kind only for what they can get out of being kind themselves."

"Sometimes, when he does happen to be right, he is in his element, and then he tries to get a lot of followers. For instance, when a charity is a fake, or when a person has not been a true friend, he hurries his voices around and they say:

"See, see; we told you so!"

"He and his lord high chancellor make those who listen to them pretty unhappy. And their eyesight becomes queer through following such dark and untrue paths."

"I, who am aware of everything that goes on in the woods, know. You hesitated for a moment or two. But you would not follow Doubt. You knew, too, that Doubt would never lead you to the House of Secrets."

"But here I must bid you farewell, and happy we have been, in spite of the strange things that have happened."

"May you enjoy your trip and find the House soon."

So saying, Mrs. Wood Elf left them, for they had reached the road, and, pointing in the direction they should go, she was off.

The road was quite rough in places and quite bumpy, but they remembered that the witch had told them they couldn't find the House of Secrets if they stayed on the smooth, well-beaten road which was the Road Commonplace. They had to be willing to tackle the bumps if they wanted to find the answers to their questions.

And they knew that they could find the answers only if they had really adventured and had learned the secrets one by one, in the House of Secrets.

Lark.

"Listen, boy."

"Yes, sir."

"In my youth I was frequently up with the lark at five in the morning."

"You had me outclassed, dad, I couldn't keep a lark going that long!"

HOW TO MAKE A HOT-BED.

The growing season never arrives early enough for the enthusiastic gardener, and if he can possibly beat the neighbors, with fresh vegetables ready for the table a month ahead of theirs, he will do so.

A hot-bed is in reality a miniature greenhouse, heated by stable manure.

It consists of a pit from 2 to 3 feet deep, filled with manure to within 6 inches of the ground level, with a 6-inch top dressing of garden soil. The front wall of the frame extends 6 inches or so above the ground, the rear wall 12 inches or so, the sides slope from the height of the front wall to the height of the rear wall, and the open top is protected with glazed sash.

The size of the hot-bed will be determined by the size and number of sash at hand. Storm-sash or old window sash will do. Regular hot-bed sash can be purchased at door-and-sash mills, and through dealers handling garden accessories, in size 3 feet wide and 6 feet long (Fig. 3).

Figure 1 shows a single-section hot-bed. Corner posts A of the framework (Fig. 4) are 2-by-4s, side boards B and end boards E and F are cut from

1-by-8s, and boards C and G are 1-by-6s. Rip a triangular strip from the upper edge of boards B, as shown in Fig. 5, so one end will measure 1 1/2 inches wide, the other end 7 1/2 inches wide. The framework must be made enough narrower than the sash so the sash will lap over the sides, and 2 or 3 inches longer than the sash to allow for the

BIRD AND ANIMAL CUT-OUTS.

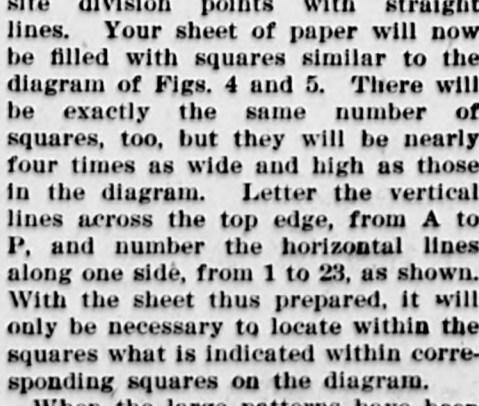

If you can get whitewood or basswood, one-fourth inch thick, such as is sold for scroll-saw work, and a hand scroll-saw, it will be a simple operation to cut the parrot shown in Fig. 1, and the monkey shown in Fig. 6, out of wood. But if you have neither the wood nor saw, you can cut the figures out of heavy cardboard with a knife.

To simplify the work of drawing the parrot and the monkey, I have provided patterns in Figs. 4 and 5, and these you can easily reproduce the size that you want to have them, by the process of enlarging by squares. Take a piece of wrapping-paper, and cut it exactly 7 1/2 inches wide by 11 inches long, being careful to get the corners square. Then with a ruler mark off 1/2-inch divisions along each edge, and connect opposites division points with straight lines. Your sheet of paper will now be filled with squares similar to the diagram of Figs. 4 and 5. There will be exactly the same number of squares, too, but they will be nearly four times as wide and high as those in the diagram. Letter the vertical lines across the top edge, from A to P, and number the horizontal lines along one side, from 1 to 23, as shown. With the sheet thus prepared, it will only be necessary to locate within the squares what is indicated within corresponding squares on the diagram.

When the large patterns have been drawn, cut them out, and trace them off upon the pieces of wood or cardboard provided for them. If you use wood, care must be taken in sawing out around the small projections of the bodies, as they will split off easily, and you don't want to have to glue weight its tail, and the best means of weighting is by gluing a No. 3 skirt-clip, or a telephone slug, to each side of the tail (Fig. 3). Cut a slot through the monkey's feet, and insert a piece like that provided for the parrot (Fig. 7). Weight the monkey's tail like the parrot's also, (Fig. 8), strip H (Fig. 2), which is nailed across the top as a hinge-strip to screw the sash hinges to. Side pieces B will be of the right length for sash 6 feet long, if cut as shown in Fig. 5.

In assembling the framework, nail side boards B and C to corner posts A, then connect the two frames thus formed, by boards E, F and G. Batten the side boards at their center with pieces D.

Dig the hot-bed pit of the right depth so the lower edge of framework boards C, E and G will come 2 inches below the ground surface.

Procure enough fresh horse manure to fill the pit to a depth of 2 feet (Fig. 2). Fork it into a heap and allow it to remain exposed to the air for a few days to ferment. Then pitch it into the pit and trample it down to a compact mass. A top soil 6 inches in depth in which to plant must be spread over the manure. Before adding this, put the sash in place and allow the manure to ferment. Raise the sash to allow the excess heat to escape. The temperature must be reduced until not greater than 90-degrees. Determine the temperature with a thermometer. Figure 2 shows a prop for holding open the sash. Drive several nails into a stick J (Fig. 2), and hinge the end of this stick to a block (K) fastened to the front of the framework (Fig. 1).

The temperature of the growing soil must not be too great, else the plant roots will burn out, so regulate this by raising the sash. Raising the sash also provides the plants with the necessary fresh air. Water regularly, after the seeds have sprouted, doing this about mid-day so the leaves will dry off before sundown.

A cold-frame differs from a hot-bed only by the omission of the manure heating agent. Sunlight alone is depended upon for heat. Consequently, the cold-frame can be depended upon only for forcing plants after the severe weather has passed. You can use the hot-bed as a cold-frame later.

For protection at night, cover the sash with pieces of carpet or with straw mats.

pieces together after the cutting has been done. If you use cardboard, make the figures of double thickness, otherwise they will not be heavy enough.

Buy 12-inch oval embroidery-wools for swings, and use ribbon to suspend them by. The parrot's claws do not rest directly upon the hoops, but grasp a piece of cardboard of the shape shown in Fig. 2, the lower points of which stand upon the hoop. This piece fits in a slot cut through the claws, at right angles; glue it in place. To make the parrot balance upon its perch, it is necessary to

QUINCY THEATRE
"Girls 'N' Everything", described by an enthusiastic press agent as "A Girlie Revue" is the announced attraction at the Quincy Theatre the week of March 21.

The same modest agent states freely that "Girls 'N' Everything" is unquestionably the best musical comedy entertainment offered to a theatre going public in years.

Allowing for a certain amount of exaggeration on the part of said agent his contention appears to be more or less borne out by the facts.
"Girls 'N' Everything" emanates from theatrical headquarters—New York city—is new as to equipment—select as to cast—and perfect as to staging.
Mark Lea and Billy Hall—two exceptional clever comedians—are the announced chief fun-makers—and the Misses Grace Gould and Etta Brenna head the feminine contingent, which to quote the effervescent advance agent once again is "unequaled", and abounds in many excellent numbers.
It is one of the liveliest presentations offered this season.

COHASSET
A committee report at the town meeting at Cohasset was accepted that provides for a half million dollar public building that will be a new schoolhouse, new town hall and memorial building all in one.

ECHOES OF TOWN MEETING
Was it a record?
Only 2 1/2 hours for 74 Articles.
A total of 150 minutes.
Or little over two minutes to one Article.
Almost military precision.
No need of action as in 1917-1918. The military phrase "Snap it up."
First debate on Article 9.
Amendment to Article 29 lost.
Second and last debate on Article 33.
First count of votes Article 38.
Appropriation committee overruled but twice, Articles 42 and 57.
But one article to a committee for further investigation Article 51.

WAS IT BECAUSE
Too many prominent men or town officers used sidewalk on Columbus street that it did not pass.
Or was the plea of our "Town Father" not complete enough.
That our "Historical" advocates did not ask for a count of votes.
History is being made so rapidly it has no time to stop for printing.

UNSHAKEN TESTIMONY
Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Weymouth. No Weymouth resident who suffers backache, or annoying urinary ills can remain unconvinced by this twice-told testimony.
Mrs. S. R. Parker, Granite street, Weymouth, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills several times when my kidneys were acting too often and when I have been lame across my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have always helped me when I have used them, so I never fail to speak well of them. I keep Doan's in the house all the time."

Nearly a year later, Mrs. Parker said: "I have the same confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as when I endorsed them a year ago. Doan's always help me out when I need them." Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Parker had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv. 2t.11.12

PUBLIC OPEN FORUM

The speaker at the Public Open Forum next Sunday at 7 P. M. in the Union church of Weymouth and Brain-tree is Charles Kroll, head of the Charles Kroll Co., manufacturers of workers' clothing for three years chairman of the Boston City Club Forum—"An employer with Social Vision." The subject: "Labor from a Progressive Employer's Point of View."

Mr. Kroll is a Boston manufacturer of large experience both as a worker and as an executive. He worked his way up; he has the proper perspective from which to view the life and burdens of his employees, and on which to base his work for the bettering of labor conditions, especially in his own business.

From many comments: "Charles Kroll did almost the finest piece of work for me last Sunday of any speaker whom I have ever had occasion to introduce to a Forum audience to discuss the industrial question. I suspect Mr. Kroll does not realize how perfect and how adequate was his service. As a speaker he has the gift of rare clearness and abundant humor and he quite surpasses the average in his ability to handle questions in a terse and capable but altogether satisfactory fashion. I am really so enthusiastic about it that I am telling all my friends that he is by all odds the best man to get when this kind of thing is to be discussed."

"BILLY'S DIARY"

By AGNES GRAHAM BROGAN

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Jasmine came into the clearing where the old spring house stood, and paused lost in conflicting emotion. Memories came to her across the years, memories of tender sweetness, memories of desolation. It was here that she had spent many happy hours in her childhood, here that great loneliness had reclaimed her. And now that she had come back for a view of the place, she was still both sorry and glad.

Down the road farther lay the old mansion that had been Jasmine's home and the home of her grandparents. It was there that her young mother, passing out of life as her child came into it, bequeathed her infant orphaned daughter to great Aunt Mellicent's care—the young mother who had named her baby Jasmine, her "little white flower."

Aunt Mellicent's slender income, never sufficient for the upkeep of the great old home, expired with her death, and there had been little money left to Jasmine after paying the mortgages. So, all untrained, the girl went out into the busy world to earn her livelihood—and this was her first home-coming. It was an advertisement concerning the "White Inn" for summer guests which caught Jasmine's eye in the city paper. The White Inn, as pictured there, was her own lost homestead. So Jasmine, packing hastily, went out to spend her hard-earned two weeks' vacation in the altered place. The hermit's dwelling on the spot where the old springhouse had been, was a topic of never-failing interest to White Inn guests. For the hermit, it was said, frequented his lonely cabin every summer, living there in solitary exile. Each guest at one time or another, made a trip up the wooded way to see him in his garden. And the hermit, who was young and good looking, in a frowningly forbidding manner, persistently ignored them one and all. He dressed in khaki, as a modern hermit should, and cooked his own food—if not exactly over a kettle, at least on an oil stove. Jasmine, had not traveled over the bramble path out of curiosity to see him, but to view instead the old spring house. And as she sat on the hermit's garden bench, she recalled with a smile which brought forth a lately despondent dimple, a former visit of hers to this self same place in a faraway time. She had gone to the spring house to be freed from Aunt Mellicent's stern observance, a lonely girl without playmate or friend, and she had come forth as "Jim," chosen companion of the niece boy in the world; and this is how it happened. Jasmine, upon entering the spring house, had found, lying upward, a closely written little book. On its bright red cover was the word "Diary," and on the very first page was inscribed in boyish lettering—"Billy—His Book." Before the little girl in the cambric frock realized what she was doing, she had read two complete pages of the "Diary." It was wildly interesting; her blue eyes widened over the marvelous adventures of Billy, in "His Book," and she looked up dazedly when an angry voice roused her.

"Nervy!" greeted the voice, "what do you mean by reading my writing?" Jasmine was unafraid, she even clasped the red book closer in defiance. "I didn't mean to start," she calmly told the indignant boy before her, "but when I started, I couldn't stop. It's all so splendid. I'm going to finish the story."

The boy's anger vanished. "To think that all those wonderful things happened to just a boy like you!" Jasmine explained.

And when at the end of a companionably long, happy summer, Billy went away to school, and to college, and perhaps never to return, Jasmine was given the little red book to keep as a lasting memento of their joyous times together. She still kept it. And now, to make the memory of those past enchanted days complete Jasmine drew the little book from her bag and sat smiling over its pages. It was no sound which made her glance up, but just the consciousness of a presence near.

The hermit was standing behind the bench, reading over Jasmine's shoulder, the boyish scrawl. When their eyes met, involuntarily both smiled.

Then the man's hand went out to her.

"You! the hermit of spring house?"

The man nodded.

With quick stride he entered the cabin, and returning put into Jasmine's hand a book of familiar cover. It was one of the season's best sellers. Jasmine had seen it displayed. The author reached over suddenly to inscribe something on the fly-leaf—"Billy," he wrote—"His Book." Beneath the book's title was printed the author's full name, William Chalmers. When Jasmine's two glorious weeks were at an end, very regretfully she carried the book back to the spring house.

"It is a wonderful romance," she told him smiling.

The hermit was locking the spring house door.

"I am going with you," he remarked, happily, "to the city—for you see, Jasmine, my own white flower, I am going to ask you there, to help me in the building of a lasting romance—of our own."

JOSEPH A. YORK, well-known business man of Portland, Me., who says he feels twenty years younger and has gained sixteen pounds on four bottles of Tanlac. Declares he can now eat three square meals a day.

"I am now able to eat three square meals a day for the first time in two years," was the emphatic statement made recently by Joseph A. York, well-known business man and highly respected citizen of Portland, Maine. "I am now sixty-nine years of age, and in all my life I have never run across a medicine that I consider in a class with Tanlac. I have just finished my fourth bottle and this medicine has benefited me even beyond my greatest hopes. Besides gaining sixteen pounds in weight, I have been built up and strengthened until I feel all of twenty years younger."

"For the past two years I have been in a miserably run-down condition, and was compelled a short time ago to give up all idea of business as I was too weak to look after anything. I was nervous, worn-out, had no appetite, and suffered most all the time with indigestion. Some days I would eat scarcely anything; in fact I was afraid to eat because I knew I would suffer afterward. Sometimes I had such severe cramping pains after eating that I would almost die. My nerves were all unstrung and the least thing would worry me and I never could get a good night's sound sleep. In fact I just lost interest in everything and was greatly discouraged over my condition."

"The ordinary treatment failed to do me any good, and as I had read so many statements from people I know here in Portland who had been benefited by Tanlac, I decided to give it a trial. And now I know for myself what it will do, for I have simply taken a new lease on life. I am now able to look after my work as usual, and never feel better in my life. I am able to eat three hearty meals a day and everything agrees with me perfectly. I eat anything I want and never feel a touch of indigestion. I never thought there was a medicine that could do me so much good, and I am only too glad to have the facts about my case given to the public."

JIMMY'S TEACHER

By MARGARET LOUNSBURY.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Then Miss Small," said the superintendent to the young teacher, "it is understood that when school closes this afternoon you will detain your pupils a few moments, and Jimmy Norton will be publicly expelled before them all."

"Yes, sir," said Miss Small, in tones of quiet respect.

She crossed the hall and entered the storeroom where she had left her lunch. The door was locked. She paused a moment, then her face became serious. Within that room was Jimmy Norton, the boy who at one o'clock was to be publicly expelled before the other children.

His outbursts of temper, and the frequent punishments they necessitated, had brought down the average of her room alarmingly.

Her determination to bring him safely through to the end of the year had given away gradually, and this morning's performance had run the end of her patience. During the recess period he had knocked down one of the younger boys and taken his knife, a Christmas present, with wonderful new blades.

The teacher softly unlocked the door and entered the room.

Jimmy was huddled on a bench, sleeping soundly. To her he seemed a pitiful little figure, and she knelt down beside him and looked earnestly into his face. There were marks of tears upon his grimy cheeks. He half opened his eyes and looked into the face above him.

"Mamma," he murmured.

The teacher knew that Jimmy's mother was dead, and her eyes felt a sudden mist. "If he were my little boy, and I were his mother who is dead," she thought, "I would want to be pretty near him right now."

Something fell from the boys' relaxed fingers onto the floor beside her. It was a piece of wood partly curved into a whistle. She looked at Jimmy again, and seemed to understand him in an altogether new way. Of course that was why he wanted the other boys' knife. His fingers had fairly ached to use the keen blade.

How rapturous were the moments that he held that knife in his hands. Then Jimmy would hear the voices outside, and his little face seemed anxious.

"What yer goin' ter do with it?" he demanded.

"The superintendent wants to expel you from school," said the other children, and the teacher.

He shrank back from the teacher and terror seemed to freeze her out of his pinched face. He slipped up into her eyes. What he saw there she did not know, but suddenly he looked to her with a little strangeness.

"Miss Small," called the superintendent from outside the door, and lifted Jimmy to his feet. "She said, taking his little knife tightly in hers. Then she opened the door and faced the superintendent."

She was convinced that to expel Jimmy would be a fatal mistake, and she knew that she was going to tell them so—she whose only hope of promotion lay in unquestioning obedience to orders.

"Has he given you any more trouble?" asked the superintendent.

"No," said the teacher.

The children were coming now, and in another moment it would be too late. "Stop them!" she cried. "Don't let them come. Jimmy isn't going to be expelled—we are going to give him another chance."

The superintendent closed the door and faced the teacher.

She was kneeling on the floor with her arms about Jimmy's neck. Her cheeks were crimson, her eyes big and dark with excitement. The beauty of her made him catch his breath. In her protecting arms, which sheltered the frightened child, she seemed to express the divine instinct of motherhood, loving and forgiving.

He came and stood near her. She shivered and closed her eyes.

He was going to tell her she must go. This was the end of years of dreams and hopes with which she had begun her work.

Then she heard his voice, only a tender music which seemed like a caress. "Tell me about it," he said, smiling down at her.

"He was so little," she said, "and his mother is dead. She—"

She held out the partly-made whistle. "That is why he wanted the knife."

"Jimmy," said the superintendent, "would you like another chance?" The boy shuffled his feet, then nodded vigorously.

"You are right," said the superintendent to the teacher.

"Understanding is above discipline. Jimmy shall have a chance—have it, my boy, because Miss Small believes in you, and has made me believe in you. You are not going to disappoint us."

Tears rolled down Jimmy's cheeks.

"Run along, now, and get some fresh air. Then come back and show us how you can work."

"You understand," breathed the teacher, as the door closed on Jimmy.

Impulsively she held out her hand to him. He took it and held it close, his dignity softening into tenderness.

"Of course, I understand," he whispered. "And now there's something I want you to understand. May I call tonight and tell you what it is?"

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, most every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

The Young Mother

Youth, with its vitality, makes for the young mother's health and happiness. But later, maternal experiences bring a different result. The care of a family, multiplied household duties, and very often the weakness caused by womanly disease, tend to prolong the suffering and to make convalescence a slow and weary process. Many women—perhaps your own neighbors—have had beneficial experience with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which prepares the prospective mother. It promotes the appetite, ends nervousness and sleeplessness, and gives a consciousness of buoyant health. It is unexcelled as a strength-giving tonic for mothers during the period of convalescence. This Favorite Prescription was prescribed by Dr. Pierce with great success over 50 years ago. It's still good today. Ask your neighbor!

THIS YOUNG MOTHER

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

OWNER DUNN LOOKING FOR SOME NEW BLOOD

Would Add Pep to His Championship Aggregation.

Takes Team That Is in the Fight for Ribbon to Make Cash Customers Enthusiastic—Natural for Veterans to Slow Up.

Jim Dunn, owner of the world champion Indians, is looking around. That is, he is in the market for some young blood to pep up his championship diamond machine for next year.

He isn't going to make the mistake that many other owners of title-winning combinations have done.

Just what he wants and whom he is looking over is still in the rumor stage, but Dunn isn't kidding himself into believing that a good chariot doesn't eventually break down and drop out of the race.

His two youngsters, Shortstop Sewell and Sidewheeler Mills, answer in a way the question of bolstering up the veteran side of the line-up. Dunn is sweet on those two children of the bushes.

Remember how Pat Moran stood pat on the world champion Reds and how they sputtered around below par last season.

Dunn and Speaker realize that Cleveland is no different from any other big league town. It takes a club that is in the fight for the ribbon to make the cash customers enthusiastic.

Clevelanders will expect a lot next year of the Indians, quite naturally.

So if Dunn and Speaker can dig up some new talent they're going to do so.

Baseball teams aren't essentially different from other organizations.

The wick of ability burns rapidly. Veterans eventually slow up.

So it takes the new blood to keep any outfit in the race from winning pennants to conquering worlds.

In the every-day problems of living this attribute to success is called push, but in baseball they simplify the spelling and make it plain PEP.

Claude Hendrix, veteran spitball pitcher, who was handed his unconditional release by the Cubs on Monday, proposes to hurl for semi-pro clubs.

Charley Pick, former Cubs' and Braves' infielder, who will manage the Sacramento club this year, is hot after Harry Lunte of the Indians for shortstop.

The Cleveland club is willing to leave Louie Glusto with Oakland, but is said to have asked that Babe Pinelli be turned over to the Indians in payment.

Wild Bill Donovan has signed a new pitcher named Haberman Durham. The recruit is right-handed and formerly played with a city league club in Jacksonville, Fla.

With Nick Allen acquired from Cincinnati in the Hargrave deal, and Bob McMenemy held over the St. Paul club feels safe enough in the matter of catching for the coming season.

A Massachusetts Case

Chas. L. Pomeroy, painter, 54 Washington St., Westfield, Mass., says: "For a year I suffered from kidney trouble caused by an attack of the measles. My back ached and my kidneys acted too frequently. The secret—Doan's Kidney Pills—colored and scanty in passage. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended so strongly that I got two boxes and began using them. It only took two more boxes to entirely cure me of the trouble."

Steel Airplane.

According to a recent report from Reuter's, Paris, a giant airplane is being built by the Breguet company, which, when completed, will be a veritable aerial ship. It is constructed with an engine room in the nose of the machine, the total motive power being 1,000 horse-power, and a comfortable saloon for passengers has been placed in the fuselage. The wings are of a new design, and the machine is being built entirely of steel.

CUB MANAGER WOULD RESURRECT OLD BUS

Johnny Evers Believes It Would Help National Sport.

Morning Practice Now Makes Front of Ball Park Look Like an Automobile Show—Players Are Never Seen Together.

Revival of the old-time baseball players' bus for trips to and from the baseball park would go far toward restoring simplicity and a spirit of sportsmanship to the game, Manager Johnny Evers of the Cubs declares.

"The old bus gave us good, wholesome advertising, but at the same time it put real fun, chance for real teamwork, and more honest-to-goodness pep in the game," Evers declared. "It made it more like a sport and less like a commercial proposition."

"Remember how the manager and his team used to pile out of the hotel and into the bus. If we were the visiting team the town was there to see and cheer at us. Away we would go across the town, the entire route one long line of yelling, home-town boosters. By the time the park was reached every one heard something that made him full of fight."

"After the game we would pile back into the bus. A couple of thousand fans would stand around and give us a hooting, win or lose. We got it coming and going, and loved it."

"How is it today? Morning practice makes the front of the park look like an automobile show. The players breeze in at the last minute and breeze out as quickly as they can change clothes. The manager never sees his men together except at game time. The players are too busy keeping dates with everybody in the world, from movie promoters to soap manufacturers."

"That is the reason players today are not as smart collectively as they were a few years ago. They don't spend enough time learning baseball."

ARTIFICIAL-LEGGED WRESTLING MARVEL

A. W. Snedeker, Cornell's artificial-legged wrestling marvel, who has won many matches in spite of his handicap. When eight years old he suffered from blood poisoning and his right leg was amputated just below the knee.

Snedeker wrestled Bishop, the University of Pennsylvania wrestler, in the feature match of the recent intercollegiate wrestling tournament at Philadelphia and threw his opponent several times, but finally lost the match. Bishop, in possession of all his faculties and unhandicapped, had the greatest difficulty in throwing Snedeker, who was given a great ovation by the crowd.

How much better, when you have a new home, to start right than to have to correct errors afterward from former treatment with other materials, when you come to the use of Alabastine, as does nearly every one sooner or later.

Alabastine is so easy to mix and apply—so lasting in its results—so absolutely sanitary—and so generally recognized as the proper decorative material in a class by itself that it is becoming difficult to manufacture fast enough to supply the demand.

WEYMOUTH, MARCH 18, 1921

CONGRATULATIONS

Our good neighbor the Dedham Transcript will soon issue an enlarged edition celebrating its fiftieth anniversary.

The Weymouth Gazette, who next month will celebrate its 56th birthday, extends good wishes to the Transcript. At such times it is pleasant to recall or reminisce over the many years that have rapidly passed by.

The many changes that have taken place how towns have grown to cities; small industries have grown to big manufacturing plants; how the population has more than doubled itself during these years.

How these two papers with others within an easy radius like the Quincy Patriot, Rockland Standard, Hingham Journal have all passed their half century mark.

What regular, faithful and valuable service they have all rendered to their respective communities in the past, and still doing so.

How many of their readers ever think of this? They soon tell you if the postman does not stop some week, would they soon get used to doing without it altogether.

Servants, old, faithful, tried and tested, they have weathered many a storm; have seen changes in places, surroundings and conditions, but they still go on.

They have recorded births, seen men rise to his highest honors and have recorded their faithful service as they depart from our midst.

Would you gentle reader miss seeing your local weekly, and will it be said their efforts to faithfully chronicle current events has not been in vain. Our best wishes to the Transcript, may it see many more years of the helpful, clean and splendid service it is giving to the people of Dedham.

FROM GAZETTE YEAR 1881

The new volume of the Gazette commences next week and the agent will soon call upon those in arrears for the paper, with a request to settle accounts which are overdue. As the publication of a newspaper requires a large expenditure of money prompt payments of subscriptions will be necessary to ensure a continuance of delivery.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

of this, the second oldest town in Massachusetts. You were elected to this great and important office on March 5, 1894, and from 1895 to 1919 served the town as Clerk of said Board with honor to yourself and credit to the town.

"We regret your going from us more than we can now express, as you have been of great help to us the younger members of the several departments which we represent, and your counsel has always been of very great importance.

"As this is in all probability the last time in which you will appear as an officer of this town, we bid you God speed in whatever you undertake to do, ever remembering that we love and honor you.

"In token of our esteem allow me to present you this small token of our esteem and love.

"While these flowers may fade and wither away your good deeds will live in our memory forever.

"To Mr. Newton who is only one year your junior in point of service, we express to him these same sentiments."

The token consisted of two magnificent bouquets standing at least three feet of beautiful lilies, sweet peas and pinks, each bouquet in a vase.

The two retiring members were taken completely unaware and each tried to respond in a few words of thanks.

In the loss of these two officers Weymouth loses two men who have been long in the service of the town, for after 26 consecutive years for Bradford Hawes and 25 years for George L. Newton these two men retire from service.

Practically lifelong residents of the town, except for the period of the Civil War, when both enlisted in the service, the two veterans, now nearly at the four-score mark in age, have been faithful town servants.

Bradford Hawes was born in Weymouth in December, 1843. Employed as a shoemaker when the Civil War broke out, he enlisted in the army in the Third Battalion of the First Massachusetts Cavalry. He saw service in the Florida campaign and in the Virginia campaign of the summer of 1864. He was stricken with malaria, while serving in South Carolina. Because of his weakened condition he was compelled to finish his enlistment as a steward.

In addition to his service on the Board of Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor, he served on the School Committee from 1889 to 1906.

George L. Newton was born in Weymouth in 1841. He enlisted in the army at the outbreak of the Civil War, and served with the Fifth Light Battery, which fired the first shell in the Peninsular campaign, and the last shot at Gettysburg. At the conclusion of his enlistment he returned to Weymouth.

Both are members of the Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R.

FIRST MEETING

The Board of Selectmen for 1921 held their first meeting Monday afternoon and organized as follows:

William H. Cowing, chairman.

Alfred W. Hastings, secretary.

A few new matters were presented and passed on and a meeting of the Overseers of the Poor followed.

Employer at Union Forum
Speaks on Selfishness of Times

Charles Kroll of the Charles Kroll Manufacturing Company makers of workmen clothing, was the speaker at the Public Open Forum last Sunday evening at the Union church; his subject was: "Labor From a Progressive Employer's Point of View." After defining his position that he probably did not represent many employers Mr. Kroll characterized the present times as selfish, with injustice abounding, saying that there was no need for hard times if both employers and employees would take a just attitude toward each other.

He said in part: "There is no doubt that many employers are taking advantage of the present situation and are rushing to cut wages first. I was recently asked to speak at a meeting of certain employers in Boston recently and arrived before their business meeting had adjourned. I heard one employer, who was as broad as he was tall, express a very selfish position for any employer to take. That seems to be the spirit that all too much characterizes both labor and employer."

Mr. Kroll told of the building trades strike and instanced the paying of graft to the building inspectors. "Yes," said a master plumber, "if you put it that way, we have to break the law in order to make profit." "Well, then," I answered, the workers feel that they are entitled to some of the swag.

Probably that kind of thing will continue to time without end, unless we solve it on the basis of justice."

Mr. Kroll blamed both employer and labor. "Labor is constantly manifesting a spirit of antagonism with a want-to-get-even idea possessing the men. There is utter carelessness, wastefulness of raw material that does no one any good, loss of time, a condition of unquestioned class war. i.e. on labor's side there are endless complaints. Under it all is the exploded idea that labor is a commodity. The United States Steel Co. spends vast sums of money for scientific research to improve their product, but when it comes to the human relationships they do not spend time nor money. We have built up in this country big enterprises of stone, steel and mortar, but have left out the human equation. We use our power and genius on inanimate things and not on men. What we need in America today is education, education of the masses and education of the employers. We must teach employers that there is more in life than making money. Relationships must be on the fundamental principles of justice and good-will."

Some Kroll epigrams were: "Employers are more guilty because they have had leisure and education." "Labor unions are a necessity. To smash the unions would be consummate foolishness." "For every wrong act of the unions you can produce as bad an act on the other side and worse."

"I want to put this thought into you tonight—we get by giving." "Sweat the machines, but eight hours labor is enough for the men."

After the address of an hour, over an hour was consumed in questions and discussion from the floor, one of the speakers from the floor telling of the harmony and good-will prevailing in Mr. Kroll's factory. Every moment was intense, there being lots of enthusiasm as evidenced from the many interruptions of applause. J. Herbert Walsh, president of the Union Men's club presided. Miss Florence Bent of Braintree beautifully rendered two solos.

The next meeting of the Public Open Forum will be held April 24.

CHILDREN RUN OVER

On Sunday afternoon Arthur J. Fay of Broad street operating a motorcycle struck Walter McKenna, eight-year son, and daughter Mary of William McKenna of Washington street. The accident occurred on Washington street, near Middle street. Walter was taken to New England hospital with a broken leg and from last reports was getting along quite well; Mary was bruised quite badly on the back. She was taken home and treated by Dr. Granger and is now doing nicely.

ELKS FIELD DAY

The Quincy lodge of Elks, whose jurisdiction includes Weymouth, will hold a big field day at Merrymount Park, Quincy, late in June for the benefit of its charity fund. The amount of good work done by B. O. P. E. is almost too well known to call for any extended endorsement; its members have always been faithful and constant in their attentions to those in need.

THAYER ACADEMY

A record attendance watched the exciting and interesting events at the 21st Annual Gymn exhibitions of both the boys and girls of Thayer Academy in the Braintree Town Hall on Thursday night. All spoke well of the splendid gymnastic training the academy pupils are receiving from their teachers. Dancing followed the exercises.

WEYMOUTH SAVINGS BANK

The annual meeting report of the Weymouth Savings Bank Corporation appears in this week's Gazette. For the 14th term Charles A. Hayward has been honored again with the position of president. It was in 1896 that Mr. Hayward was elected trustee of the bank and he has served continually and faithfully this bank in some official capacity for over 25 years. To fill the vacancy on the board of trustees caused by the death of Albert P. Worthen, George E. Bicknell was elected trustee. The bank has lost six corporators the past year, as follows: E. C. Pampus, James W. Rand, Albert P. Worthen, Edgar W. James, Robert J. Donnelly and D. Baxter Hayward.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Tuesday afternoon the Norfolk County Commissioners paid their annual visit and held a conference with the Selectmen at the Town Hall.

The Selectmen have asked the County to contribute the sum of $5000 for the continuance of the work on Union street to match a like sum appropriated at the recent town meeting.

The Commissioners were not able to promise any immediate assistance, chiefly due to the reason that the allowance asked by them of the Public Works Department of Massachusetts of $100,000 to spend this year had been cut to $60,000. But they were soon to make an urgent appeal on the department to allow them the original amount; if this was granted it would permit them considering the wishes of the Weymouth Selectmen.

That they would take up the matter with the board again at a later date.

ST. PATRICK'S PARTY

The young people made merry Friday evening, March 18, with a St. Patrick's party in the banquet hall of Union church. The committee in charge were: Miss Alice Charlesworth, Miss Helen Hunt, Miss Louise Harris, Mrs. Amelia Lockyear, Mrs. Margaret and Mr. Nelson. There was a continuous performance, including a sketch entitled: "Pat and Mollie" in costume, with Miss Helen Hunt and Mrs. Lockyear in the parts; a song by Miss Jeanie Rankin; a pegging dance by Miss Dorothy Avery and Miss Margaret Vining; a sketch by the Misses MacDowall. Dancing was enjoyed the rest of the evening. Charles Latham played the traps and the piano was presided over by Miss Margaret Vining. Miss Dorothy Avery and Mrs. Latham. The pegging dance was very unique. The young ladies had forms over their heads and made themselves short by jumping over them, which was rather a difficult performance, but was done to perfection, scoring one for the agility and physique of our young ladies of today.

WEYMOUTH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Weymouth Historical Society will meet at Fogg library on Wednesday, March 30, at 7:30 P. M. At this meeting matters concerning the New History will be considered and a collection of old Weymouth Deeds will be on exhibition. These deeds are very valuable and date from 1670 to 1755. They have just come into the possession of Rev. William Hyde and after he has mounted them in a book, indexed and annotated them, he will give them to the society.

This is Pilgrim Tercentenary year and there will be scores of visitors in this vicinity this summer and much will be expected of all historical societies. There should be a large attendance at this meeting of the Weymouth society. Therefore, make an effort to attend. Let all parts of Weymouth be strongly represented.

Through Sorrow to Gladness

There are yet the evidences of wreck and ruin in many parts of the world, while scarcely a single portion has been left untouched by the spirit of destruction which was summoned up to do its dread work. But, still, considered subjectively, the hearts of men have taken on a different emotions. The reconstruction time highest motives look forward with expectation to the rearrangement, in which they will perhaps have a share of the glory and from which they will derive some of the profit. Nor are their prospective labors to be altogether condemned. They are of such as Augustus, who found a Rome of brick and left one of marble, of a Louis Napoleon, who won an empire by a coup d'etat and immediately proceeded to straighten the streets of Paris.

Beyond and above this is the sense of participation in a new world which, it may be, will possess within itself new hopes and aspirations. Unquestionably, this emotion is not absent from the hearts of men, albeit the methods of bringing the new world about are not agreed upon by all. It is equally beyond question that the possibility of a newer and better system of social and political order depends for its consummation upon definite changes in the attitude of men toward such problems, and consequently toward each other. Thus there is recognized to have come to pass, instinctively, a new attitude, or at least a fresh impetus, toward a whole host of ideals, which, in what has been denominated the canker of a long peace, found no effective place.

Not a bit of this, however, can affect the objective side of the situation, for the simple reason that no faith, however robust, can of itself make a truth of the thing believed in. That it can affect most profoundly those who believe, however, is one of the most universally attested of all truths. To that extent, therefore, there are evidences that the principle of resurrection has a mighty and widespread hold on humanity at the present time. It were well to ponder the objective side of this most solemn and at the same time engaging doctrine of the Christian faith, albeit it is more than mere doctrine. The far earlier religion, from which Christianity in a sense emerged, included a firm belief in the resurrection. The calm word uttered to the Sadducees was that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob was not the God of the dead, but of the living. This faith in various guises was held by many others. Plato argued intellectually on the immortality of the soul, and the fabled phoenix which arose from its own ashes presented the truth in another form.

Sweetly circumstantial is the sacred account. The order of events then paralleled the sequence of our own recent world experience. After the darkness and the earthquake, the period of suffering, came the holy calm. The transition was complete. There was no longer, for the moment, a question of sin or responsibility. Every question had been met. The moral universe had been cleared by the perfect sacrifice. The sun arose upon a morning the like of which had never been witnessed before. Death had been overcome in its own stronghold. The tomb was empty, save of the ephemeral wrappings of mortality, no longer needed. Angelic messengers bore witness to the ushering in of the new order. "Touch me not!" was the word to the weeping one who would have connected the risen Lord with the old. Yet the establishment of the new relationship was announced in almost the same breath—"Go tell my brethren." A note of gladness pervaded the whole scene. From those whose hearts now ache for the bereavements which the world war brought, this note is by no means shut out. Once more the parallel is found in their own experiences, whatever the difference either in degree or kind. There was then the suffering before the glory. So with all who today enter experimentally into the meaning and actuality. Cowper grasped the truth in his lines:

years ago, there was brought within the grasp of men the accomplished fact of a new creation, built upon the foundation of the supreme sacrifice and established outside of the domain and power of death. Nothing that has transpired since has ever touched those foundations or marred the perfection of the moral structure reared thereon. In virtue of what transpired within the awful years of war, of the Gethsemane through which myriads have gone, of the actual tasting of death which millions have done, the hearts of men have been shaped and molded for the reception of the currents of the new life.

To all such this Easter Sunday will be tintured with an inexpressible charm to which their hearts will respond with gladness. And as a background to the full splendor of its significance they can place, as did Paul, the melancholy negation of the Epicurean doctrine:

"... let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die!"

ON EASTER MORN

The night was dark, the faintest tinge of dawn,
On that first Easter morn,
Just flushed the eastern sky with rose and gray,
Foretelling of the day.
When, bearing spice and myrrh, three women came Unto the dear Lord's tomb,
To pay the last sad rites that were denied,
Unto the Crucified.

"And who," they ask in a hushed undertone,
"Shall roll away the stone,
On which, at the Sanhedrim's own appeal,
Pilate hath set his seal?"
But as they near the spot, to their amaze,
No sealed stone meets their gaze.
The door is open, anyone is free
The empty tomb to see.

Seeing they have no Roman guard to fear,
The three draw near.
And they behold, by the increasing light,
An angel all in white.
"Why seek ye here the Living One," he said,
"Among the dead?
The earth no longer holds Him in its prison,
The Lord is risen!"

Oh, glorious news, for those in darkest night,
Shall see the world's great Light,
The wondrous Son of Righteousness that brings,
Healing upon His wings!
Rejoice and spread the tidings far and near,
To each disciple's ear.
He lives! Where then, O Death, can thy sting be,
Where grave, thy victory?

BOSTON PRODUCE MARKET

Week of March 14-19, 1921
(Prepared by the United States Bureau of Markets.)

Fruits and Vegetables
Apples, onions and potatoes, which advanced last week, receded again this week. Cabbage, spinach and tomatoes closed higher, cauliflower much lower, and other important lines partially unchanged.

New York State Baldwin apples were slightly lower at $5.00-$5.75 per barrel. Some highly colored Massachusetts Baldwins sold $5.50-$6.00, while fresh pack, common storage Maine Baldwins sold $4.00-$5.00.

New York State Danish cabbage advanced slightly from the disastrously low prices of last week to 75c-$1.00 a barrel. New Texas cabbage held steady at $2.50-$3.00 a barrel, but advanced sharply to $3.25 at the end of the week. California cauliflower dropped under heavy receipts from an opening price of $2.50-$3.00 to $1.50-$2.00 per crate.

Florida oranges and grapefruit continue plentiful and moderate in price, selling mostly $3.25-$4.00 per box for oranges and $3.00-$4.50 for grapefruit, depending on quality and size. California iceberg lettuce was firm at $4.00-$4.50 per crate. Connecticut Valley onions declined 10c under heavy receipts to $1.00-$1.15 per 100 lb. bag. Norfolk spinach was depressed under heavy supplies to $2.00-$2.50 per barrel, but recovered to $3.50 at the end of the week.

Aroostook County potatoes lost 15c of last week's gain, closing at $1.35-$1.60 per 100 lb. bag. Canadian rutabaga turnips were steady at $2.00-$2.25 per 140 lb. bag. Native grown Green Hubbard squash continues in good demand at 8c-9c per pound.

Native grown beets were unchanged at $1.00-$1.50 and turnips at 75c-$1.00 per bushel, while carrots declined slightly to $1.00-$1.25 and parsnips sharply to $1.25-$1.50 per bushel.

Native grown hothouse vegetables sold at the following prices: cucumbers $12.00-$15.00; dandelions $1.50; and lettuce 70c-$1.25 per bushel; radishes 40c-60c a dozen bunches; and rutabaga 12c-15c and tomatoes 20c-30c per pound.

Dairy and Poultry Products
Poultry seems to be the only one of the dairy products that can hold its own in the up and down markets noted recently, and even this has had a none too healthy position until the holiday demand served to clean up the surplus supplies of fresh birds. Fancy roasting chickens have been in especial demand, prices on these advancing to 45c for the best and 45c for the 4-5 pound sizes with a few capons reaching up to 60c.

Eggs have been accumulating and the money situation and general unsettled feeling in regard to what will be the low price of the season has caused trade to hold off buying for speculation and storage, and prices have receded steadily. The ordinary grades of western eggs are now 2c-4c lower than a week ago. Near-by eggs have been held back by the farmers for hatching purposes, and prices on these have not been influenced to as great an extent, fancy brown hen eggs now bringing 37c-40c, with demand good.

The butter market has been the weakest of the lot, prices dropping steadily each day until dealers lost about all confidence, and as usual, the extreme dull trade has contributed to force prices lower than necessary. Fresh fancy 90-92 score is selling at 42c-45c, and storage of the same grade slow at 40c-42c.

Brig.-Gen. John W. Ruckman, commander of the first coast artillery division, in the Atlantic, died at his home in Weymouth, Mass., March 23.

strengthen the fortifications of the New England coast from Maine to Connecticut with special reference to the naval base at Newport.

Massachusetts has been allowed an appropriation of $214,000 by the U. S. Senate as final payment on the cost of civil war coastal fortifications which the state erected at its own expense. Senator Lodge said it was the last of a series of payments allowed by the government to coastal states which spent money for fortifications during the civil war.

The faculty of the University of Maine failed to receive salary checks last week for the first time in the history of the institution covering more than half a century. This was said to be due to the action of state officials in withholding funds on the ground that the biennial appropriation of 1919 is exhausted and that the present Legislature has made no provision thus far for the institution.

The Vermont House of Representatives defeated the bill presented by the state board of education, which would have provided for a teachers' college to be conducted as a part of the University of Vermont. The measure carried an appropriation of $200,000, and was introduced in conformity with the provisional offer last summer of $100,000 for such an institution by the Carnegie Foundation.

The passing of the free lunch counter incidental to the closing of saloon bars was responsible for the depression in sardine prices, which packers say are now below the cost of production and close to pre-war figures. Competition resulting from increased importations of foreign sardines after the war was another factor. Although the 1920 pack of Maine sardines is said to have been more than 500,000 cases short of that of 1919, more of last year's sardines are held in storage here than usual owing to the poor demand and the unwillingness of the packers to sell at present prices.

Mrs. Doria Lavigne is conducting what is believed to be the only shoe factory owned and managed wholly by a woman in New England. Mrs. Lavigne, left by the death of her husband, with the care and support of four small children, and finding work in the shoe factories, branched out into business for herself. In addition to doing the buying and managing the factory, she does most of the cutting of the uppers. The work for the most part is on children's shoes, made on lasts designed and perfected by Mrs. Lavigne.

The American Legion

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

HOLDS TWO LEGION OFFICES

Winchester, Va., Man Is State Historian as Well as Chairman of Americanism Commission.

B. M. Roszel of Winchester, Va., has been entrusted with two offices by the Virginia department of the American Legion. He is state historian as well as chairman of the Department's Americanism Commission. He also serves as historian of his post.

Born in Baltimore, Md., Mr. Roszel was educated in the schools of his state and received the A. B. and Ph. D. degrees from Johns Hopkins University. Afterwards he was a fellow in astronomy and an instructor in mathematics in that institution, and later a teacher of physics, mathematics and chemistry in the Washington high school system, Washington, D. C. From 1903 to 1908 Mr. Roszel was head master of the Sewanee Grammar School, in charge of the preparatory department of the University of the South. Since 1908 he has been superintendent of the Shenandoah Valley Academy, a military school at Winchester, Va.

Mr. Roszel served eighteen months in this country and overseas in the Army and was discharged a major. He has since accepted a similar commission in the Reserve Corps.

TRAVEL PICTURES FOR POSTS

Films Embracing One Thousand Topics, for Use of All Legion Organizations.

By arrangement between the American Legion and the bureau of commercial economics, the most complete and valuable collection of educational and travel motion picture films in existence will be placed at the disposal of the Legion for free exhibition under the auspices of all posts. The films, which embrace 1,000 separate topics, are the property of the bureau, an altruistic institution the sole aim of which is to advance education and pride in American institutions.

At the instance of national headquarters, the bureau has prepared a special catalogue in which each film is numbered and described. A copy of this catalogue will become the property of each Legion post. The only expense attached to posts ordering the films will be the payment of express charges to and from the nearest distributing center of the bureau. No admission fee may be charged by the post.

A distributing center for the films will be established in almost every state. Responsibility for the transmission of the catalogues and the information concerning the location of distributing centers to which each post must apply for films, rests with the state departments.

The story of the establishment of the bureau of commercial economics is that of a fulfillment of a vow which a blind man took years ago, should his sight be restored. Dr. Francis Holley, the founder and director of the bureau, vowed to work for the betterment of mankind when he recovered his sight, and the bureau is the result.

LEGION IS HIS MIDDLE NAME

Adjutant and Americanism Director of Chicago Post First to Name Himself After Organization.

"Every American ought to have an American name," said Jacob Telnowitz, adjutant and Americanism director of Chicago Post No. 161 of the American Legion, at a post meeting.

"To prove that I stand up for my convictions, I have changed my name to Jacob Legion Tenny."

Tenny said that there should be a law establishing an American standard of nomenclature and that, in the meantime, it is up to members of the American Legion to set the fashion.

"Telnowitz is a grand old name," but Tenny will be easier to pronounce," said Tenny. "I'm retaining my first name, Jacob, of course, but I'm adding Legion as a brand new middle name. So far as I know, I'm the first man who has named himself after the American Legion. There couldn't be any better name for a he-man son of an American service man than Legion."

Tenny enlisted with the first contingent of eighteen men from the West side of Chicago and served overseas. He is a lawyer and at the last primary election was a Democratic candidate for municipal judge.

LEGION HIKERS ARE GREETED

Two California Ex-service Men Report Cordial Treatment by Posts of the Southwest.

The hospitality of the Southwest is reflected in its American Legion posts, according to Van W. Bishop and C. G. Allison, California Legionnaires who are well on their way on a little walk from Los Angeles, Cal., to Mexico City, Mexico, a distance of more than 1,500 miles. Bishop belongs to Los Angeles Post No. 8, and Allison to Irwin Post No. 93 of San Francisco.

Wary with tramping the dusty kilometers and burdened with packs and other impedimenta, the marchers found rest at a number of Legion posts along the way, according to a letter received from them by the adjutant of the Los Angeles post.

"The posts of the American Legion in the towns where we have stopped have treated us royally. Legion members at Yuma, Ariz., started the good things for us. Then Tucson post fixed us up for two days in a room fitted with bunks for the accommodation of a few fellows who come in and want a place to stay."

"Our next stop was at Bisbee for three days. They have a regular home with several rooms and a sleeping porch. A number of the fellows make their home at the club. We arrived in time to attend the funeral of one of the boys brought back from 'over there.' Now, we are at Douglas, where Legion post officers obtained quarters for us. Our plan is to enter Mexico at El Paso or Laredo, Tex."

Fifty-one American Legion posts are scattered about the face of the globe outside the continental limits of the United States, according to national headquarters of the ex-service men's organization. Seventeen foreign countries and three territorial possessions of four continents are represented.

The list of territorial posts follows: Anchorage, Valdez, Ketchikan, Juneau, Seward, Wrangell, Fort Liscum, Cordova, Nome, Haines, Fairbanks, Sitka, and Petersburg, all in Alaska; Honolulu, Keala, Hilo, Kapauu, Wailua, Schofield Barracks, Fort Kamehameha and Kahului, in Hawaii, and Manila, Cuartel de Espana, Cavite, Fort William McKinley and Corregidor, in the Philippines.

Foreign posts have been formed at Buenos Aires, Argentine; Brussels, Belgium; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Montreal, Canada; Chuquibambilla, Chile; Shanghai and Peking, China; Havana, Cuba; London, England; Guatemala City, Guatemala; Paris, La Rochelle and Gievres, France; Koblenz, Germany; Tokyo, Yokohama and Kobe, Japan; Mexico City and Tampico, Mexico; Carro de Pasco, Peru; Balboa, Cristobal and Gatun, Panama; Warsaw, Poland, and Santo Domingo, Santo Domingo.

A. E. F. Play Library.

An A. E. F. play library has been opened for the use of posts of the American Legion, which produce plays for home talent production. The musical comedy, "Sittin' Pretty" is one of the feature plays now offered to posts. It tells the story of a dough-boy who poses as a girl welfare worker in France, saves a party of A. W. O. L. soldiers from court martial, chaperones two charming daughters of a French nobleman, and saves the boys from drowning in the River Cognac. The address of the bureau is A. E. F. Library, 66 West Fortieth street, New York City.

THE EASTER PARADE

We're smiling once more at the Easter parade. The charming young things in fresh costumes arrayed! Pert bonnets and tresses And dazling new dresses.

There's Millicent, Mabel and dainty Marie. In changeable silk, just as chic as can be! In corals and pearls This trio of girls Remind you of Nerlads fresh from the sea!

There's the daughter of Erin, the merry Kathleen. Bewitching in tunic of soft crepe de chine. Is of lilacs today. Her veil and her stockings of emerald green!

Flora's hat is of roses and sweet mignonette. While Birdie's is trimmed in a fancy aigrette. But Betty's new bonnet— Oh! how could she don it? Just a rim, and a crown covered over with jet!

True, there is the cheap imitation brocade. For along with the gold is the tinsel displayed! But all nature seems newer. The skies always bluer.

When mingled once more in the Easter parade!

"The Life of the World to Come"

A THOUGHT FOR EASTER

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

HERE wasn't much use in anything any more, she thought. Just as her boy was showing such promise he had been taken from her. It was hard to go to church, because she couldn't bear to hear the other boys sing. Her boy had always sung in the choir.

At Easter time, especially, how she had thrilled with pride as she had seen him, one of the first and youngest in the procession, singing as though his little throat would burst with the joy of song.

But she must go. She would hear the Bible lessons, and the prayers and hymns would give her comfort. But she would leave before the offertory, when the boys at Easter always sang so wonderfully and so gloriously. The minister—he was very human—he would understand.

The first hymn had been sung. The boys had marched in. "Welcome, Happy Morning! Age to Age Shall Say," they had sung.

But yes—Easter morning was a happy morning—to most.

And then she began to think, and even as she prayed her lonely thoughts came in and interrupted.

At Easter the creed was sung and not said, and because it was always elaborately sung at this time the congregation listened.

The choir sang it through. "And I look for the Resurrection of the dead; And the Life of the world to come," they sang.

And then a voice repeated the last line of all—the clear lovely voice of a boy soprano. And yet was it just an ordinary boy soprano? Wasn't it as though her own boy were telling her this?

The boy's voice rose higher and higher. "And the Life of the world to come."

Her boy's life had been cut off—but—there was—the Life of the world to come!

Italy's Easter Flower. The rose, queen of all flowers, is dedicated in Italy to the service of Easter. What in Germany, the peony rose is said to be its occasion, and also to Whitsunday. This flower was brought by the Turks as having a great value and to come from the south. It was fitted with wonderful decorative purposes and supposed to ward off evil spirits when planted near a house.

NUMBER OF SUBURBANITES WHO KEEP CARS AT HOME INCREASES

Garage Combines Art and Utility.

In the early days of the automobile, and, in fact, quite recently, the owner was satisfied to house his car in almost anything that had a roof, garages were unknown and owners of cars had little thought of that item, the barn being sufficient for one's needs.

Not so today. With the growing popularity of the automobile, especially among the suburbanites, there has come a demand for a private garage. The owner, with whom efficiency has become a habit, demands more than a mere housing; he aims to have a building that is distinctive in design, often fireproof, durable, and equipped to facilitate the work; his car must be subject to his immediate call.

What is more, the practice of keeping the car at home is more practical and satisfactory now than in former years, since automobiles have been brought to a degree of reliability that makes frequent and extensive repairing unnecessary. The average owner of a car finds it no troublesome task to clean and adjust his own car, and to care for it on his premises. The number of men who operate and look after their own cars is increasing annually. For many, this is not only cheaper, but a more pleasant arrangement.

The garage, therefore, has become indispensable for the owner's convenience and thus forms quite a necessary adjunct to the home. There are few structures which are so useful or so necessary in which the artistic features are so generally overlooked.

Primarily, the garage is a building intended to shelter the automobile; it may be attractive and well constructed, but if the architectural treatment does not harmonize with the adjacent buildings, the general effect is somewhat displeasing.

Style and Location.
The style of the garage is a matter that may be safely left to the discretion of the architect. The logical location of the garage is at the rear of the house. This is a point, however, that can be discussed only generally, as individual requirements may make it necessary to locate the garage elsewhere on the property. Considerable thought should be given to the selection of the site, and the choice should be influenced by the idea of convenience and accessibility from the road.

The living habits and conditions of a great many people have created a new architectural problem in designing the suburban home with an adjoining garage. To the man building a home of moderate cost this close proximity of his garage is of advantage, in that it places his car at his immediate disposal.

While the minor details of a garage must necessarily differ in individual cases, there are certain essential principles which should be generally observed. The details to be first considered by the owner might be enumerated as follows: First, the selection of an accessible site; second, protection from fire; third, efficiently meeting the needs of the owner; fourth, a convenient arrangement of the various parts.

Danger of Wood Buildings.
It is hardly necessary to say that wood garages are not to be encouraged, as the danger of fire is greatly increased when cars are stored in frame buildings. In addition, there is always danger to adjacent property in case of fire starting within. It is possible to design a garage which shall be absolutely fireproof against danger from within or without.

Where hot water or steam is used for heating purposes, complete isolation of the boiler room from the main part of the building is necessary. The car room should be ventilated both at the bottom and at the top, so as to promote circulation of the air. Venting the car room from the top alone will naturally draw off foul air, but will not remove gasoline fumes.

The rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters' association make it necessary that the storage tanks for gasoline be placed under ground below the level of the lowest pipe used for filling the tank or delivering the gasoline, and preferably about ten feet away from the building. The tank should be of steel plate, securely riveted and galvanized on the outside, and coated with rust-proof paint, provided with a fill pipe and a vent pipe.

The floor of the car room should be constructed of noncombustible material, with surfaces that will not absorb oil; all angles should be covered to avoid sharp corners for dirt to lodge in. The flushing of the car room will be greatly facilitated in this way. The collection of oil and grease in the corners of the average garage account for much of the disagreeable odors. The entire floor should slope to the drain, provided with a "mud-trap."

Sliding Doors Convenient.
An arrangement of entrance doors to the car room which has found popular favor consists of three sliding doors working on an overhead track, and so arranged that either one of the end doors with the middle door will slide past the other end door; this arrangement allows two-thirds of the width of the entire door opening on one side or the other for a car to enter. Such arrangement is especially suited for a two-car garage where the width for the door opening is limited.

In garages for several cars, turntables are often installed, but where same are used these should combine simplicity, compactness and ease of operation in their own mechanical construction. The space under the turntable must be drained.

Some other requisites relative to the well-equipped garage include a repair pit, which should have an outlet at the rear, so that in case of fire it would form a means of egress for the mechanic.

LIFTING JACK HELD FIRMLY

No Difficulty in Maintaining True Vertical Position by Use of Newly Invented Device.

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a lifting jack, the invention of A. E. Hutchinson and H. Krah of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "This invention pertains more particularly to lifting jacks especially employed as an accessory of motor vehicles. In jacks of this type difficulty has been experienced in maintaining the jack in true vertical alignment during the lifting operation. In this device a rigid base is provided, capable of removal, and with securing means which may be adjusted with respect to the base.

TO CLEAN MOTOR CYLINDERS

Plan to Keep Oily Water From Forming While Carbon Deposit Is Being Removed.

When the cylinder head of a motor is detached for the purpose of removing the carbon deposit it will be noticed that during the process of scraping the piston, etc., the tapped holes on the top of the cylinder casting soon get full of oily carbon water, etc., causing trouble to remove when it is decided to insert the holding-down set screws, writes R. O. Allen in American Motorist. To obviate this I have used short screws without heads on, but with a screwdriver slot in them, and screw them in flush with the top of the cylinder casting before scraping operations are commenced. After the decarbonizing is completed the grub screws can be removed, when holes will be found free from dirt.

TO FIX BATTERY TERMINALS

Removing With Hammer Endangers Plates, but a "C" Clamp May Be Used With Safety.

Storage battery terminals are often difficult to remove, especially after the battery has been on the car so long that they are corroded. Removing them with a hammer endangers the plates, but a C clamp may be used with safety and with dispatch. Place the clamp with the lip resting against the terminal and the screw against the connector. After a couple of turns with the wrench the cable comes out easily.

Life's Little Jest

REVERSING THINGS.

The end of the baseball season was drawing near and, as had been the custom, the team from the local police force and a team from one of the lodges in town were playing their annual game of ball. A citizen who owned a fast motorcar was "Umpa." The wearers of the star were at bat. Jim Clancy, a special cop, had connected with a slow one, "hich went short. It was a close play.

"You're out!" yelled the ump.

"What! I was safe a mile," said Clancy.

"I said you're out," repeated the ump with emphasis, as he started toward his place back of the pitcher.

Clancy said something about robber, and needing games, when the umpire turned.

"Say, Clancy," he said, "remember the other day when you said that I was going 35 miles an hour? When I tried to argue with you you told me not to talk back to the law! Well, I'm the law here, and you're out."—Stars and Stripes.

NO NEED TO ECONOMIZE

Wife—John, do you spell "graphic" with one "r" or two?
Hubby—Well, my dear, you may as well use two if you are going to use any.

Wise Guy.
"The silent man's no fool," said Penn. "He knows what he's about; He thinks mistakes like other men But doesn't blurt them out."

The Dining Room Strategist.
"I suppose the head waiter makes such an ostentatious parade of politeness toward you in order to show his appreciation of your liberal tip?"
"I don't think that's precisely it," replied Mr. Cassius Checks. "He wants to make the contrasts as striking as possible when he gives the icy glare to somebody who neglects to come across."

Translated Into Prose.
Hicks—I must say I don't approve of half of those new woman activities. Every man wants to keep his wife close to the fireside.
Mrs. Hicks (firmly)—You mean, the cook stove.

Nothing Much.
"What's in your traveling bag?" asked the customs officer of the demure damsel.
"Oh, nothing," said the maid, "just some week-end wearing apparel."

SMALL MATTER
Patient: Say buddy that razor pulls something awful.
Barber: That's all right air I can make out.

Several Raisins.
How famous is the raisin.
With its kick of ten per cent.
But the thing that hurts the tenant Is the raisin' of the rent.

The Housing Problem.
"Why don't you leave your husband?"
"I have no place to go."
"Go back to mother."
"Mother is looking for a flat herself."

Proved the Point.
"It says here that there is more strength in eggs than in meat," remarked the old fogey.

"That's right," commented the grouch. "I have known eggs to be so strong that you couldn't go near them."

Family Portraits.
"Are those family portraits?"
"They are," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I don't know whose family they used to belong to, but I expect 'em to belong to mine for generations to come."

Meat Strike Rests in Conference of Packers, Union Chiefs and Government Officials.

RAIL BOARD HAS ITS PROBLEM

Congress Plans Early Consideration of Tariff and Tax Matters—Germany an Enigma—Allies' Tariff Experiment Interesting—Dim Outlook of Peace in Ireland.

By E. F. CLIPSON.

Hopes for a settlement without strike of the labor difficulties existing in the meat-packing industry, lodge in the mediation-arbitration efforts of the United States government. Secretary of Labor Davis, although new to his position, has been brought quickly into a realization of its responsibilities. In order that he may get off on the proper foot and show the people that he is the right man in the right place, he is neglecting no effort to bring about an adjustment of the trouble which threatens one of the most important items of the nation's good supply.

Although the result of the strike ballot leaves no doubt that the employees are in a mood to attempt a complete tieup and gives their representatives a powerful weapon in the mediation conference at Washington, there is a distinctly optimistic phase in the willingness shown by both sides to take part in that conference. It indicates a desire for a reasonable adjustment, and the fact that the proceeding is occurring under such important government auspices, warrants assumption that it will be more readily productive of results than if left simply to negotiations between the packers and their employees. In the latter event, with both sides thoroughly stiff-necked, a strike would be the logical outcome. The affair has great portent as showing how the present administration proposes to deal with the larger phases of capital and labor strife, particularly as relating to the cost of living and the return to normal conditions.

An important development of the controversy pointing to possible methods of eliminating similar difficulties in the future, is the announced offer of some of the larger packers to democratize their plants. The proposal is to give employees a voice in labor conditions by separating the plants into general divisions covering the principal products, matters of production and mechanical departments, each division to be subdivided into voting precincts of about 300 employees. The employees are to elect delegates to a divisional council which shall in turn choose delegates to a general plant conference board, while the company names an equal number of delegates to both board and councils.

It is proposed that the board shall make recommendations on employment, wages, working conditions, safety, sanitation, recreation, transportation and other matters of mutual interest. These recommendations when concurred in by a majority of the board are to be regarded as decisions binding on plants affected. In the case of a tie, the matter may go to arbitration. Union labor officials denounce the plan as one intended to deceive the employees, disrupt the unions and substitute a shop union controlled by the companies.

The government railroad labor board has a problem in considering the great mass of data and in adjusting present difficulties, and others sure to arise in the near future, between the railroads and their employees over announced reductions in wages. Shippers and organizations representing the public are demanding a voice in the hearings. The big question is similar to the one agitating the packing industry, although no immediate strike is threatened. The earning sheets of the railroads show that they need more revenue. There is pronounced opposition to obtaining it by an increase in freight rates, as much of the current business depression and low rail earnings is said to be due to high freight tariffs which discourage shipments.

Railroad officials contend that relief should start with lower pay rolls. Naturally, the employees cannot see it. Union officials claim that the railroads are purposely loading up the railroad labor board with complaints and cases so that there will be a long delay in adjudicating the present question, while in the meantime the roads get the benefits of the wage reductions ordered. The whole thing is so acute and at the same time so involved, that it is very likely to be a subject of congressional action at an early date.

President Harding has announced that he will call the sixty-seventh congress into extraordinary session April 11. The tariff and tax programs have not been definitely mapped out, although the statement is made from authoritative sources that the President approves the proposal of Republican congressional leaders to pass a bill preventing the dumping of cheap foreign goods in the United States. A feature of this legislation will be a section or a special bill placing the valuation of imports on a domestic instead of a foreign basis.

Any tariff legislation is almost certain to be of a preliminary nature as the vast number of schedules to be dealt with in a permanent bill will require many weeks' consideration—probably into the middle of the summer. One of the talked about features of the preliminary bill is an emergency tariff on agricultural products. The administration has not been authoritatively committed to this provision although it has strong support in influential Republican circles. In response to the demands of business, tax legislation will come up for consideration; immediately after, if not before, the temporary tariff bill.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has started out on the program of accomplishment, the "do-things" plan, which his friends predicted he would inaugurate. One of the first problems he has tackled is that of broadening the possibilities of American manufacturers in foreign countries, a necessity if Uncle Sam's ships are to be kept in employment. Mr. Hoover has been meeting with the directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, an affiliation of chambers of commerce and boards of trade all over the country, with a view to closer cooperation between his department and the various trade and commerce organizations. Also, it is the intention of the secretary to create an advisory committee for each of ten or twelve chief groups of industries. It will be the purpose of each committee to form a direct connection between the particular industries and the foreign agents of the Department of Commerce.

Beyond the fact that Bavaria has defied the allied powers in refusing to disband its civilian military organizations and that the Berlin reichstag has tabled the order designed to coerce Bavaria, there has been little change in the German situation. The action of the Bavarian leaders and the reichstag was taken despite reports that France intends to occupy Frankfurt and possibly other important cities if refusal to comply with the order persists.

The whole German attitude to the unfulfilled terms of the Versailles treaty, the reparations program and the allied occupation is that, "we are damned if we comply and damned if we don't." The difficulties of either course are so pronounced that the leaders are in a quandary and probably disposed to let the questions solve themselves along present lines of allied action. In the inability of the German government to map out a clear course, its leaders seem inclined to accept conditions as they are and assume an attitude of martyrdom, while they make feeble protests to the League of Nations and continue propaganda in the hope of affecting other countries to the point of exercising pressure for relief.

If the German government has no other plan in the back of its head and as the entire matter is largely one of economics, it will be solved by an unusual economic method—the application of tariff principles to war problems—not an entirely new method, but one which never before has been applied on such an extensive scale. The spectacle then arises of victors making a forcible but otherwise peaceful occupation of a conquered nation, exercising a supervision over its trade and industries, and collecting in the form of duties—sanctions is the diplomatic word used to cover the ramifications of the transaction—the reparations demanded.

It will be interesting to watch the methods by which the allies shall prevent German goods escaping the tariff embargo through the nearby neutral nations. Already a modified blockade has been suggested, along with an occupation of all the land borders, extending inward if resistance develops, of Germany. To this end comes an intimation, probably most skillfully steered from Paris, that Poland is ready to invade Germany at a moment's notice. The allied Rhineland high commission has in effect recommended to the council of the allied nations that tariff schedules shall not be imposed which will crush the industries of the Rhineland territory, but shall have a punitive effect upon Germany.

The plebiscite in Upper Silesia is expected to affect the situation. If Germany loses that rich territory she will be in position to claim still farther her inability to meet the reparations. If the election throws the country to Germany her economic position will be improved. In either event an excuse will be presented for further negotiations.

Russia's revolution seems to have been checked temporarily at least, with the evacuation of Kronstadt, restoration of a more or less orderly condition in Moscow and the removal of the immediate menace to Petrograd. The operations of the revolutionaries around the latter place were doomed to failure when they failed to take the stronger defenses of the city such as fortress Krasnaya Gorka.

The Red government has been successful, but its weakened hold is seen in the fact that the revolution movement started among the soldiers and sailors, the forces which made the establishment of the government possible and heretofore have been its strongest adherents.

As indicative of the seriousness with which the government is menaced, and its desire to placate other nations is the ratification of peace with Poland and signing of the long discussed trade agreement with Great Britain. The Russians had been reported as massing heavy forces opposite the Polish frontier and making strong threats of a spring offensive. But now they want peace. In the negotiations with Great Britain, which have been long drawn out and the subject of arbitrary appearance, at least, on the part of the soviet authorities, they have capitulated in several respects, the most important being an agreement to cease all propaganda in other countries. Great Britain agrees on her part not to mix in Russian internal affairs.

St. Patrick's day did not usher in the much discussed truce or even important negotiations for peace in Ireland. That such negotiations are not brewing and probable, cannot be stated so positively. Undoubtedly strong agencies are working toward the opening of negotiations. In view of the determined stand of the British government and the equally strong attitude of the Sinn Fein, some change in conditions must present itself before either side feels like altering its position. Lloyd George is reported to favor postponing action on peace until after the elections of the new Irish parliaments, believing that they will result in a new Dail Eireann with which he would be willing to negotiate a truce. Meanwhile the state of affairs in the unhappy country continues very bad with the daily toll of murders, executions and disturbances large and grievous.

German Ambassador to Spain Presents Credentials

Baron Langworth Von Stimmers, the new German ambassador to Spain, proceeding with great pomp and ceremony to the royal palace at Madrid to present his credentials.

Was "Withdrawing Room."

"The drawing room" is a contraction of withdrawing room. It was originally known by the latter name, and in the days of the Vikings, it was customary for the ladies to withdraw from the dining room, leaving their husbands to their drinks, while they went into the "withdrawing room."

Average Length of Human Life.

The average duration of human life is about thirty-three years. Statistics show that one-fourth of the people of the earth die before the age of six years, one-half before they reach their sixteenth birthday, and only one person of each hundred born lives to be sixty-five.

With Reservations.

Our pastor remarked in his searching way yesterday that he often fears some members of his flock, if they prayed exactly as they feel, would phrase it this way: Lead us not into temptation, unless the chance is exceptionally good and no one's around. —Ohio State Journal.

REUNION

A re-organization of M. C. C. 302d Infantry, 76th Division, is underway and the tentative plans will be submitted to the men at a meeting to be held at Loring hall, Hingham, on the evening of April 19th, after which a reunion party will be held until the "wee small hours of the mornin'." Mrs. William Lyons of Hingham has volunteered to make the preliminary arrangements that will probably lead to a permanent organization.

The company was made up of boys from Weymouth and nearby towns and during its long tour of duty at Camp Devens and its service overseas made an excellent record for itself. It returned practically intact and it is possible that some time in the future the members will memorialize its buddies who made the supreme sacrifice by erecting small tablets in conspicuous places in the communities where the absent brothers resided when they were selected for service.

The company was commanded by Capt. Stanley R. Greene, who was one of the most popular officers assigned to duty with the division and its other officers included Lieutenants Cardarelli, Morgan, Wildman, Rodman and Rogers. While several of these men are not living the Boston district, most of them have accepted the invitation to the meeting and re-union, regardless of the distance they will have to travel to see the boys again. It is suggested that boys who served in the company send their address to Mrs. Lyons at Charles street, Hingham, if they haven't received a notice of the meeting. Mrs. Lyons is the wife of Sergeant Lyons of the company.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

On Thursday Governor Cox signed the new Daylight Saving bill, so by statute, the entire state will have daylight saving beginning Sunday, April 24, at 2 A. M., for a period closing 2 A. M. Sunday morning, Sept. 25. This is a shorter period than last year. Of the other New England States, Maine has local option and any city can have a daylight law, as was the custom last year, but few towns have such a law.

New Hampshire penalizes anybody that does not retain Eastern Standard time.

Vermont has a law against daylight saving, like New Hampshire.

Rhode Island has no state law, but has local option like Maine.

COPLEY THEATRE

"The Rivals", which among all the famous Old English comedies holds first place as a masterpiece of humor and dramatic construction, will be given at the Copley Theatre next week. Having stood the test of time through many years of changing fashions in the theatre, this comedy still overflows with humorous situations, and dialogue that never fails to keep an audience in a continuous roar of laughter.

Comedies have come and gone since "The Rivals" was first acted nearly a hundred and fifty years ago, and there has since been written none to equal it. It will be staged at the Copley, under Mr. Jewett's personal direction and the entire company will be in the cast.

INSULT TO EX-SERVICE MEN

The following dispatch from Washington reads: "Roland M. Mahany, ex-solicitor of the Labor Department, who was sent to Europe by Ex-Secretary Wilson on matters pertaining to international regulation of immigration at a salary of $50 a day, telegraphed from New York today that he would report Monday to Secretary Davis."

The above hardly seems fair to many a fine American boy, whose services were worth only $1 per day and of the many disabled still awaiting treatment.

CARDINAL GIBBONS DEAD

Cardinal Gibbons, the venerable and greatly beloved Prince of the Catholic church in America, died Thursday noon in his 87th year.

Reports have been circulated that this company will not retail any ice during the coming summer. These reports are absolutely false. Our teams will be on the road as usual and we shall try to give better service than ever before. This service we can render both winter and summer. "ODD FELLOWS OPERA HOUSE"

The "Kid", six reels of joy will be shown at Opera House, East Weymouth, next Monday and Tuesday.

The play was written by and directed by Charles Chaplin, who plays the leading role himself. Jackie Coogan, one of the greatest finds ever made in the search for boys with real acting ability, plays the title role. His work was so pleasing to the comedian that before the production was over he was universally known among the film colony on the Coast, where the picture was made as "Charlie Junior" a name which Chaplin gave him himself.

Edna Purviance, whose beauty and general acting ability made her such a splendid leading lady for Chaplin in previous productions, has the leading feminine role.

"BOILING YET COOL"

A nearby daily paper, speaking of a fine spring says:

"People travelling to Plymouth this summer by automobile will be interested to learn that along the line, in Weymouth there is one of the finest springs of anywhere in this state. The spring is about 20 feet off the main street just beyond the seam face granite quarry. It is a boiling spring whose water is always cool and refreshing and has never been known to run dry."

SUPERIOR COURT

Those in Weymouth, who frequently have business before the Norfolk Superior court, should support most heartily Representative Russell L. Bates bill to provide for sittings at Quincy. Surely the time saved by going to Quincy instead of that long round about way to Dedham is worth considering. Get busy, tell your representative what a good thing it will be.

CHARMING HOME FOR MODERN FARM

House Like This Will Keep the Children Contented.

HAS LATEST CONVENIENCES

Something About This House That Appeals to Everyone—It Radiates Comfort, Cheer, Spaciousness and Satisfaction.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Twenty years ago the farmer considered a dugout or tumble-down shack sufficient protection and shelter for himself and family. The work of the farm was more important by far than the comfort of the folks. Farm homes were unknown quantities, given little thought and little attention. But times have changed. Today the farm demands attention because of changing conditions. Certain important factors are responsible for this change.

In the first place the children rose up in rebellion because of the monotony and drudgery which faced them day in and day out. The silent housewife, carrying the burdens of an Achilles on her shoulders, finally got tired. The two combined and forced changes which are now the rule rather than the exception. They demanded and got new, comfortable, cozy homes with modern conveniences and other delights that make homes worth while. Faced by an exodus of the children

This space can be easily converted into sleeping rooms by the judicious use of wall board.

It is the kind of home that should be seen on all farms because it reflects a progressive spirit that will work wonders with farm life in general. All work and no play will make a dull boy and that is what homes of this type will prevent.

With the exception of the sleeping porch wing extending out over the drive the house is built on economical square lines, being 32 by 32 feet. The effect of charm has been gained without any unusual expense and the construction is very sensible and substantial throughout. There is no waste space in the arrangement and size of the rooms, yet there is no feeling of crowding. The kitchen which is one of the most important rooms in any home, but especially so in the farm home, is very modern in arrangement and equipment. No longer a large ungainly room requiring endless work to keep clean, this kitchen is a small compact room convenient to the dining room where the meals are served. A side entrance onto the drive is quite handy.

More attention is being paid to the small comforts and conveniences of the farm home and with the devel-as soon as they reached their majority the farmer began to give the question of home comforts some serious thought. The barn was not the most important building. Home came first.

That is why we have homes like the one shown here on many farms in the country. There is something about this charming house that appeals to everyone. It radiates comfort, spaciousness, cheer and satisfaction. There is the large roomy porch with its protecting screens, a wonderful retreat on the warm days, where the family can rest after the day in the field. The house is stucco and frame. The foundation is brick with stucco on the first story and shingles above to the roof. Extending out over the side driveway is a sleeping porch which is an essential room in any home. The driveway leads to an attractive little garage in the rear.

On the first floor there are three rooms—living room, 18 by 13 feet, a very large and spacious room; dining room, 13 by 17 feet 6 inches, and kitchen, 15 feet 6 inches by 13 feet 6 inches. A small washroom is immediately off the kitchen for the use of the men after completing their day's work. The ample window space gives the house a very cheerful appearance and adds much to the brightness of the interior.

Upstairs are four comfortable bedrooms and bathroom, each bedroom having ample closet space. The bathroom is equipped with modern bath fixtures, and running cold and hot water is provided by a water supply system. A large high attic provides extra space in case it is needed.

opment of electric lighting facilities and water supply the farm home has become a real place to live in. No longer the bucket from the well or the strenuous work of pumping it—now it runs from a faucet in the kitchen.

This home should be inspirational to all farmers who are planning a new one in the near future. It suggests many excellent ideas which should be incorporated.

SUPERSTITION OF WHITE EGG

Hard to Account for Widespread Fallacy That the Brown Shell Contains Inferior Product.

Of all the food superstitions that cause high prices—and there are many—the white egg superstition is pointed out by C. Houston Goudiss, editor of the Forecast Magazine, as one of the most curious.

"In nearly every section of the country," says Mr. Goudiss, "there is a difference in the price between the brown and the white egg. On a motor trip through New Jersey recently I noticed that white eggs were bringing as high as 22 cents per dozen more than brown eggs. Why, the gods, who play with our fears and prejudices and laugh at us, only know."

"The white egg costs no more to produce than the brown egg. Exactly the same feed is used to produce both eggs. Both are equal in food value. The only reason for a difference in price is a greater demand on the part of housewives for the white egg. I once heard a Jewish housewife say it was more sanitary and on another occasion an American with no religious leaning informed me that the white egg was a better egg, even the shell felt nicer. Producers and dealers have been quick to capitalize this superstition.

"Curiously enough, in some of the large cities of the country, brown eggs bring a higher price than do white ones. I have heard this explained in these cities with the sage information that the brown egg is 'stronger' and more 'meaty' than the white egg."

Thirty Days.

An athletic young fellow in Australia went on a tear and landed in the police court. The magistrate inquired what the prisoner's occupation was.

"He's a professional football player," said his counsel. "He plays outside right for his team."

"Oh, he does, does he?" replied the magistrate. "Well, then, we must change his position. He'll be left inside for the next month."

POULTRY FLOCKS

BEST BREED FOR CAPONIZING

Rocks, Brahmas, Cochins, Langshans and Wyandottes Are Favored by Different Producers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In selecting the breed best suited for caponizing, several factors must be taken into consideration, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Large capons bring the best prices. Consequently the breed should be large. It does not pay to caponize small fowls. Yellow legs and skin, as in other classes of poultry, are most popular. Plymouth Rocks, Light Brahmas, Cochins, Cornish, Langshans and Wyandottes are all recommended by different producers, as are also various crosses of these. Orpingtons also make fine capons, but the white legs and skin are somewhat of a disadvantage in this country.

Brahmas and Cochins possess good size. Some breeders claim that Brahmas are difficult to operate upon; others deny this. Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes are somewhat smaller, but sell readily and possess the advantage of yellow skin and legs. The Langshan is large and is easily operated upon. The Cornish is probably most useful as a cross with some of the other breeds, thereby improving the breast meat without materially reducing the size of the fowl.

In Massachusetts the Brahma was formerly the most popular breed because of the demand for large birds for roosters. Later, crosses between the Light Brahma and the Barred or White Plymouth Rock became quite popular, while at present pure Barred and White Plymouth Rocks are perhaps most widely used.

WHEN FOWLS' COMBS FREEZE

Best Remedy is Mixture of Lard, Quinine and Kerosene, Melted and Mixed Together.

Even in cold weather fowls should have good ventilation and fresh air, and this sometimes leads to frostbitten combs and wattles. These are not particularly serious if looked after properly, but if neglected may ruin the fowl's appearance, as well as cause unnecessary suffering.

Breeds with large combs need especially good attention. The best cure is to apply an ointment made of lard two ounces, quinine one ounce and kerosene three ounces, melted together and thoroughly mixed. The ointment should be rubbed gently on the affected parts once daily for several weeks, or until the parts become normal.

DISTRIBUTE BUILDING COSTS

Proper Share of Expense for Replacing Old Buildings Should Be Charged to Income.

A proper share of the cost for replacing old farm buildings should be charged against the farm income each year. Buildings may be constructed to last for 100 years, or they may stand only a third of that time. If the cost of replacement is not charged into the yearly accounts the whole bill will appear against the income for a single year. Depreciation charges for buildings, machinery, or other farm equipment are merely a method for distributing these costs over the period of years in which the equipment is in actual use.

DETAILS OF NONLAYING HEN

Knowledge of Little Points Not Absolutely Necessary for Profitable Job of Culling.

While there are many little details connected with the build and form of the nonlaying hen that are well worth knowing, many of which require some study and practice, a knowledge of these details is not absolutely necessary for a fairly good and paying job of culling the farm flock.

ROUP IS MOST DESTRUCTIVE

Disease is Usually Caused by Drafts in Poultry House and by Lack of Fresh Air.

Roup, one of the most disastrous diseases the poultryman has to combat, is usually caused by drafts in the henhouse and lack of pure air. Every crack should be closed, if it allows the air to blow over the roosts. Also an opening near the top should be provided, so that the impure air may escape.

"You mean just drunk, don't you? Didn't you try doin' what I told you to?"

The boy nodded and shivered again. "I sure did, but, but—"

"But what?" cried Devon.

"I put the stuff in the medicine all right, but something happened." Reggie's voice was low and wavering as he finished the statement.

"What happened?" repeated Devon hoarsely. "Don't sit there like a d-d fool and look as if you'd swallowed a live eel."

"I was going to slip back from the window sill to the tree," faltered Reggie, "and Tony's ghost rose up before me and shoved me clean off the ledge and down to the ground!"

Uriah's eyes almost protruded from his head. Then a slow smile ran around his lips.

"Rats!" he ejaculated huskily. "Rats, you fool! There ain't such things as ghosts."

"Yes, there is, Devon," insisted Reggie, in a dreary monotone. "I've seen one! I've seen Tony, I say, and many a time she's come so close to my eyes I could have touched her if she could have been touched. The fall made me sick. I've been in bed ever since."

"And your cousin's still alive, eh?" Uriah's voice had a snarl in it.

"Still alive," muttered Reggie.

"What you goin' to do about it now?" demanded Devon. "Try it again?"

Brown shook his head. "No, not yet, Uriah," he muttered. "Not just yet. I can't."

"You got to get me a lot of money some way," Devon came in with. "I've got to get out of this country, or I'll be hooked to jail if those Syracuse folks find me. You'd better be getting home and back to bed. Best take a stiff swing, too, to settle your nerves."

He watched the tall thin boy walk slowly away in deep meditation. Then he laughed and went below to the cabin.

Almost a week after Reggie's futile attempt to poison his Cousin Paul, Tony Devon was sitting in her room, reading, when a servant appeared and told her some one wanted to see her downstairs. Her heart bounded with delight, for she was sure Philip had come again and had sent for her. She rushed to the glass, caught a glimpse of her rosy face, pushed back a few stray curls and went downstairs to the drawing room.

As she stepped inside, she came to a sudden terrified halt. Her father was seated in a large chair and his eyes, red and swollen, were centered upon her. Then he smiled, that wicked smile that always widened his thick lips when he had succeeded in some evil thing.

"Hello, Tony," he chuckled. "You've made a fine nest for yourself, huh?" Tony only stared at him. She felt sufficed by his sudden appearance.

"I came to talk to you, kid," he said, the wheedle coming into his tones that always augured bad for the person addressed. "Sit down."

Tonnie sat, not because he told her to, but because she couldn't stand on her trembling legs.

"You don't appear to be very tickled to see your old dad," he threw at her, a frown wrinkling his face. "Get up and come over here." His wicked eyes seemed to be swallowing her whole. In fact Devon could not make himself believe this beautiful creature was the Tony who, he thought, had been drowned in the lake. He felt a new sensation within him as his gaze took in every line of the lovely figure.

"Come over here," he said once more, "and tell me how you got out of the lake that night. Did you swim ashore?"

Tonnie shook her head.

"I'm not going to tell you anything," she murmured almost inaudibly.

"Well, keep it to yourself, then," snapped Uriah. "When I get you back to the 'Dirty Mary' I know ways which'll bring out of you what I want to know. So get your things and come along home."

Tonnie felt as if the bottom had fallen out of the world. Then a boy's smile, and a boy's words, "Salvation, little Tony, is always at hand, for God is good," seemed to strike both her vision and hearing.

Tony believed every word Philip MacCauley uttered. He couldn't speak an untruth if he tried. If as he had said, Salvation was at hand, then she could be saved at that moment.

"I'm busy here, daddy," she managed to say. "I'm doing some nursing, so I can't get away just now!"

"You'll come just the same," replied Devon, getting to his feet.

"Divine Love is everywhere," flashed through Tony's mind as she too struggled up. She dared not scream, and even if she did, there was no one in the house who would help her.

Mrs. Curtis and her daughter would be delighted to have her gone and Dr. John was out among his patients. There seemed to be no escape for her now. She dared not appeal to the weak, sick man upstairs.

Thinking of him made her blurt out:

"Did you send that awful Brown fellow here to put poison in Dr. Paul's medicine?"

Uriah glared at her, went white and put his hand on a chair to steady himself.

"I don't know nothin' about any man or any poison," he growled. "You'd better be comin' along now."

"'Twas the man you said I had to link up with. He used to come to the 'Dirty Mary,'" explained Tonnie, seeing her words had frightened her father. "I bet you sent him here."

"Keep your clack shut," growled Devon, just as the door opened, and Mrs. Curtis entered. Tony whirled and faced her, although she didn't have the courage to utter a word. The woman looked from the girl's agitated face to Devon's, questioning.

"This is my kid, ma'am," said Uriah, with a wave of his hand toward Tony. "I've come to take her home. Get your duds, brat!"

Tonnie turned as if to obey, and Mrs. Curtis caught her arm.

"Go as you are," she directed. "I'll send your things after you."

Tony's eyes gathered a belligerent expression.

"I won't go without saying good-by to Cousin Paul," she began.

"If she gets up there once," interposed Mrs. Curtis, in an undertone to Uriah Devon, "you won't see her again."

Tonnie had heard the words and knew they were true. If she could get upstairs with Doctor Paul and then look the door, no one would dare venture after her.

Devon saw swift intelligence light up her face. He didn't intend to allow her out of his sight. He caught at her roughly as Mrs. Curtis barred her flight to the door.

"Let me alone," she cried. "Let me alone!"

Uriah snatched her hands, and Mrs. Curtis buried her fingers in the dark curls. As Tonnie cried out again, the door suddenly opened, and John Pendlehaven walked into the room. Uriah dropped the girl's hands, and Mrs. Curtis fell back with a startled ejaculation.

"What does this mean?" questioned Doctor John.

"My father's here," said Tony, her voice breaking.

"Her father, Cousin John," Mrs. Curtis repeated.

"I've come for my girl, mister," said Uriah, plucking up his courage.

"And she," Pendlehaven kept his eyes on Tonnie, "does she want to go with you?"

"Whether she wants to go or not, she will," ejaculated the other man. "Nobody can keep a kid from her own father, I'm a guessin'."

"Tony, child," broke forth Doctor John, "don't look so frightened. No one's going to hurt you while you're with me. Come here, my dear."

His voice was so low, so tender, that Mrs. Curtis ground her teeth in rage, and Uriah Devon felt his power ebbing away.

Tonnie walked swiftly to Doctor John's side and slipped her hand into his.

"Those two said I couldn't even say good-by to—" She bowed her head against the kindly arm that supported her and for a moment was so agitated she could not proceed.

"Hush, dear," pleaded Pendlehaven. "Hush! Do you want to stay here?"

"Yes, oh, yes, sir, I do, indeed, sir!" she cried. "But—but—"

"Then you'll stay," the doctor told her in a voice low-pitched and stern. "If your father thinks—"

"I'm goin' to have my girl," grunted Uriah.

"Then you have the law at your hand to use, Mr. Devon," returned the doctor, "and you, Sarah, I'll ask you to attend to your own affairs after this."

"But, Cousin John," argued Mrs. Curtis, "she's the man's own child. Surely he has a right to—"

A sound of a bell pealing through the house cut off her words. Then came heavy footsteps in the hall. Before anyone could figure on the cause of this commotion, the door burst open and several uniformed men came in. When Uriah Devon caught sight of them, he made a dash for the window, but two heavy officers were on him before he was half way across the room. It took but a few minutes for the officials to explain to Doctor Pendlehaven that they had been trafficking Devon for a long time, that he was wanted for a crime in Syracuse.

When they were leading him off manacled and deeply enraged, he turned on Tonnie.

"I'll get even with you, miss," he snapped at her, his eyes full of hate, "and I'll get even with you too, mister."

He threw the last half of his sentence at Doctor John, whose only reply was a shrug of his shoulders.

During the struggle between the detectives and Uriah, Mrs. Curtis had clutched at Pendlehaven's neck, but he had cast her off without ceremony. Now the three were alone, Tonnie, sobbing and fearful, Mrs. Curtis, sobbing on the floor, and Doctor John, looking at her sternly.

"Sarah," he said haughtily, "I saw the disgraceful way you were pulling this child's hair when I came in, and at last, much as I dislike doing it, I must ask you to leave my house."

"Leave?" Mrs. Curtis screamed. "Where would I go? I haven't a place in the world but this."

A careless gesture from Doctor John told Tonnie that that fact didn't interest him. She slipped her hand into his. Lifting eyes that were troubled and dark-circled, she begged: "Let'er stay, Cousin John, Mebbe she didn't know my daddy would have killed me if he'd got me back to the 'Dirty Mary'."

Pendlehaven put his arm around her, and with a ring of fierceness in his voice, said:

"There, Sarah, there's pity for you. If you stay, it's because Tony Devon pleads for you, not because I have any sense of duty toward you. I hope you feel properly grateful."

The doctor strode to the door, opened it and motioned for her to be gone. Then weeping, she clattered away, her sobs audible even after the door was closed.

For a few moments Tony Devon wept silently in John Pendlehaven's arms.

"Oh, it's awful to have daddy taken away to jail," she moaned, "but he won't be good, he just won't!"

"You're much better off to have him away, little girl," soothed Pendlehaven.

"Good for Evil."

That night for dinner, five people sat about the Pendlehaven table. Reggie, pale and miserable looking, sat next to his mother, and Philip MacCauley was opposite Doctor John. Katherine, silent and morose, was at her own place. She had heard her mother's version of the afternoon's happening in amazement and anger, and it only added to her discontent to hear Cousin John tell the tale to Philip.

"Sarah thinks," went on the doctor, "that we should have tamely given her up without a word to—to that brute!"

"I can't see how you can keep a man's child from him, Cousin John," excused Mrs. Curtis, a dull red mounting to each high cheekbone.

Pendlehaven laughed.

"She wouldn't have been much use to him in prison, my dear Sarah," was his answer.

"What're you talking about?" demanded Reggie, turning red-rimmed eyes on his mother.

"Your Cousin John insists on keeping the daughter of a man named Devon in the house here when her father wants her home," she replied.

Reggie's face grew a misty gray.

"Devon," he repeated mechanically. "I didn't know we had any such girl here!"

"She's always with Cousin Paul," remarked Katherine, with a sidelong glance at Philip. "It does seem satisfying, though, to know who she is. Mother says she comes of common stock."

MacCauley's face grew dark, and Pendlehaven cast a glance of anger at his young cousin.

"Both Kathie and I," began Mrs. Curtis. "Why, Reggie, my darling, I never saw you look so sick in my life!"

"Aw, cut it!" growled the boy, unsteadily. "Tell me what became of the girl's father."

"He's going to jail for a nice long rest," interjected Pendlehaven. "It seems he was mixed up in a theft in Syracuse."

Reginald got up from the table.

"I don't want anything more to eat," he growled, as his mother started to remonstrate with him. "I'm going to bed."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE VOICES.

Some of the voices who were shouting out to the boy and the girl as they were adventuring in the woods said that they didn't think anything of Mrs. Wood Elf at all.

And yet the boy and the girl had found her so nice.

"She was so good to us," said the girl to the voices. "Why, she never even asked us to wash up the dishes."

"Well, maybe she isn't so nice after all," said the boy. "She left Mrs. Vetting-Most-Out-of-Life to do them. She came along on a trip with us, which was certainly far more pleasant."

"Certainly," agreed the girl.

"Don't be so conceited," said the second voices they had heard before, "for Mrs. Wood Elf is doing you a favor. You're not the most wonderful creatures who ever lived."

"You're pretty fine," said the first voices. "She isn't so nice as you think."

"Oh," said the second voices, "don't be influenced by those other voices. You must be clever and be able to know which is best. They, the first voices, the wicked ones, are advising you not to like Mrs. Wood Elf, and after all she has done for you, too!"

"Pooh," said the first voices. "What has she done for you? She was glad enough to have you come to see her there in the woods. She has but few friends. She likes company. Gracious! You did her a great favor by going there."

"This is very strange," said the boy. "The voices are so queer. The first voices, the ones which say we couldn't like Mrs. Wood Elf, all talk together, like a great chorus of voices, and so do the second voices. I do wish we could see the creatures who own these voices."

"You can't see us," said the first voices, "for we won't let you. We are doing all we can for you, though, in telling you and warning you not to like Mrs. Wood Elf."

"We can't let you see us," said the second voices, "but we're the Right Voices and the others are the Wrong Voices. We can tell you that much. Can't you see that our advice is really the right advice? You've got to be the ones to decide, and surely you're clever enough to know."

"Ha, ha," said the first voices, laughing in a very queer fashion.

cut must be bound together with battens placed close to the opening (E, Fig. 4).

The roof may be a gable roof or lean-to roof. The latter is the better kind if you fasten the house against a fence or wall. For the lean-to roof, it is necessary to prepare two triangular pieces like that shown in Fig. 3, and find a large box that can be cut down for this. I suggest that you make the box 18 inches square by 7 inches deep. Figure 7 shows a cross-section. Cut the legs out of strips 2 inches wide and 3/4 inch thick, and cut holes through the box bottom, at the center of each side, for the legs to stick through (Fig. 8). Nail the legs to the box sides.

The shoes on the leg ends are built up as shown in Fig. 9. Block B is of the same width as the leg strip, and 4 inches long, blocks C are of the right width to lap over the leg strip and block B, by 5 inches long, and block D is of the same length as block C by the right width to lap over their edges as shown. The pocket formed by blocks B and C is to receive an end of the leg braces E (Fig. 10). Notice these strips at their centers as shown.

fasten one to the top edge of each box end. Most packing boxes are re-enforced at the ends with corner battens (Fig. 2). If your box is made this way, saw off an inch or two of the upper end of each batten, then prepare battens B and C (Fig. 3); nail one end of each to one of the pieces A, and nail the other end to the packing box above the sawed-off box battens. Cut and fit board D (Fig. 4) between the wide ends of pieces A.

The roof may be put on in one of several ways. The scheme shown in Fig. 7 requires a covering of boards fitted close together, with a projection of an inch or so over the end and low-side walls, and on top of this tar paper, building paper, or canvas is tacked. 1. building paper or canvas is used, paint it after tacking it, to make it waterproof. Fig. 5 shows the roof hinged to open. This makes the house more accessible for cleaning.

One board must be nailed on for a hinge-strip, the remaining boards must be batted together on the underside. Tar paper, building paper or canvas can be lapped over both the hinge-strip and hinged portion, thus covering the crack between. Fig. 6 shows a tight roof made of two layers of boards, with the edges of the upper boards lapped 1 inch over the edges of the lower boards. You can use shingles if you want to. Split them into narrow widths, and expose 2 or 3 inches of their length to the weather.

The floor should be raised 5 or 6 inches above the ground, to give air a chance to circulate beneath it. Fasten strips to the corners of the house, as shown in Fig. 1, to raise the floor this much. Slope up the ground in front of the house to the level of the doorway.

Fig. 1 shows how to build a storm shed over the entrance, for weather protection. Batten together boards to form a front wall like that shown in Fig. 7, nail the strip F (Fig. 6) to the house above the doorway, and nail roof boards to this strip and the top edge of the front wall.

By the use of narrow strips, many designs can be developed. Figure 1 shows a hanging-box, and Fig. 2 a pedestal box. The top band should be cut out of a board 3/4 inch thick, to make a thick brim to the box, the bottom band strips, and corner strips should be cut out of a board 3/4 inch or 1/2 inch thick. The advantage in putting on the latter strips is that they will conceal the corners and bottom, where boxes are generally roughly put together. Use nails that are long enough to drive through the boards and clinch upon the inside. The nails will hold better, and the earth filling will conceal the clinched ends.

The top band provides a substantial surface to screw screweyes into, for hangers (Fig. 1). You can buy chain by the foot at any hardware store.

For a box to stand upon a porch floor, railing, or ledge, it is best to let the corner strips project as shown in

Fig. 2, to raise the box so there will be a circulation of air beneath.

You will need an 8-inch and a 10-inch board for the box shown in Fig. 3. A carpenter can supply you. With the exception of the ends (A, Fig. 4), the box is made of straight pieces. Ends A are easy to mark out and cut, as you will see by the pattern in Fig. 5. Round the corners of the square projecting block with a plane or chisel. Back and bottom boards B and C (Fig. 4) are of equal size (Fig. 5). In assembling the parts, nail the bottom to the back board, first, then nail the two boards to the edges of the end pieces, and then fasten the front board to the ends and bottom.

If the box is to stand upon a narrow window sill, the bottom will project over the sill, chains must be fastened to the box ends, and to the window frame, to support it (Fig. 3).

The pedestal box shown in Fig. 6 should be square. Perhaps you can fasten one to the top edge of each box end. Most packing boxes are re-enforced at the ends with corner battens (Fig. 2). A PACKING BOX DOG HOUSE.

If you have a pup, be sure to provide for its growth. It is better to get the house too large than too small.

The house in Fig. 1 is 24 inches wide, 24 inches high at the lowest point, and 42 inches long, which is about right for a dog of medium size. The easiest way to build the house is by using a packing box.

The doorway should be about 12 inches wide and 18 inches high. The top of the opening can be arched or cut straight (Fig. 2). Mark the opening upon the box end; then, to make a slot that will admit the saw, bore several holes close together just inside of the line and break out the wood between them. The ends of the boards

fasten one to the top edge of each box end. Most packing boxes are re-enforced at the ends with corner battens (Fig. 2). UNSHAKEN TESTIMONY
Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Weymouth. No Weymouth resident who suffers backache, or annoying urinary ills can remain uncon-vinced by this twice-told testimony.
Mrs. S. R. Parker, Granite street,
Weymouth, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills several times when my kidneys were acting too often and when I have been lame across my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have always helped me when I have used them, so I never fail to speak well of them. I keep Doan's in the house all the time."
Nearly a year later, Mrs. Parker said: "I have the same confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as when I endorsed them a year ago. Doan's always help me out when I need them."

Your buildings are worth more this year than ever before—lumber, labor, grain, stock and implements are all too valuable to take any chances on having your barn go up in flames this season. Your house and your barn, and the lives of your family, are in constant danger unless properly protected. Lightning is no respecter of buildings or persons, and it often strikes in the night, without warning.

Shinn-Flat

Lightning Rods Prevent Loss
The Shinn System of Lightning Prevention makes a building lightning-proof. It saves millions of dollars' worth of property and many lives every year.

It has 36% greater electrical carrying capacity than the old-style round cable of same weight and number of wires. Lightning Can't Strike If SHINN Gets There First!

This has been demonstrated for many years by the protection afforded over two hundred thousand buildings all over America. Why wait and take chances? Better ask about it and get our booklet.

QUINCY THEATRE

Commencing Easter Monday, March 28, the Fore River shipyards will be shown in moving pictures in the play entitled: "The Kick Back." These are the only original pictures of Quincy's greatest enterprise and shows the ship-workers in action around the yards as well as showing many interesting scenes of the building of submarines as well as ships of the different variety.

This big triple bill of attraction contains some of the finest of theatre attractions in the line of amusement that Quincy has ever seen.

The bill opens with the famous comedian with a high-class show entitled: "Ben Loring's Musical Review" and is considered one of the gayest of musical shows on the road this season. The play also contains one of the finest beauty and dancing choruses shown on any American stage. This company carries a very fine line of scenery as well as special attractions in the line of amusement. Ben Loring was here some time ago with the Bates Musical show; however, this year, he has his own musical attraction, with an entire new cast from beginning to end. This musical attraction is a rare treat to the theatre-goers of Quincy and a large attendance at all performances is expected.

On next Sunday evening there will be a special vaudeville and moving picture show given for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus, and a large attendance is expected.

TREMONT THEATRE

One of the best comedy productions presented this season in Boston is the opinion of playgoers and critics concerning David Belasco's latest offering: "Call the Doctor", now at the Tremont Theatre. The comedy was written by Jean Archibald, who embraces in its story a really new idea in addition to a freshness of humor and remarkable brilliancy of wit. None is so gifted in presenting comedy perfectly as that wizard of American producers, David Belasco. In general all-round excellence in every member the company deserves the term—all-star.

Among the players are: Janet Beecher, Philip Merivale, Charlotte Walker, William Morris, Jane Houston, Mrs. Tom Wise, Fania Marinoff, John Amory, eRa Martin and Barbara Milton. There only remains two more weeks of this engagement.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The announcement made by Joe Weber of the engagement of the sparkling musical comedy success: "Honeydew" which has been raged in New York, where it was presented at the Casino for six months, will begin a limited engagement at the Majestic Theatre on Easter Monday evening, March 28, is sure to awaken much interest among all classes of theatre-goers.

In "Honeydew" Company Hal Forde, Sam Ash, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Dorothy Follis, Ethelind Terry, Mlle. Marguerite and Frank Gill, John Park, John Dunsmure, and Marie Hall.

Surely Lacked Sense.

There is a New Yorker who recently decided to investigate his family tree. He had to visit a rural village in Maine to look up one of his ancestors. He went around to a certain house and found an old man sitting on the porch. He asked him if he remembered a certain relative. The old man snorted. "Don't mention his name to me," he said. "He was the cusseddest fool that ever lived in these parts. He didn't have no more sense than to drive a six-horse circus wagon team up a blind alley one day."

The Chinese Cabinet

By KATE EDMONDS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The three granddaughters of Phineas Cobb listened to the reading of his last will and testament. There were no other heirs and the document was strangely brief.

"To my granddaughter, Annie Cobb Youngs, $10,000. To my granddaughter Martha Weeks Stringer, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Helen Cobb, the Chinese cabinet in my library, together with all my books and collection of engravings."

"That is all," said the lawyer after a pause.

"All?" repeated Mrs. Youngs. "What becomes of the house and its contents?"

"It is not mentioned in the will." "Then," said Mrs. Martha Stringer in an acid tone, "I suppose that will be divided separately, among we three, share and share alike."

"That would be the legal division," admitted the lawyer; "unless your grandfather disposed of it in some other manner."

"You should know that," protested Mrs. Youngs.

He shook his head. "You remember that my partner attended to Mr. Cobb's affairs, and that I was recalled from the West because of my partner's death, which occurred a week before that of Mr. Cobb. I can only administer the estate according to the will, and if you care to carry the matter into court it can be decided definitely."

Mrs. Youngs said she preferred to consult her husband, and Mrs. Stringer echoed the remark. Helen Cobb, the youngest and unmarried one of the cousins, arose and thanked the lawyer for his services, kissed her cousins good-by and went away.

"Grandfather treated her abominably," declared Annie Youngs to Martha as they rode to the railroad sta-—it is puzzling, for he was a man of strong intellect up to his death. But, I am glad, Helen, for another reason—you can now marry me all the sooner, if you will. I am still struggling, but there is enough for two—and I would never have dared ask an heiress to become my wife!"

"I am heiress to a Chinese cabinet and a library of 5,000 volumes!" declared Helen. "Let us look at my cabinet."

"Only your promised husband should do that," he suggested, Helen dimpled. Holding out her hand she whispered, "Come!" And so they became engaged—the disinherited granddaughter and the poor young doctor.

The Chinese cabinet was of lacquer with gorgeous fighting cocks in brilliant red in relief on the doors. The lawyer had given Helen the key and in a moment the doors were open and a row of small drawers were revealed.

The first drawer contained odd bits of Chinese jewelry of small value; the second one was filled with a silk shawl of cobweb fineness and the third one contained an ivory fan delicately carved. The third drawer was shallow and came out entirely, disclosing another secret drawer behind it.

"How delightful," exclaimed Helen, pulling on the red silk tassel that formed a handle. The secret drawer opened with a jerk and a mass of envelopes fell into Helen's lap. Upon examination they proved to be deeds to the property—house and gardens—transferring all of the real estate to Helen Cobb. Another paper directed her to open each volume in the library. This she did in the presence of the amazed lawyer, and in each book was found a new $10 bill.

"You are quite an heiress after all," said the delighted lawyer, shaking hands with the girl.

"Yes—but—Jack, you are not going?" She followed the doctor to the door. His honest young face was white and set. "After this I cannot offer you my modest—" when her soft hand pressed his lips.

"You have asked me and I have promised, and so—you would not make me give the cabinet and the house and the money to my cousins, for I would rather go with you—"

What could Dr. Hare say?

GREAT IN ANY EMERGENCY

Admiral Farragut Early in His Career Gave Evidence That He Was Born to Command.

While on a Mediterranean cruise an Arab woman came alongside the vessel on which David G. Farragut was a plain "gob." The importunate old soul tried in vain to say something to the ship's commander, but no one could understand her, whereupon an officer said: "Send for Farragut. He speaks the language of the devil." To the amazement of the bystanders, according to Herman F. Kraft in "Sea Power in American History," Farragut carried on an easy conversation with her. Sent to sea at the age of nine, his education had been neglected, but he made up for it by an uncommonly vigorous intellect. In a letter from Mobile bay, written in 1864 to his son, he said: "I don't know anything about analytical geometry and you do. But remember that one of the requisite studies for an officer is man."

Brought close to Vera Cruz, Farragut took pains to examine the defenses, remarking: "Who knows but that my services may be needed here some day?" He saw with displeasure the invention of the Ironclad, the rifle and the torpedo, contending that "if there is iron in the crew no one need worry about the iron in the enemy's ships." While on the burning Hartford he saw a man flinch from the fire. He shouted: "Look out there, young man! There's hotter fire than that for you if you don't do your duty."

Behind the Scenes.

A French writer once made one of his characters say: "Behind every man's success or failure there is a woman."

Woman is essentially the playwright of existence.

Standing in the wings, she sends her male puppets swashbuckling, serenading, conquering, falling across the stage.

She listens to the applause or "boos," and, like the supreme artist that she is, suffers or is made happy with her actors.

Sometimes it is true, she grows tired of the solitude of the wings and ventures into the glare of the footlights for herself. Then there is turmoil. Her men turn on her—they will share neither the applause nor the rewards—they refuse to crown her with degrees.

They say the stage is theirs.

Unfair, perhaps . . . But most women know that authorship is a higher art than acting, and are content.—London Express.

Measuring the Breath.

A highly complicated instrument has been devised which measures the air we breathe with absolute accuracy. A hose is attached to the mouth by a mouthpiece much the same as those used in the gas masks in the war, and the air which passes in and out of the lungs is indicated by a delicate instrument. Even the temperature and barometric pressure of a room are taken into consideration. Tests are made with this instrument while a person is lying down, without exerting any energy, and while he is exercising or using a typewriter or some everyday occupation. The instrument makes it possible for the first time to measure exactly how much air one consumes in performing a certain piece of work.—Boys' Life.

MRS. NANCY SHARP, of Los Angeles, who says she received the greatest surprise of her life when Tanlac completely restored her health after she had almost lost hope of ever getting well. Suffered twelve years.

"After seeing the wonderful results my husband obtained from Tanlac I began taking the medicine myself, and now we both agree that it is the greatest medicine on earth," said Mrs. Nancy Sharp, a prominent and highly esteemed resident of Los Angeles, Calif., living at 921 Camulus street, whose husband is proprietor of the Merchants' Express Co.

"During the twelve years that I suffered with indigestion and stomach trouble I tried nearly every medicine I heard about, but nothing helped me and I lost faith in everything. So, my wonderful restoration to health has been the greatest surprise of my life."

"I began to feel an improvement on finishing my second bottle of Tanlac, and now after taking six bottles I am like a new woman. I have a splendid appetite, eat three hearty meals a day, enjoy them thoroughly and am never troubled in the least with indigestion or any other disagreeable after effects."

"Before taking Tanlac most everything I ate caused my stomach to rebel and I would suffer for hours afterwards. I was so dreadfully nervous that many nights I never closed my eyes in sleep, but now I am not the least nervous, and I sleep like a child. My strength has been wonderfully increased, and I have much more energy."

"I just wish it was so everybody troubled like I was knew about this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Substitute for Cork.

A chemical works at Bruenn-Koenigsfeld has been carrying on experiments with a view to finding a substitute for cork, says a Prague correspondent in the Times Trade Supplement, and these have now led to tangible results. Tuff treated by a special patented process furnishes a material for insulation and building purposes that is said to be, in most respects, not inferior, and in some superior, to cork. The product is reported to be equally light, firm, and sound-proof, to possess great insulating properties, and to be damp-proof.

THE AWAKENING

By GERTRUDE ALLEN.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Rosamond was in that delightful state which is neither sleeping nor waking, and was vaguely aware that it was morning, for the town was becoming vocal. A dim suspicion of dawn made the windows faintly visible, but it surely could not be time to get up.

A wave of thankfulness swept over her at the thought that she was safely in her own little white-and-pink bedroom, and then she slipped back into dreamland and found herself walking along a brookside, a little buff spangle running in and out of the water beside her. A rainbow arched the brook and receded as she advanced. Suddenly she heard an ominous growl, which resolved itself into the rumble of a passing dray.

"Rainbow in the morning, sailors take warning," she repeated drowsily.

She was back in dreamland, where a queer old woman sat rocking, singing in a raucous voice, "John Anderson, my Jo," and as she sang she changed into a lovely young girl with a spinning wheel, who seemed inclined to speak when Rosamond became aware that the hum of the wheel was really made by a street car two blocks off.

She stretched lazily and smiled a little, thinking sleepily of the small white-and-pink room—her very own room—the "apple blossom room"—so called because when the house was built years and years before an apple tree stood in front of the east window of the room, and in its flowering season filled the little room with its fragrance. Ah, she could smell it now, though the apple tree had long since disappeared.

She began to realize that it was morning and time to wake up, and then dozed off once more. Now she was in a sleigh rapidly approaching a vertical precipice, but on the very edge, the catastrophe was averted by Ray Randall, who suddenly appeared from nowhere, remarking, "Dreams always go by contraries."

Now she was really awake, but lying with closed eyes, trying to induce another visit from Morpheus. She was contentedly happy that she had firmly resisted all the pressure brought to bear upon her when she refused to marry Mr. Comstock, the aged millionaire.

At least he was aged according to her standards. She was nineteen and he was forty-four. To be sure, he was tall, erect, elegant and learned, but there were indications of a bald spot, and he wore spectacles, the kind with big, round lenses, and he was not slim. She had always thought of him as one of her father's cronies, and the idea of marrying him made her shiver.

Once more she dozed, and this time was part of a confused dream of apple blossoms and music, and Ray Randall, and then she was suddenly wide awake, thinking of Ray.

Poor? To be sure he was. Young? Just twenty-four. Ambitious? Certainly; he already had plans about the United States senate. But she was willing to wait, willing to work, willing to efface herself, if only she might do it for Ray. In the meantime she had her own little white-and-pink room—her sanctum sanctorum—her haven in all times of stress.

Suddenly she opened her eyes and looked straight into the eyes of Mr. Burton Comstock. She was certainly in a white-and-pink room, a very large and luxurious room; a room decorated with apple blossoms, and Mr. Comstock carried a wonderful branch of them in his hand.

"My rose of the world," he said, "a penny for your dreams; they surely must have been pleasant ones."

"Yes, Burton, in a room like this, no other kind would be possible."

"And Rosamond," continued her husband, "didn't Ray Randall use to run around in your set? I see by the morning paper that he has won the election; and also his engagement to that rich widow, Mrs. Stevens. At one time I was almost jealous of him."

"And at one time," replied Rosamond, "I almost thought I did not even like you."

Burial Place of "Mother Goose."

Near the center of the older part of Boston is a large graveyard in which are buried many notable persons of the colonial days. It is a very interesting place and the old gravestones have been well-cared for. One small stone marks the grave of "Mother Goose," to whom many thousands of children have been indebted for much innocent enjoyment.

Soldier Earned Furlough.

Private James Cunningham won a 90-day furlough from Camp Dix, N. J., when he shinned up a 90-foot pole to replace a pulley that civilian workmen said could not be replaced without lowering the pole. Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall, commanding officer, was so pleased that he gave Cunningham a day's leave for every foot he shinned.

Depressing Introduction.

The chairman of a club in an Indiana city was introducing the speaker of the evening. After announcing the name of the lecturer and her subject, the chairman in conclusion said: "Last year we went in debt for account of our lectures and so this year we decided that we would have cheaper talent."

MRS. HAYDOCK SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Followed Advice of Her Druggist's Wife and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved Mrs. Haydock from an operation we cannot claim that all operations may be avoided by it, but many women have escaped operations by the timely use of this old-fashioned root and herb medicine.

VETERANS SLIP BACK TO BUSHES

GAVVY CRAVATH BUCK HERZOG LARRY DOYLE

Each season some veteran star of the diamond, his luster faded, slips back to the minors, whence he came. This year is no exception, three of the once luminaries of the National league passing out. Larry Doyle, once the idol of Gotham fans, goes to Toronto as manager; Gavvy Cravath, last year manager of the Phillies, goes to Salt Lake and Buck Herzog has been turned loose by the Chicago Cubs.

BOBBY ROTH EXPECTS TO COMPLETE CIRCUIT

Bobby Roth, the new Yankee outfielder, now can lay claim to being the most traded athlete in active harness. He has been on six American league teams up to the present time. Says Roth: "If my health holds out I guess I will make the whole circuit within another year or two." He has been playing baseball in fast company since 1911. Despite the fact that he is baseball's most traded player, Roth has always ranked as a mighty valuable asset. His hitting average is around .285. The only teams he has not played with in the American league are Detroit and St. Louis.

RACE WILL PROVE SURPRISE

Clark Griffith of Washington Does Not Believe Cleveland Will Win Again This Season.

Clark Griffith says the American league race will prove a surprise to some of the more optimistic managers this season. The Washington owner comes forth with the remark that Cleveland won't repeat and the White Sox have no chance. He adds there are four or five clubs who have a chance to cop.

GRIDIRON PLAY AIDS PLAYERS IN BUSINESS

Former Football Stars Smashing Line of Industry.

Game Teaches Tenacity of Purpose and Perseverance and is Best Business Preparation Any Young Man Could Have.

Many former stars of the college gridiron are smashing the line of industry, finance and politics with the same power they hit the football line. William H. Edwards—better known as "Big Bill"—is the biggest of the lot, physically and otherwise.

He captained Princeton's 1899 eleven and played right guard. Nobody could stop his charging. Now he's internal revenue collector for the Second district with headquarters at New York. A billion dollars passes through his hands yearly. "Big Bill" is a commander of finance now, which is one better than being a captain. And Charles E. Brickley! A greater drop-kicker never lived.

Brickley is a broker now in Wall street and worth nearly a million.

"Just like playing the game all over again," says Brickley. "You play it—not by muscle and might—but by outwitting the other fellow by fair and legitimate methods."

Clifford R. Black is another gridiron giant who is a power in New York finances. Black captained Yale's 1918 eleven. They called him "Cupid." Like Brickley, he's a broker.

Haral S. Tenney, Princeton's center in 1896, is now vice president of the Liberty National bank, New York. "Brains counted most in football," he says. "They count most in banking, too."

Walter C. Booth, who played center rush at Princeton in 1900, is a big insurance broker who's cleaning up.

"Football taught me clean play," says Booth. "It gave me tenacity of purpose and perseverance. Football is the best business preparation for any young man."

SCHOOLS TO DEVELOP STARS

Manager Mitchell of Boston Braves Says it is Only Way to Obtain Baseball Players.

Schools of baseball to solve the problem of obtaining new players in the major and minor leagues are suggested by Manager Fred Mitchell of the Boston Nationals, who predicts that such training schools will be established at all baseball parks within a few years.

"It will take time, patience and plenty of careful teaching to develop the players, but it will pay in the long run," Mitchell said. "Keep them for five years if necessary and if you get a couple of Maravilles, Hornsby or Hollochers out of the lot you are way ahead.

"Buying and selling of big league players is pretty nearly a thing of the past. The trouble is that there are not enough to go around, and managers and owners are cautious about entering into deals."

Good Manners a Business Asset.

The teaching of good manners in the public schools is being agitated in the state of New York by Dr. John H. Finley, state commissioner of education.

"Good manners," he declares, "not only lead to added friendships, social standing and progress in business, not only are one of the keys to the gates of wealth, but practice in manners is the most valuable kind of spiritual discipline."

Doctor Finley goes on to explain that training in good manners has enabled more than one person to retain his self-control in a trying situation.

"And self-control," he says, "is the edge you have on the other fellow."

Who Developed Speed Bug?

In 1882 twenty miles were first ridden within the hour. The rider was Dr. H. L. Cortis, one of the greatest English amateurs of his day. He rode a fifty-nine-inch high wheeler and the track was surfaced with cinders. It is interesting to note the progress made since Dr. Cortis first developed the speed mania. The first nine-inch high wheeler has developed into the modern, record-breaking motorcycle of today, while the twenty-miles-per-hour pace has been pushed up to the 136-miles-per-hour mark. What will be the speed record forty years from now?

CONGRESSMAN FROTHINGHAM

Louis Adams Frothingham assumed his new duties as congressman of the 14th district on March 4, when the new administration took office. It is expected that a special session will be called by the President early in April and all appearances point to a busy season well up to the time that the regular session convenes in December.

Mr. Frothingham goes into office backed by an overwhelming majority vote. He states the placing of the reins of government in the hands of the Republican party by such a decisive vote shows that the entire nation expects a complete new program. He wants to do his part, impartially and without favor in behalf of the whole of the 14th District and wants everyone in the district, man or woman, to feel free to call upon him whenever and wherever he can be of help. The more that he can do for the district to forward its affairs, the better he will like it.

The Washington Date-Line, published by the National Press club is an interesting and snappy little sheet almost a foot square. It is published "nearly every day" and we have the pleasure of receiving the Harding Hobby edition. One important article we notice is headed: "Congress will be part of the Government now."

A BEAUTIFUL WEYMOUTH

As Spring draws near everyone is made to think of the growing world of plants and the wise are thinking of what they are going to do. We who live in a comparatively country section are favored by being able to watch in nature, the ever-changing seasons and we should not regard the privilege lightly. Our forefathers who laid out the town and planted the many beautiful estates hereon, realized the wealth of pleasure which they and their descendants would derive from the wonders of nature which have been developed by man and brought within our reach. Many of us have been content with the beauties they wrought and have let the matter rest removing the dying glories of former days and neglecting to replace them with newer shrubs of slender, willowy growth, which would soon equal or surpass the former ones.

Let us be considerate. Think of those who will come after us, as our ancestors thought of us. Do not complain of the ravages wrought by the roots of the stately elms in our lawns and flower beds and hedges. The elms are one of the distinctive features of grandeur in our town and can be made to shelter beautiful lawns if nothing else.

The principals of landscape art are not hard to master. An open lawn with a foundation planting of shrubs about the house giving thought to the ultimate height, color and blooming season. Definite property lines formed, not of ugly wooden fences, but of natural growing fences of hedging plants or borders of shrubbery. These we will enjoy from our living windows.

Hide unsightly objects with a well placed tree, or ponar screen, or evergreens. Protect the home from cold north winds with the ever-shielding Norway spruce or Arbor Vitae. Cover our backyard fences with raspberries, blackberries, rambler roses, or the sweet-scented white clematis.

Every year we let planting go by is a year wasted. Have a definite ideal for your place in mind, no matter how small it is or large. Don't try to do too much at a time, unless you can well afford it, but above all, do something—anything—do it now. Don't delay a week, or a day, when you read this. Set a good example. Start the ball rolling in your neighborhood. You are the ones to benefit.

James D. Loeffler
